Miss America 1970 Michigan Beauty Wins

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) — Pamela Anne Eldred, a beautiful ballet dancer from Michigan, was named Miss America 1970 Saturday night in a pageant marked by feminist protests.

Pamela, a striking blonde with flashing green eyes, has been the lead dancer for the Detroit City Ballet since she was 13. The 21-year-old new Miss America started dancing when she was 6.

A senior at Mercy College of Detroit, Pamela aspires for a career in the Broadway musical theater after graduation. She says her singing voice is loud enough to project throughout a theater.

For her talent presentation she performed a classical ballet.

"The body is an instrument and I use it to express myself through dance," she said, adding that she has a problem: "I like to eat too much, especially sweet foods."

But it's not that much of a problem. She has an hourglass figure, 34-21-34, weighs 110 and is 5-feet-5½.

The new Miss America clasped her hand to her mouth and started crying. Then she received her royal red cape and golden crown from the outgoing queen, Judi Anne Ford of Illinois.

Before her selection, she was asked by the judges that since she has a 14-year-old sister what would she tell her if she entered the "now generation?"

"Unfortunately, Melanie is brain damaged and I couldn't give her any advice...but I would tell another girl 'just be yourself and enjoy,'" she replied.

The runners-up in order were:

Miss Ohio, Kathy Lynn Baumann, 19, of Independence.

Tied for third were Miss New Jersey, Cheryl Carter, 18, of Matawan, and Miss California, Susan Anton, 18, of Yucaipa.

Initiative Sought by Mansfield

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield urged President Nixon Saturday to propose an unlimited Vietnam cease-fire and couple it with new troop withdrawals in a new initiative to end the war.

The Montana Democrat noted in a statement that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have announced a three-day cease-fire in memory of President Ho Chi Minh and said this "should, in my opinion, be matched by a similar announcement on our part."

"Following this prelude, an initiative on our part would be possible which would propose an unlimited cease-fire and stand-down applicable to both sides."

Then, noting press reports Nixon may announce further withdrawals after he returns to Washington this week, Mansfield said "that announcement might then be tied in with the offer of an unlimited cease-fire and stand-down."

Further Reductions

"This sequence would present the possibility of a further diminution in the fighting and, consequently, a further reduction in costs, damage and, most important, casualties."

Mansfield conceded such an offer might not be accepted either openly or tacitly but "it is worth a try as a step towards resolution of the Vietnamese war."

Mansfield said "it may offer an alternative to a continuation of the status quo, with casualties accumulating at the present rate. It may offer an alternative to a step-up of the war which is a course that seems to be inadvisable in any event."

Mansfield gave the statement to reporters who asked his views on the Communists' announcement of a cease-fire in memory of President Ho.

Nelson Too

Earlier, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., had also called on Nixon to take advantage of the situation by urging a cease-fire and to follow it up with province-by-province free elections, coupled with troop withdrawals by both sides.

Meanwhile, Sen. Allen Ellender said "the North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris seem to be moving toward a compromise position on the terms of any peace settlement" but cautioned "this hope may turn out to be an illusion."

"I remain convinced," the Louisiana Democrat said, "that our forces must remain in the field until satisfactory terms can be reached with the enemy."

Terms Change

He said "the news from Paris states that the North Vietnamese government has dropped its insistence on a full-scale and immediate withdrawal of our forces."

But Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., asserted in a weekly newsletter that North Vietnamese refusal to abide by a U.S. request for humane treatment of prisoners plus its release of three prisoners "seems more like a slap in the face than a gesture towards peace."

"It should be patently clear to all Americans that North Vietnam simply does not want peace," Tower said.

Elbrick 'Safe' Kidnapers Promise To Release Envoy

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — U.S. Ambassador C. Burke Elbrick's kidnapers left a note Saturday night saying he was safe and would be freed as soon as the 15 political prisoners whose release they had demanded arrive safely in Mexico.

The kidnapers' note, accompanied by a letter from the ambassador, was found in front of a Rio magazine office as 13 of the 15 prisoners were en route to Mexico aboard a slow flying Brazilian air force C130 transport plane.

The plane was to stop in Recife and Belem to pick up the two other prisoners, and was expected to arrive in Mexico City about noon today.

Elbrick's letter, addressed to his wife, Elvira, said he was all right and hoped to be freed soon.

The kidnapers had threatened to kill the veteran 61-year-old diplomat, who was abducted Thursday, if the country's military junta refused to carry out the swap.

They had first promised to free him within 12 hours after word was received from Mexico of the prisoners' safe arrival, but the latest note said he would be freed as soon as word was received.

"We are very happy," said a U.S. Embassy spokesman. He added that Foreign Minister Jose de Magalhaes Pinto had personally conveyed the news to Minister William Belton, No. 2 man at the embassy.

"Everything is taken care of by the air force and the Foreign Ministry," Magalhaes Pinto's announcement said.

The minister said the four-engined plane with yellow and green Brazilian markings on its tail had left from Rio's Galeao International Airport.

Tension had mounted in U.S. circles here as word of the prisoners' departure was awaited.

Shortly before the passing of the deadline, Magalhaes Pinto announced "what we can say is that all measures aimed at carrying out the government's decision are under way."

The government agreed Friday to fly 14 men and one woman to sanctuary in Mexico.

Earlier in the day, the three military ministers who are acting as a caretaker junta for all of Brazil met for three hours to discuss how they would carry out their side of the agreement.

Neil A. Armstrong, the first man on the moon, returned to his birthplace, Wapakoneta, in the rolling farm land of western Ohio, and made a plea for his countrymen to make this planet "a better place for all mankind."

Fellow moonwalker Col. Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. went back to Montclair, N.J., a comfortable suburb 15 miles from New York City, and told his greeters the Earth view from the moon has a "beauty of its own we have yet to see anywhere else in the universe."

Col. Michael Collins, who

stayed in moon orbit with the Apollo command ship told crowds in his adopted hometown of New Orleans, "I feel like I belong."

Back from the moon, back from the tumult and ticker tape of official welcomes in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, it was a day for the neighbors to honor the hometown boys.

Armstrong, the 39-year-old astronaut who stepped into history when he set foot on the moon at 10:56 p.m. EDT, July 21, came home to a town of only 7,500 that was once the principal village and council house of the Shawnees.

"I find it difficult to believe," Armstrong told newsmen, "anyone could see the sights I was privileged to see and the views I was shown on my travel and not be most aware of the power of the Supreme Being and His art work."

Then Armstrong spoke to more than 2,000 cheering teenagers, and told them that a constellation named Aquarius—the name of a song popular with the young people—was used in the lunar flight navigation.

"Some of you have a fan song that has become a fan song of mine," he said.

Down from Ohio, at the other end of the great American river, Mike Collins, sun-tanned and beaming, walked along an airport fence shaking hands with some of the hundreds who turned out.

"I don't feel like I'm really adopted," he said. "I feel like I belong in New Orleans."

Collins was born in Europe, but his father, the late Maj. Gen. James Lawton Collins, was a native of New Orleans and the astronaut received his appointment to the Military Academy through a Louisiana congressman.

Back East, Buzz Aldrin came home to the one and two-family homes of the quiet Newark suburb of Montclair, where he was given a hero's welcome in 1966 after a Gemini spaceflight. Mayor Mat Carter described Saturday's homecoming as "the greatest day we've ever had."

Aldrin a star athlete voted "most likely to succeed" at Montclair High School in 1947, said his father was the one man who did the most to make him able to fly the Apollo 1 mission.

"I can only express hope," he continued, "that the apparent unifying effect that this flight has had for mankind will be reflected as we carry good will around the world on the tour."

"We look at the moon from the Earth, we look at it from a very secure vantage point, one that is rather comfortable."

When we looked at the moon from the space module... it was a panorama of beauty being unfolded to us."

At Armstrong's gathering of his Wapakoneta high school classmates, Mrs. Weber recalled that she used to sit across a desk from the astronaut.

"When I needed him on the mathematics," she said, "he was always there."

Comedian Bob Hope and Gov. James A. Rhodes headed a parade for Armstrong as thousands of visitors 8 and 10 deep lined much of the 2½-mile route despite heavy humidity.

Hilbert Soldier Killed in War

HILBERT — Army Pvt. John Willems, 21, was killed in action in Vietnam Wednesday, his family was informed Saturday. Willems was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Willems Sr., route 1. His wife is the former Diane Kleinhans of Hilbert.

Willems was attached to the 19th Light Infantry Division. He had been in Vietnam since December. A graduate of Stockbridge High School, he worked for Ariens Co. in Brillion before joining the Army.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

Foregone Conclusion U.S. Formally Recognizes Faceless Leaders of Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States announced formal recognition Saturday of Libya's new revolutionary junta and voiced hope for continued "close ties" with the oil-rich Arab land astride North Africa's Mediterranean coast.

President Nixon's decision to establish diplomatic relations with the anonymous leaders who overthrew King Idris Sept. 1 came almost as a foregone conclusion, despite some U.S. qualms about what the future may hold.

Britain, France and Italy also announced recognition during the day. And earlier in the week Egypt and other Arab states, and communist countries including the Soviet Union which is expanding its influence in the area, had been quick to set up diplomatic links.

Some 38 U.S. oil companies have interests in Libya, a prime petroleum source for West Europe. And a large American air base at Wheelus, five miles from the capital of Tripoli, provided training for U.S. pilots stationed in Europe.

There was little doubt about the new Revolutionary Command Council's control over the country. The 79-year-old king was in Greece and indicated he would not fight the coup.

Sunshine Likely To Filter Through

Fox Cities — Partly cloudy and cooler today and tonight. High today near 74, low tonight near 50. Winds north-west at 6-12 m.p.h. Precipitation probability 20 per cent today, 10 per cent tonight.

Appleton — Observations at 9 p.m. Saturday for the preceding 12 hours: high 83, low 67. Barometer 29.92 and steady. Winds west-southwest at 8-15 m.p.h. Dew point 52 degrees. Humidity 61 per cent. No precipitation.

Sun sets at 7:20 p.m., rises Monday at 6:24 a.m. Moon rises at 2:48 a.m.

Washington officials stressed that the revolutionary regime had promised to respect all international agreements and oil company rights. They reported no harm to the approximately 9,000 Americans in Libya. They said oil tankers are plying in and out.

The revolutionary regime's pledge presumably includes continuing the agreement on Wheelus, the officials said. The base has been operated since 1954 for rocketry, gunnery and bombing practice over uninhabited desert stretches in the clear weather there not easily found in Europe.

The existing U.S.-Libyan agreement on Wheelus expires in 1970 and the Idris government had earlier indicated a reluctance to renew the pact. U.S. training flights have been suspended since the coup.

Washington officials said U.S. relations had been good with officers of the new regime and they hoped past warm relations would continue.

Science Reveals the Real You

SCIENTISTS are interested in more than outer space and laser beams. They are interested in you. As a matter of fact, nothing is researched more than the human personality—with some surprising findings. Here are some of them:

The way you adjust your color television reveals your nature.

Dr. Max Leuscher of the Institute of Psycho-Diagnostic Medicine says if you like the red tones on your color tv heightened, you are self-confident and full of physical vitality. Increasing the blues indicates tranquility and impassivity. Too much yellow indicates an optimistic nature.

Your sleep habits reveal your outlook on life.

A group of behavioral scientists

says that if you sleep on your side curled up like a cat, you're probably a lonely person who needs protection. The flat-on-his-back sleeper is happy with himself and his accomplishments. The side sleeper is a very complex person who is apt to look at life negatively, and the face downward snoozer is exhibiting stubbornness and negativity. There's even an answer for the bed hog who pushes the partner so far he or she must cling to the mattress to keep from falling. They are just expressing feelings of aggression against their mates, say the researchers.

The number of times you use a seat belt is connected with your attitudes, wealth, and education.

A University of Michigan report disclosed that you are more likely to use your seat belt if you have a generally approving attitude toward modern science, if you have substantial cash savings, and if you are well-educated and have health insurance, too.

A man's preference for women is a key to his personality.

Psychologists Jerry Wiggins and his wife Nancy of the University of Illinois say men who prefer girls with large bosoms tend to be more social than those who prefer their gals with smaller ones. The guys who like long-legged girls are usually relatively passive and seldom drink. Those who lean toward shorter-legged women generally are interested in social activities.

The shape of a woman's legs gives clues to her character.

Elizabeth Coope, working at the Aston University in Birmingham, England, says if a woman has fat knees that knock, she'd better cover them up. No sense telling everyone she's addle-headed. Piano legs divulge that she is somewhat unimaginative but fabulously efficient. If, however, her legs are heavy but well-shaped, she gives away the fact that she's conceited and vastly capable, but, alas, lazy. Long legs indicate the sexy type; thin and well-shaped appendages tell people she's sure of herself and knows "what it's all about."

PROVEN ON THE INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY
— and finally released to the public!

Yes, proven at Indianapolis — proven in the same test laboratories used by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler — proven by the world's largest automobile fleet owners! An exciting new scientific "breakthrough" that means . . . no matter what kind of gas you use . . . no matter what kind of car you own you can now pile up 100 miles of driving a week, month after month and fill your gas-tank as little as once a month . . . pile up 100 miles of driving a day all 365 days of the year . . . and save up to 500 gallons of gas each year!

NOW! 30 DAYS OF DRIVING ON A SINGLE TANK OF GAS!

— even more startling, now save up to $16 a month, up to 50 gallons of gas each month, without changing a single part on your car!

Laboratory reports . . . PLUS road tests conducted on Indianapolis proving grounds reveal you may now get as much as 37 miles of driving from each gallon of gas . . . save up to 50 gallons of gas each month . . . save up to $200 in gasoline cost each year!

Six months ago, for perhaps the first time in history, the United States Government issued patent protection to an invention that has been classified ILLEGAL! Sound strange? Not really here's why. I'm sure you're familiar with the famous gasoline-economy tests run by all the major oil companies. Well, do you know that the remarkable new invention described on this page is actually banned from these tests because it is TOO EFFECTIVE! Do you know that because this invention saves so much gasoline . . . that because it gives so much economy, it is actually ILLEGAL for a test-driver to fit one on his car! And do you know that because it boosts gasoline mileage up to 11 more miles per gallon . . . it has actually been OUTLAWED in every recognized cross-country economy run simply because the officials who conduct these tests were forced to rule that it gives all cars that have it AN UNFAIR ADVANTAGE!

In other words, if you are a person planning on entering one of these cross-country economy runs . . . then this message is not for you. YOU JUST WON'T BE ALLOWED TO USE THIS NEW INVENTION—SORRY BUT IT'S SIMPLY ILLEGAL BUT — if you are a person who is not interested in setting any records . . . who is only interested in getting more miles per gallon than you ever dreamed possible — and doing it the very same way that many of America's leading corporations are doing at this very moment — then what you are about to read is perhaps the most thrilling and exciting news in automotive history!

TEST DRIVERS REPORT UP TO 11 MORE MILES PER GALLON —

The name of this great new invention is the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER . . . and there is no better way to describe to you the increased performance and economy it will give you . . . than to tell you of the "bombshell effect" it had on research scientists and test-drivers who simply refused to believe their own gasoline gauges when they first tried it out. Look

CUTS GASOLINE COSTS TO AS LITTLE AS 1¢ A MILE

1. When the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER was first tested by the same research laboratories used by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler . . . results were so overwhelming (a staggering increase of up to 68 per cent) . . . it actually lowered gasoline costs to as little as ONE CENT A MILE.

2. When tests were made by the world's leading auto rental system with this incredible money saving invention . . . and then test-run on the road and on such world famous proving grounds as the Indianapolis Speedway . . . the test-drivers of these vehicles were absolutely amazed to see big 8 cylinder sedans get better gas-mileage than small European economy cars!

3. When large fleet owners and some of the nation's largest taxi fleets tested this great new invention to determine just how much gas it would save them . . . the results were so dramatic that within 30 days they reported savings of not hundreds but thousands of gallons of gas the very first month alone!

UP TO 500 MILES OF DRIVING FROM A SINGLE TANK OF GAS

Yes, from test after test . . . road tests, laboratory tests, tests by some of the world's most famous drivers . . . come re-

Yes, from one of the nation's largest automobile fleet owners comes the most dramatic proof of all. A company that spends more money on gasoline in one weekend than the average person spends in a lifetime . . . they tested this incredible new invention and here is what they found: BOOSTED GASOLINE MILEAGE A WHOPPING 32% ON ALL CARS TESTED. Wouldn't you like to save up to $200 a year on your car? ports of cars that drive for hundreds and hundreds of miles ON A SINGLE TANK OF GAS! Reports of test cars from Ford, General Motors, Chrysler that get more miles per gallon today than when they were brand new! Reports of big, luxury sedans that weigh 2½ times more than small European cars . . . yet get better mileage, better performance and huge dollar savings thanks to this new miracle invention

IF IT WORKS SUCH MILEAGE-MIRACLES, HOW COME THE CAR MANUFACTURERS HAVEN'T INSTALLED THIS TYPE UNIT IN THEIR CARS? — THE ANSWER IS THAT TWO ALREADY HAVE!

By now you are probably wondering just what is the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER . . . and how does it work? Well to make a long story short . . . if you were to look under the hood of one of those $20,000 European luxury cars like the Maserati or the Aston-Martin, you would see sitting in those engines . . . a special gasoline unit . . . especially designed to extract more blazing power, more energy from each gallon of gasoline. This remarkable booster-unit is what gives these cars such magnificent performance . . . such TOTAL POWER . . . such increased engine efficiency.

And this is precisely what the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER is designed to do — enable your engine to extract more piston-driving power, more raw, blazing energy and more gasoline economy . . .

ONLY, instead of costing $100 to $150 (like the European booster-units) . . . the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER costs but a mere fraction.

That's because after years of intensive research automotive experts have finally found a way to simplify these booster units . . . reduce the number of parts in each unit . . . mass produce them . . . slash costs to a mere fraction . . . and make them available at a price so low it's almost too ridiculous to mention. Why do you realize what this means to you if you are a person who is determined to save yourself up to $16 a month on your gas bills . . . up to 50 gallons of gas each month . . . yes up to $200 a year on wasted gasoline

INSTALLS IN MINUTES — PAYS FOR ITSELF IN AS LITTLE AS 15 DAYS!

It means that no matter what kind of car you now have . . . no matter how old that car may be . . . no matter what condition it is in . . . no matter how many miles you pile on each month . . . here at last is the automotive discovery you've long dreamed about . . . and has now come true. Because from this day on you too can now save up to 500 gallons of gas each and every year. NOW you too can drive for weeks and weeks on end without ever stopping at a service station. Now you too can drive across 6 states of the union on just a single tank of gas, blaze a trail from New York to Chicago on just 2 or 3 tankfuls. In other words, perform mileage miracles that only yesterday you thought were impossible.

So if you too want to achieve the same wondrous results as America's largest automotive fleet owners, by Indianapolis test-drivers, and by research scientists at the very same testing laboratories used by Ford, Chrysler and General Motors, then take advantage of this special Free-Trial introductory offer. Remember, all you risk is the few minutes it takes to fill out the special reservation coupon below, and you have a lifetime of driving convenience and economy to gain.

THIS OFFER EXPIRES IN 15 DAYS — YOU MUST ACT NOW!

FIRST TIME OFFERED TO THE CONSUMER!

The Patented Formula that Cleans, Polishes and Protects with a Plastic Coat

AND WILL LAST ALMOST A YEAR!

Live the Good Life with the exclusive plastic liquid that cleans as it glistens, shines as it seals, and protects as it lasts...and it lasts almost a year with just one coat. Six different formulas by Plasticon were carefully designed to protect just about everything you love in your house, both inside and out. If you hate the monthly and sometimes weekly job of scrubbing, rubbing, polishing, waxing—and who doesn't—you'll love the Plasticon formulas that will save you work and money while restoring your furniture, your home furnishing, your car to the just-bought look that made you select that item originally. And Plasticon is guaranteed to keep it that way for unbelievably long periods of time under all sorts of conditions...like shore living, or winter slush, or dirty air.

Plasticon, the exclusive formula, is approved by The National Testing Laboratories and has been accepted and used by Federal Agencies.

Plasticon works like nothing else you've ever tried. It cleans a surface and fills the pores with a "glass-like" coating to shut out dirt, grime and even harsh chemicals. Here are the six revolutionary formulas. You'll find a use for every one of them:

1. PLASTICON FOR GLASS—Use it on windows, mirrors, crystal, and watch it smooth the surface so that it actually repels dirt and dust particles so that even a simple wiping brings it back to a perfect sparkle.

2. PLASTICON FOR FURNITURE—Cleans, restores, and protects fine wood furniture, finished wall panels and varnished, lacquered or painted wood cabinets. Protects against water and liquor stains.

3. PLASTICON FOR CARS—A car lover's delight—cleans, restores and plastic coats the entire car's paint and metal trim. Forget compounding, waxing, chrome, polishing and even tar removal. The harshest detergents won't wash it away. And even living at the shore or driving under winter road salt conditions, won't get through the Plasticon seal.

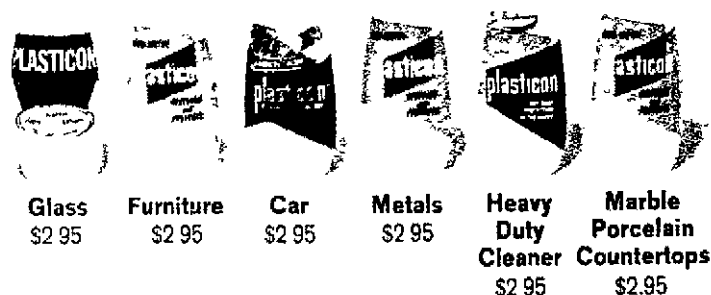

4. PLASTICON FOR METALS—This formula covers aluminum, brass, bronze, stainless and chrome. It will clean and remove tarnish oxidation, corrosion and rust. Provides that show-room shine for all these metals wherever they're used.

5. PLASTICON—HEAVY DUTY CLEANER—Formulated for hard stains and scuff marks on enamel painted surfaces, porcelain tile and even pitted aluminum. Will remove even ink markings on these surfaces and seal them against similar damage.

6. PLASTICON FOR MARBLE, PORCELAIN AND COUNTER TOPS—You'll never worry about these expensive surfaces once you've used Plasticon. And this works even in the bathroom. Like all our formulas, there is no excessive build-up, no matter how much you use, and it will not peel, crack or yellow!

All cans come in a big 7 ounce size (except car Plasticon which is 8 ounces). This is a full 7 ounces, more than enough to do the biggest job. All formulas are guaranteed not to crack, peel, chip, discolor or wash away or we'll give you your money back.

Appliances Step Up to the Space Age!

By ROSALYN ABREVAYA

West Bend's ultra-deluxe humidifier, with exclusive solid-state sensor system, precisely regulates a home's humidity. Comes with a cover to top vent when unit is not being used.

WITH MEN flying to the moon and tolerating tight quarters to get there, we earthlings are experiencing similar living restrictions—not to mention less time to do all we want.

Now, it's a treat to learn, one segment of our economy is trying to solve these problems with new appliances.

What's happening with the majors and the minors—the large, usually stationary, appliances such as refrigerators, ovens, and dishwashers and the smaller, portable appliances?

Big, bold innovations are happening in both categories—in the splash of color, ingenious design, more specialized appliances for our burgeoning leisure life, and in the trend toward the do-more-than-one-chore or one-step combination appliance.

And you don't have to orbit the moon to own them. Those pictured here are available, or will soon be, at your appliance dealer or department store. ♦

A uniquely designed laundry center combines in a single cabinet a shoulder-height electric dryer and an automatic washer. The space-saving combination is ideal for home areas too small for standard-size equipment, in or near bedroom, bathroom, closet. Has setting for permanent press loads. Frigidaire.

Broil chops, chicken, or thin bacon, on both sides at once, in Presto's vertical broiler. Two-position rack is chrome-plated, easy to clean. No smoke or spatter. In avocado and chrome.

A product of the space age, Dominion's electronic Toastron toasts everything from sandwiches to the thinnest waffles by simply adjusting a lever. It can even rewarm your toast without burning or darkening.

Salton's electric Hotray keeps food warm until everyone is seated. Its swivel bin can be removed to oven for defrosting. For beverages, a "hot spot" gives added heat.

Press the dispensers for ice cubes or chilled water in G.E.'s 23.5 cu. ft. Americana side-by-side refrigerator. Wheels out for cleaning. Freezer holds up to 295 pounds. In colors or white, model is completely frost-free.

GI Wives Who Wait—and Serve

ACROSS AMERICA today thousands of women watch the mail for a letter from a husband in Vietnam—and wait for him to come home.

Some of these women, however, wait with a difference—they wear Army green like their husbands and serve their country while waiting.

A number of these wives-who-wait-in-uniform are stationed at the Women's Army Corps Center, Fort McClellan, Ala., the home of the WAC near Anniston, Ala.

A waiting wife may be like 20-year-old Sp/4 Clare Nelson, who had been married only a week when her husband left for Vietnam. Or she may be a career officer like Maj. Anne H. Hudnall, whose husband Vernon, also a career officer and a major, is on his second tour, flying helicopters in the combat zones.

The waiting is no easier for these wives in uniform than for any others. Clare is a clerk in WAC Center headquarters. At the end of the day, she thinks of Edwin beginning another day halfway around the world as she watches the flag float down the staff to the notes of retreat.

Back in the barracks, she and other

WAC wives exchange news, pass around pictures, and work on hobbies. Sp/4 Natalie Laird crochets an afghan; Sp/5 Patricia Bacina of Eugene, Ore., trains a hunting dog; Capt. Veda D. Manley is troop leader of a Brownie Scout group.

Though days may be filled with duties, lonely evenings in the barracks or quarters are time for writing letters, recording taped messages, and wrapping packages. And they think of the two most important dates in their year of waiting. The first is that R&R (rest and recreation leave) meeting with their husbands in Hawaii, which Veda Manley called "the fastest six days of my life."

The second important day is when their men come back. Till then, they wait—and they serve. ♦

Sp/5 Patricia Bacina explains lesson to typing student in clerical school. Her husband, serving in Vietnam, also is a Sp/5.

Maj. Anne Hudnall has a special interest in Huey helicopters. Her husband, a major, too, whose picture stands on shelf, flies such a chopper in Vietnam.

FREE BOOK tells how these people—and hundreds of others—got started in this Big Money business. Send for your copy now.

Let me give you the same start I gave these men!

In one way, the big earnings reported here might be called exceptional. In another way, there is nothing exceptional about them. That's because any man who will follow instructions and is willing to work at his own Duraclean business should be able to do as well under similar conditions.

Each of the men quoted here had talents and abilities different from those of all the rest. But each had one thing in common—a desire to win personal independence in a business of his own. And each man took five identical steps to reach his goal.

1. Each one read an announcement such as you are reading now. 2. He wrote for complete information. 3. He read the literature we sent him. 4. He gained new confidence in himself and the belief that he could succeed with Duraclean. 5. He accepted our offer to help him get started. Later, he wrote to tell us about his success.

In each case, remember, the first step was to write to Duraclean for information. If you would like to own a business of your own, why don't you do as these men did—right now.

When I hear from you, I will send you facts about the Duraclean Franchise that will open your eyes. You will see why a Franchise business such as ours makes success for the individual the rule rather than the exception.

The Duraclean home service business has been tried and tested. The market for Duraclean Service is tremendous—and growing. The methods that lead to success have been clearly charted. When an ambitious man follows these methods, success is the logical result.

Some Franchise businesses require investments as high as $50,000. With ours, you can get started for less than a $1000 and we finance the balance. Monthly payments are so small that the profits on less than one day's service can cover your payment for the entire month. Even with this small investment and operating as a one man business, your potential is $250.00 a week net profit. With two men working for you 35 hours a week, you should gross a profit of $420.00. Allowing 20% for advertising and incidentals, the net would amount to $336.00.

The most important part of Duraclean home service is cleaning rugs, carpets and upholstered furniture by a revolutionary modern process known as the "Absorption Method." You do the work right in the customer's premises. No harsh scrubbing with motor-driven brushes. No soaking. Instead, an aerated foam loosens the dirt and holds it in suspension until removed. A test conducted by an impartial laboratory showed that the modern Absorption Method removed twice as much dirt as was removed by old fashioned machine scrubbing.

If you are tired of working for others or of jumping from one proposition to another—if you have a real yearning for independence in a business of your own—then send for "The Duraclean Route to Success." There is no obligation—no charge. No salesman will call to high pressure you. Send for the book now. Read it. Then if you want to take the next step toward independence, you can write to me and let me give you the same help I've given so many other successful men.

Honest Abe Look-Alike Is Celebrity

Eery Resemblance
Astounds Friends,
Delights Mr. Abram

PLAINVILLE, Conn. (AP) —
Erhardt Carl Abram has a mole

The mole is remarkable only because Abraham Lincoln also had a mole on his right cheek,
and Abram looks almost exactly like Abraham.

The 60-year-old officer worker decided to grow a Lincoln-esque beard for a centennial celebration in this quiet town in June.
That decision has made life an unexpected adventure.

"We were nearly mobbed on our first day at Mt. Rushmore," relates Abram, who returned recently with his wife from a vacation trip across the northern states and into Canada.

"In New Salem, Ill., people
spotted me even when I was driving the station wagon
through town. They would shout: 'Hey, Abe! How're you doing today?' Then they followed me into shops, grocery stores, everywhere."

At Mt. Rushmore, where Lincoln's visage is cut into stone with those of four other presidents, college students gathered around the Plainville couple, taking photos and asking questions.

Abram's similarity to the lanky 16th president is not a new discovery. The town fathers chose him more than 50 years ago as an eighth-grader to read the Gettysburg Address at a Memorial Day ceremony.

But the heads really began to turn last March when friends at the ball-bearing plant office
where he works talked him into growing a beard.

Abram is tall and slim, just two inches short of Lincoln's 6-foot-4 frame. His face is angular, not as dark as Lincoln's but heavily lined about the mouth in the same way. Thick eyebrows and a prominent forehead help
fill out the image.

The beard completed the likeness—one so strong that Abram himself wonders.

"I don't believe in reincarnation. But there are so many similarities that sometimes I'm not so sure," he says.

The resemblance of Abram to the traditional portraits of Lincoln give new acquaintances a strange feeling of being taken back 100 years. And the similarities continue beyond the visual aspect.

Take Mrs. Abram, for example. Her name is Marion; Mrs.
Lincoln was Mary. Abram was born in 1909 and Lincoln in 1809.
Both wore a size 7½ hat. Both men sired only sons—the Abrams have two and the Lincolns had two at the same stage
in life, although two others died
at young ages.

Abram has a standing invitation to live in Springfield, Ill.,
any time he wishes.

"They wanted me to walk the streets of Springfield at midnight as Lincoln was supposed to have done," he says. But the
short stop, not because they weren't having the time of their lives but "because we couldn't stand the 100-degree heat."

Back at their white clapboard house, Abram now answers to the name Carl instead of the customary Carl.

Nearly everyone in town was delighted to have a Lincoln in their 100-year celebration.
Abram became the star of the historical skit which went on every night, and he won the contest for Lincoln-style beards.

The only unappreciative comment he received came from a local policeman. The officer asked him to stay away from traffic while wearing his Lincoln tie and tails because he was causing accidents.

Abram says he doesn't plan to shave off the beard right away.
And with retirement coming up,
he and his wife have fun joking
about the possibility of a television appearance or a movie contract in Hollywood.

"He's getting too popular for me," Marion Abram adds with a smile. "All those glamorous women..."

Sex Education

The subject of sex education in the public schools is being debated with much emotion throughout the land today, and this area is no exception. Witness the People's Forum. But as with any emotional discussion there is often more heat than light generated.

It is unfortunate that the label of "sex education" has been put on such programs. A more appropriate term is "family life education." What the sponsors of such educational programs are really trying to do is equip our young people to be better husbands and wives and parents. And the increasing trend today toward earlier marriages certainly poses a strong case for such preparation.

The question, then, is where young people should be given such training.

From an ideal standpoint, the home rates first priority. Traditionally children have learned about family life from the example of their own family. And this is right and proper in families where a healthy attitude toward the realities of life is combined with religious faith to produce a sound family atmosphere.

But what about children of what sociologists refer to today as "inadequate parents"? These are not limited to broken homes. And they cannot be classified by economic strata.

The church is also proposed as an instrument for family life education, and certainly one of the most important objectives of organized religion should be to strengthen the family unit, which is the basic social unit of our entire society.

But again, what about the children of parents who do not participate in church affairs?

Or what about turning this education over to priests and nuns of the Catholic faith who have taken vows of chastity? This is part of what the current ferment is all about in the Catholic Church.

More and more we are coming to the conclusion that the schools must take over the responsibilities for the total education of children from parents who evade or avoid those responsibilities.

It may be argued that parents should be forced by law to shoulder their responsibilities to their children, but we must face the reality that this simply does not work. The terrible carnage on the highways has led us to require that youngsters learn how to drive a car from government authorities rather than their parents. It is a fact today that obtaining a driver's license requires much more preparation than receiving a marriage license.

Even the most extreme opponents of family life education concede that the schools have a role to play, along with family and church. Their attack is centered on the materials being used or proposed to be used in the classroom.

Gov. Ronald Reagan has recently signed a law in California which carries out the objectives of the John Birch Society and other right-wingers on this subject. It provides that parents may withdraw their children from sex education classes, and that materials proposed to be used in such classes must first be approved by the parents.

The administrative impossibilities of the latter procedure are immediately apparent. Can you imagine a school administration distributing proposed classroom materials to parents of all children scheduled to take the classes, and then being able to use only those materials to which no parent objected? The California law effectively prohibits sex education in the schools by subterfuge.

We trust school administrations and faculties to choose the classroom materials for courses such as history and economic and sociology, all of which may have a great effect on molding the minds of students. There has been no public outcry that parents should have the right of review of such materials.

This distrust of professional educators on the subject of family life education makes no sense. We must suspect that it is promoted by people who have abnormal views on the subject of sex.

to vote away their rights. Their leaders consider the current regulation as something of a safeguard against the massive power of the large, industrial nations such as the United States and the Soviet Union. Of course it is no such thing since resolutions are not likely to have a great deal of influence over the more powerful nations, however much they may actually reflect world public opinion, and often they do not.

The United Nations continues to be a useful forum for discussion and, through its many agencies, a means of working toward less discrimination, more concern for human rights and an effective way of improving health conditions in some parts of the world. There is little to indicate that it can develop very soon into the type of organization some of its founders envisioned, with both the will and the strength to preserve peace and insure justice.

Now paperback rights have sold and reportedly 18 movie companies are interested in the film, which its compiler calls "junk." He adds, "It just goes to show there's no accounting for taste."

An age is reflected — in one way or another — in its literature, and if this is true, Naked Came the Stranger is a disturbing prognosis. But as long as a hoax of such a dimension can be conceived and executed, and since it should make intelligent people consider their reading habits, it is worth the painful admission to see the truth exposed in a humorous way.

But if the proposed sequel, Stranger Than Naked, sells as well as the first hoax, then we'll be forced to stop laughing.

Two Classes of U.N. Membership

United States Ambassador to the United Nations Charles Yost has proposed that there be two classes of members in the international organization and that the tiny countries, which have been applying for admission, be designated as ministates without the same voting rights as larger and more affluent nations.

There have been such proposals in the past especially that nations with extremely small populations and limited finances be restricted in voting rights. Ever since the U.N. was formed, every nation has had one vote in the General Assembly no matter what its size or annual contributions or whether the subject at issue might directly concern that particular state.

But it is highly unlikely that a change will be made in the U.N. since the Afro-Asian nations, many of them small and poor, already have the majority of votes in the General Assembly and are hardly likely

Is Our Age Reflected in Its Literature?

Much could be written about the recent disclosure that a bad sex novel which has become a best seller is an elaborate hoax to prove that a book doesn't have to be good for the American public to buy a lot of copies.

But at this point we are unsure whether to laugh or cry. Probably emotions consisting of a mixture of both are most appropriate.

Naked Came the Stranger was written by 24 persons who each contributed a chapter which "had to be very commercial and very sexy." "True excellence in writing will be penciled into oblivion," the compiler warned, calling for "unremitting emphasis on sex." The project from a humorous angle proved its point. "Some of the chapters were too good and had to be

The Worker-Housing Shortage

It was encouraging to learn that Governor Knowles' operational cabinet will discuss the twin problems of worker-housing shortages in the Fox River Valley in the near future. The cabinet will have before it a report from the State Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations that more than 3,000 persons are needed to fill existing jobs in the area.

There is some difference of opinion among industry spokesmen here over the figure, but the significant import of the study is that the shortage of workers is directly tied to a shortage of low cost housing. Joseph Fagan, chairman of the department, says the Valley has a deficit of at least 2,000 living units.

Because of the housing shortage, industries must restrict their recruitment to the area within commuting distance of their plants.

There are other areas of the state and of Upper Michigan which have surplus workers. In addition to hard core unemployed in the Milwaukee area, there are many employable workers available in the north-west part of the state and in Upper Michigan.

The state report speaks only of current jobs going unfilled in the Valley. But the situation is much more serious than that. Future expansion of local industry must be conditioned on the employment situation. And efforts of Valley communities to attract any new industry are currently useless because of the worker-housing shortages.

Everybody Talks of Torinus, Don't Do Anything About It

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

There's nothing safer to talk about than politics or the weather, said the old philosopher, and last Sunday night John Torinus chose the safer road for his weekly talk to the children. Being over 12, however, I failed to glean any sparks of enlightenment from the (could it be facetious, satire being too strong a word) editorial. With the many problems of today's world — Vietnam, generation gap, Red China, racism — can't the time be devoted to something more important than delusions of grandeur?

Then in a previous week Mr. Torinus spent the public's time to justify his habit of smoking, with complete lack of logic as usual. Must we continue to be subjected to this personalism?

Everybody talks about Torinus, but no one does anything about him.

Death of Ho Chi Minh Gives Nixon Chance to Make New Proposals

BY JOSEPH KRAFT

WASHINGTON — The death of Ho Chi Minh is an event of far greater significance than suggested by the cautious speculation about the succession in Hanoi. For even though the succession has probably been arranged in advance, the passing of Ho alters one of the basic terms in the equation of world politics.

If nothing else, Hanoi's timetable in the war becomes subject to change and its relations with Peking and Moscow open to adjustment. And, now more than ever, President Nixon has a chance to show whether he is prepared, as his closest advisers claim, to be bold and generous in the cause of peace.

Ho's special importance is written in the history of his country. For 50 years he dreamed dreams of a unified Communist Vietnam. When he began, the very thought of a Vietnam was a form of madness. He persisted through difficulties that would have turned off Job — upheavals in the Communist world that shook all his contemporaries from office and two international negotiations that barked him of fruits won on the field of battle.

INTERNATIONAL PRESTIGE

In the course of this struggle Ho acquired an international prestige unmatched in the Communist world, and maybe even the world at large. When Leonid Brezhnev was still an indifferent student of land management in the Ukraine, Ho was getting to know Lenin and Trotsky in Moscow. While Mao Tse-tung was an obscure provincial leader of a failed insurrection, Ho was cutting a figure in Stalin's international Communist movement. And while Richard Nixon was being demobilized as a junior naval officer, Ho was negotiating national independence with General de Gaulle.

Ho's international prestige was not a patch on his national stature. Men have died by the thousands with his name on their lips. He was known throughout North and South Vietnam as Uncle Ho, or the Venerable Ho. He combined, in other words, a prime claim to national leadership with a spiritual quality. He came on as the Gandhi of his country as well as the George Washington — the "yogi and the commissar," as Jean La-Couture wrote in his superb biography.

At least two major currents of policy flowed from Ho's exceptional role. For one thing, the unification of Vietnam was a supreme personal mission — a fixed and unchangeable goal. The course towards that goal was held — and proudly, almost exultantly, held — despite the fell pressures mounted against Hanoi by the mightiest of world powers. It was held — subject to no postponement and little flexibility — even after the American position softened considerably.

Secondly, thanks to his prestige, Ho bowed neither to China nor to Russia, but, on the contrary, exploited tension between them to his own advantage. "Nothing," he used to say, "is so dear to the Vietnamese as independence and dignity."

There is no reason to think that the men who take over from Ho in Hanoi will move dramatically from his course. The Big Four — Premier Pham Van Dong, Party Secretary Le Du'an, Assembly Chairman Truong Chinh, and Defense Minister Vo Nguyen

Kraft

Giap — have been Ho's men for decades. His frailty and age were no secret, and the successors had probably been planning against the day of his passing for years.

SUCCESSION WORKED OUT

Many details — the last appearance of Ho early in June, the sudden disappearance from Paris of the chief peace negotiator, Le Duc Tho, on July 9, the announcement of an illness stretching back "several weeks" — suggest that the point of crisis in Ho's condition came some time ago. It is not unreasonable to suppose that the succession has already been worked out — perhaps with Ho himself approving the terms.

Still, the disappearance of Ho alters the time frame around a settlement of the Vietnamese problem. Gone is Hanoi's hope of crowning Ho's career with unification achieved. In addition, there has presumably been avoided, by pre-settlement, a leadership struggle which would paralyze all negotiations. There is room for a new element of flexibility in the position of the other side.

The more so because of the impact of Ho's passing on Moscow and Peking. A central element in the feeling that caused Peking and Moscow to court Hanoi is now out of the way. Instead of managing China and Russia, North Vietnam may find itself subordinated to the Sino-Soviet struggle — perhaps to the point of being unsupported by Russia and subject to being taken in tow by China. Thus to preserve their own independence, Ho's successors will have reason to be more forthcoming in the peace talks.

But the initiative will have to come from the United States. North Vietnam is too tiny, its sense of itself too weak, particularly with Ho no longer around, to do anything that might in the most remote degree be construed as suing for peace.

It is up to Mr. Nixon to seize the moment. For the second time in his career he has been given a second chance. He now has the chance to make proposals that are generous as well as cute, the chance to stop playing hard to get, the chance to go for big gains with big chips — the chance to make good on the opportunity missed when he first became President.

Repressed Parent of Eight Children Gives Answer on Sex Education

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

As a repressed parent of eight children I would like to comment on the letters by W. H. Page that appeared in this column on August 24 and 31.

In his first letter Mr. Page expressed concern over two recent events that pose a threat to his personal beliefs. He first mentions the anti-sex education bill passed by the State Assembly, but doesn't explain that the bill only prohibits the SIECUS type programs and does not alter the handling of sex information as now presented in the health and biology studies. It should be mentioned here that the SIECUS material would be more truthfully labelled "New Morality" or "Playboy Philosophy" and that the bill only applies this prohibition to the kindergarten and grade school level. The Post-Crescent might publish the text of this bill to allay any fears that the Assembly is imposing any censorship on the schools. They merely relegate that sort of "education" to the book stores and magazine stands where its existence is protected by the freedom of choice. We have the free choice option of not buying dirty books, not attending more movies, and we can turn off the TV set, but we do not have a choice about sending our children to school. We must send them.

The other event that evokes so much concern from Mr.

Page is the recent efforts to establish a local licensing of book and magazine outlets for the purpose of controlling the sale of illegal (not merely questionable) material. For this effort John and Bob Schrieter and others deserve credit for acting in the community interest to eliminate hard core pornography. Mr. Page's concern that they will set themselves up as censors and impose their morality on him is not nearly as fearful a prospect as having the ring-leaders of SIECUS or Hugh Hefner impose their Playboy philosophy on my children. The idea of censorship is not an issue in the bookstore licensing proposal any more than it is in the licensing of eating establishments. We have pure food and drug laws, water quality standards, and many other minimum safety requirements set by law. There's no more reason why pornographers should have the right to use a "freedom of the press" to prevail against a contemporary community standard than the counterfeiter has to print currency and corrupt our monetary values.

The comments made about repressed parents and repressed children would have seemed more credible a generation ago when the Dr. Spock era began. We have since had over twenty years of child rearing that has been

Labor Day Holiday Is Spent Packing Up To Go Back to Work

BY JOHN TORINUS
Editor, The Post-Crescent

Labor Day is a sad holiday in resort country.

It's a day when most cottage owners close up for the season, and as the day goes on more boats are pulled from the water and stored, more station wagons loaded to the rafters, and more and more cottages closed, only to be reopened for occasional fall weekends.

We don't follow the pattern. For fall is our favorite season of the year in Door County, and we'll be back almost every weekend until November. I always leave the sailboat in the water in the expectation of a number of delightful outings in September and even October. The result is that I am usually hauling it out between halves of a televised Packer game in November when the north wind is blowing and the hull is filled with leaves.

But as I drove around last Monday it was a nostalgic setting. The students who have been around most of the summer and with whom I have had great fun sailing will be soon off for school. And most of them we will not see again until next summer.

That's why many cottagers pack up tight on Labor Day. They won't have the help available later, so the boats have to come out now.

But now we'll have Door County pretty much to ourselves. And the natives who work their heads off during July and August will start to smile again and will have time to talk.

Like Jack Eakin of the Blue Ox in Baileys Harbor, who almost didn't make it through Labor Day. On Sunday night, midst a torrential downpour, his holding tank chose to overflow. There were four inches of water over the carpeting and he was out in the downpour supervising the rescue operation. His table help had quit during the week, and he and his wife had been working double shifts.

I think I could have bought the place for a song that night. But after a little rest it'll be another story. He's had such a fine season that he's signed my friends Ernie and Carol up for another three-month appearance next summer.

Why is it that the weather is always so beautiful on the evening when you have to leave and go back to work? Sunday nights mostly. But last weekend it was cold and raining like cats and dogs on Sunday, and Monday evening was like heaven. We sat out watching the striking sunset, the sunset of a wonderful summer season.

A friend remarked to me recently that it was a good thing we can't control the weather. His thought was that there would be so many different opinions of what is perfect weather that there would be more controversy than there is over Vietnam.

What is too hot to one person is not hot enough for another, and vice versa. We sailors like wind with our sun, but the stinkpotters prefer flat seas.

And while most of us enjoyed the long period of sunny fair skies, there were those who prayed for rain. And if we could order the rain, on what day of the week or time of day would we order it?

Imagine the conflict between skiers and snowmobilers crying for more snow and the average householder to whom snow is only something you have to shovel or get your car out of.

No, the weatherman has a tough enough job now. Imagine how it would be if he had to take orders for the weather.

Driving in Tuesday morning I couldn't help but wonder whether we aren't spoiling our young folk with convenience. The school buses were out in full force hauling the young 'uns in for the first day of school. In one small village along the highway I stopped three times behind a bus as it stopped for three groups of children in front of their homes, and each stop was less than a block apart.

But that was another scene and sign of the times. Each and every child was dressed up in the newest purchases from the Back to School sales.

There's probably no other day of the year, with the possible exception of Easter, when our younger generation is so well turned out.

Taxpayers Are Also Getting An Education

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

With the last sales tax increase and the additional items covered, I would like to tell Governor Knowles that he, more than anyone else, makes me wonder if the Pope wasn't wrong in his stand on birth control.

I wonder if we can afford the price of bringing up children today. When I pay tax on my children's school clothes, I think it is time to try to find out if I am making a mistake staying in Wisconsin.

At first, the sales tax was supposed to be on luxury items, now I wonder what would happen if I went downtown shopping naked.

It is hard to picture in my mind, with all these spending cuts, why we have to have a tax increase.

Of course, our Governor doesn't care where the money comes from, only where he spends it. I guess it's as they said at campaign time — "The Education Governor" — and we, the taxpayers, are getting the education.

After 7 Months, How Goes It?

Citizen Lyndon B. Johnson, Retired

BY GARTH JONES

STONEWALL, Tex. (AP) — If you are a tourist on Ranch Road 1 outside the LBJ Ranch, don't expect to see Lyndon B. Johnson on the front porch just sitting and rocking.

But if you're in the right place at the right time in this central Texas village you may see a tall, smiling, sunburned man in sports shirt and slacks stride out of the Stonewall cafe with a supply of take-home barbecued beef.

That's former President Johnson doing one of the domestic chores he enjoys as a private citizen in retirement.

Since leaving office Jan. 20, Johnson has been living quietly on his LBJ Ranch, 65 miles west of Austin.

Is he hiding?

Is he happy?

These are the two questions everyone seems to ask about him.

His neighbors in this rugged hill country do not consider him a recluse, although he has let them know he wants his new privacy respected.

Trim and relaxed, 61 this past Aug. 27, Johnson shows up at practically every local festival or celebration, often bringing along a celebrity visiting at the rambling white stone and frame LBJ ranch-house.

He shakes hands freely every Sunday at one of the area churches. He regularly checks the sale of LBJ books at local souvenir shops, adding his autograph to unsigned volumes. He checks activities sometimes several times a day at nearby LBJ State Park, the LBJ birthplace and the LBJ boyhood home. Congress is considering legislation that would make the birthplace and boyhood home a part of the national park system.

Does as Said

"He's doing just what he said he was going to do," says

George Christian, Johnson's

press secretary, who is now an Austin public relations man. "He's happy as he can be. He's reading and writing and spending most of his time at the ranch. . . There's no personality change, no sour apples."

"Seems to me like he is as happy as he can be," says

Levi Deike, a neighbor who has known Johnson since boy-hood. "He still mixes and mingles with the congregation

after church like he did while president."

Deike operates the Hye

General Store and Post Office

a few miles from LBJ Ranch.

A state historical landmark plaque on the store's doorway says that Johnson, "at age 4

... mailed a letter here—a postal customer for the first time in his life."

Deike says the sale of LBJ souvenirs has dropped since last January, "but not as much as we thought it would."

"I'm having a ball," Mrs.

Johnson told a friend at an Austin social gathering.

"There are no big responsibilities and no pressing needs."

However, after seven months of voluntary retirement, Johnson obviously is very sensitive on two points—second-hand reports that he spends his time pouting and brooding about past glories, and unverified accounts of bad health.

"Any reports of his being in bad health are totally unfounded," said Tom Johnson, the former president's administrative aide, after a series of rumors recently of a Johnson

Johnson's last formal press conference was Jan. 22 at the ranch.

Asked if he would miss presidential power, he responded: "But I want to miss it—it hurts good."

Let Me Alone

"Let me alone I'm just a private citizen now," he said the next day.

Since then he has refused to grant interviews or even answer written questions. Several times he has had chats with newsmen he has known well in the past, but each time he has carefully specified his remarks are off the record.

The first crack in the ex-president's wall of silence came July 8 when Columbia Broadcasting System announced he had agreed, for an undisclosed sum, to appear with CBS commentator Walter Cronkite in a series of interviews reviewing his years in public office.

Johnson's office in Austin confirmed the CBS agreement but said nothing more. The

the broadcast rights to Johnson's memoirs, similar to another CBS series with former President Dwight Eisenhower, might return more than $500,000 to Johnson over a 10-year period.

The first TV program was aired July 21 while Apollo 11

astronauts were on the moon.

It had been recorded earlier at the ranch, before Johnson joined the throng of notables

at Cape Kennedy for the Apollo 11 blastoff.

The Russians "don't have the freedom of decision we have," he told Cronkite. "As a result they can't get the action that we can into our program. I think the great strength of this program is in its openness. That's our system and that's why we have a better system."

The former president turned down an invitation to attend

President Nixon's state dinner

Aug. 13 in Los Angeles to officially welcome home the Apollo 11 crewmen.

Few Appearances

Johnson has made few scheduled public appearances since returning to Texas—to

For his birthday, Aug. 27,

Johnson and his wife flew from Texas to President Nixon-son's Western White House in San Clemente, Calif., for lunch and a talk.

The Nixons and the Johnsons then flew to the Redwood

National Park in northern California to dedicate the Lady Bird Johnson Grove—a stand of redwoods selected to serve as a tribute to Mrs.

Johnson's conservation efforts during her years as first lady.

Johnson was a tanned and healthy figure at the cere-

Cape Kennedy, to attend the funeral of former President

Dwight Eisenhower and to Rochester, Minn., to become a director of the Mayo Clinic, a $2,000-a-year post to which he was appointed after leaving office. There have been informal, unannounced LBJ visits to the Bahamas, Florida and various Texas cities.

"The former president feels that he is a private citizen now and his travel plans are of no public concern, unless he is making a public appearance," an aide explained.

Mrs. Johnson left on a European trip in August, but the LBJ office said she was traveling as a private citizen and therefore any details of the trip were "private."

The former president keeps up with national and international happenings, but there has been no indication so far he plans to take an active part in either state or national politics, at least to the extent

he has in the past.

President Nixon told his news conference June 19 that Johnson is "regularly briefed"

by top level security and economic advisers. Nixon said those briefings "have provided an occasion for him to give his ideas to us. He has been very helpful in terms of advice and I think he will be more helpful in the future."

However, Johnson turned down an invitation to appear at the big Democratic party fundraising dinner in New York, sending a brief telegram of greetings instead.

During the recent session of the Texas Legislature he turned down repeated invitations to address a joint session.

Local Politics?

There has been speculation

Johnson might take a hand in local politics, particularly in the 1970 campaign when Sen.

Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., is expected to seek re-election.

Rep. George Bush, R-Tex.,

who lost to Yarborough in 1964, claims Johnson was really the one who defeated him.

Bush said he visited Johnson at the ranch earlier this year to tell the former president he may run against Yarborough again. Bush said he did not expect any help from Johnson.

A Johnson aide confirmed

Bush's visit to the ranch but said Johnson would support the Democratic Senate candidate in 1970, "as he has always done."

Johnson has made no secret in the past that he was not pleased that Texans selected a Republican, Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., to replace Johnson in the Senate.

Some of his friends think the possibility of two GOP senators from Texas might bring LBJ out of political retirement.

The task of retelling the story of the Johnson administration occupies most of the former president's time.

There is a 1970 deadline for the first part of an expected three-volume memoir.

Working with Johnson are his administrative aide, Tom

Johnson; two former White House speech writers, Robert

Hardesty and Harry Middleton; and Walt M. Rostow, former White House foreign adviser, now a professor at the University of Texas.

"He likes to dictate when he thinks of something he wants to make part of history," said a Johnson spokesman, "and this can happen at almost any time or place."

The dictated notes are put together by one or more aides with background material and a rough draft sent back to Johnson.

Does Writing

"This is where he does a lot of his writings, with a pencil up and down the margins, between the lines and everywhere. He may pencil up drafts like this several times before he is finally satisfied."

To back up Johnson's memories and personal notes, his files contain about 22 million pages of documents accumulated during his 38 years of political life and about 250,000 photographic negatives. Most of the material now is stored in the Federal Building at Austin, where his writers have a suite of offices. It later will be stored in the LBJ

Library and Presidential Archives under construction at the University of Texas.

there were announcements that Johnson planned to lecture at Rice University in Houston and at the LBJ

School of Public Affairs, which is part of a University of Texas complex along with

LBJ Library. However, Johnson later exercised an option

DE PERE — Despite heroic efforts by caretakers, vandalism has almost destroyed one of Wisconsin's most attractive historic landmarks. The simple cabin at Lost Dauphin State Park, a replica of the home of one of the most romantic figures of the period immediately following the French Revolution, is in desperate need of repairs.

Whether Eleazar Williams was, or was not, the legendary lost prince of France has violent partisans on both sides. No one disputes the fact, however, that the controversial Williams, who was instrumental in bringing the Oneidas to Wisconsin early in the 19th century, did make his home in a small cabin on the west bank of the Fox River just south of De Pere. The site has been an extremely popular tourist attraction.

Any visitor with a sense of history is almost sure to feel outraged when he sees the cabin in its present state. The neatly-clipped grass makes a background of almost painful clarity for overturned trash cans and a clutter of empty beer cans strewn carelessly around the grounds.

At the west end of the cabin, which faces the parking area, three full-length split logs are missing at ceiling height. Running the entire width of the structure, the aperture gapes like an empty grin. A smaller gap disfigures the east end.

Two window sills are completely gone, and traces of dry rot are becoming evident. Other sills and frames show evidence of having been backed or gouged by sharp instruments.

Carved initials mar cabin.

What Price
Vandalism?

Spilled rubbish indicates the recent presence of vandals at Lost Dauphin Park, a recreation area south of DePere.

Most of the flashing is gone from the peak of the roof. Looking up from inside of the cabin, one has an unobstructed view of the sky.

Only a stub of a chimney protrudes above the roof, and fallen bricks clutter the interior of the cabin's fireplace. Stones have been pried from the face of the fireplace itself. About half the chinking which once filled the interstices between the logs of the walls has been pried out and is missing.

The interior walls from floor to roof peak, and the window and door frames, are one solid mass of names, dates, initials and graffiti, lewd and otherwise. They have been carved, gouged, inked, chalked and spray painted on every available inch of space in such overlapping layers as to form what amounts to a patina.

Two newly-built comfort stations also show the depredations of vandals. The east wall of the station designated for women shows several sizable holes that appear to have been made by high powered rifles. On an inside partition a half-life-sized nude male figure has been scratched deeply into the paint. Here, too, names, initials, dates and graffiti are in evidence.

At the foot of the hill near the river, a once-picturesque rail fence is in a state of almost complete collapse. A large, charred area suggests that part of it may have been used for a bonfire.

One final indignity has been visited on the historic site. A stone marker facing the river road once held an identifying plaque. Now the stone shows only three heavy, twisted bolts testifying to the avaricious strength of a souvenir collector.

The blank face of the stone on its cracked base seems almost prophetic of the anonymity and desolation that will soon overwhelm historic Lost Dauphin Park unless steps are taken immediately for its preservation and protection.

The west end of the cabin (above) has been severely damaged. The metal plaque has been pried from the stone marker (right).

Cities,

The Turnafin Heights section of Anchorage, Alaska, looked like this after an earthquake of the magnitude of 8.3 struck the city on March 27, 1964.

What! an Earthquake in Wisconsin?

Nov. 9, 1968. It's a typical late fall Saturday morning, busy, bustling, as people look forward to the weekend. The weather is cool. Wisconsin will meet Ohio State in a Big Ten football contest in the afternoon.

A little past 11 a.m. windows rattle unaccountably, signs on buildings sway, floors wiggle as if a fast train had passed nearby. Only there was no train. What was it? An earthquake! Here?

Yes, on Nov. 9, 1968, a quake centered in southern Illinois, near the Indiana border, rumbled through 23 states, including Wisconsin. It covered the widest area of any earthquake in the U.S. in 1968, and was the most widely felt earthquake in the area in 71 years. It also served notice that California, Alaska and the Pacific areas do not have a complete monopoly on tremblers.

It's Happened Before, Says

And there's a 100 per cent chance of an earthquake today! While millions of people may never experience an earthquake, they are a common occurrence on our planet. The National Earthquake Information Center at Rockville, Md., estimates that several million earthquakes take place throughout the world each year. They range from imperceptible tremors, detected only by sensitive seismographic instruments, to catastrophic shocks. About 700 of these are large enough to cause considerable damage if they take place in populated areas. So, somewhere—today—an earthquake will occur!

What causes an earthquake? Strong earthquakes are usually the result of the rupturing of great masses of rock beneath the surface of the earth. Stresses generated in the earth's crust are stored in the form of strain — physical deformation of the rock structure. Large blocks of material are slowly forced into highly-strained positions along faults in the earth, and held in place by a supporting structure of stronger materials.

Finally, the stresses build until the supporting rocks rupture, and the overstressed and deformed rocks snap back along the fault, causing an earthquake. The great majority of earthquakes originate at depths of 10 to 20 miles, although they can occur at any depth up to 450 miles.

The rim of the Pacific Ocean outlines the world's greatest earthquake belt. Running from the Aleutian Islands to Japan, through the Philippine Islands to New Zealand, eastward to Chile and northward along the South American coast through Central America, the West Coast States and back to Alaska, this belt accounts for about 81 per cent of the world's large earthquakes.

A second important earthquake belt extends from the East Indies through the Himalayas to the Mediterranean, and to the Azores in the Atlantic. About 17 per cent of the world's large earthquakes occur here.

Tremors in these two areas are taken for granted, but on occasion great earthquakes take place outside these two zones. In the United States, southeastern Missouri and Charleston, S. C., are examples of such areas, but many years usually elapse between destructive shocks. However, no one region is entirely free of earthquakes.

No earthquakes are known to have been centered in Wisconsin, although shocks strong enough to be felt from quakes centered in Illinois, northern Michigan, Ohio and other places, have visited the Badger State 11 times in recent years.

On Aug. 31, 1886, a major earthquake centered near Charleston, South Carolina, was felt in Beloit and other towns in the southern part of the state. Three distinct shocks were felt in Madison on May 26, 1906, from an earthquake centered on the Keewenaw Peninsula of Michigan.

Three years later to the day, May 26, 1909, the shock from an Illinois centered quake rumbled through Wisconsin. Windows shook and rattled and stovelids danced in Janesville, Ft. Atkinson, Beloit, Monroe, Milwaukee and Shullsburg. Members of the Wisconsin legislature were just gathering in their chambers when the shock struck Madison, and according to press reports, "The high dome on the capital building swayed like a feather in the wind during the vibrations. No damage was done, but for a few minutes many persons were scared." Three shocks were felt in Madison during a 15-minute period.

Another Illinois-centered earthquake rattled Wisconsin on Jan. 2, 1912. Two distinct shocks were felt in Madison and Milwaukee.

Earthquakes were also felt in the state on April 9, 1917; Nov. 1, 1935; March 2 and 8, 1937; Nov. 23, 1939; Aug. 9, 1947, and the last time in November, 1968.

Over 900,000 persons have been killed by earthquakes throughout the world in this century, and damage to buildings and public works has amounted to more than $10 billion, according to the National Earthquake Information Center.

Four countries — China, Italy, Japan and Pakistan — suffered over a half-million fatalities from 1908 to 1935. Kansu, China, was visited by disastrous earthquakes in 1920 and 1932, killing 180,000 and 70,000 persons, respectively.

Tokyo Hit in 1923

Tokyo-Yokohama, Japan was devastated in 1923 by an earthquake and fire that took over 123,000 lives. Seventy-five thousand inhabitants were killed in Messina, Italy, in 1908. Quetta, Pakistan, was struck in 1935 by a severe shock that claimed 60,000 lives.

By comparison, the number of fatalities in the United States is remarkably low, due mainly to better construction of buildings and less dense population.

About 1,250 people have lost their lives in the U.S. this century due to destructive earthquakes, and over half this number (about 700) were killed in the great San Francisco shock and fire of 1906. Other earthquakes which took large numbers of lives in the U.S. occurred in California in 1933, 115 deaths; the Aleutian Islands in 1946, in which 173 were killed in Hawaii by the seismic sea wave this quake generated; and Alaska in 1964, 131 deaths, mostly from a seismic sea wave.

There have been no earthquake-caused fatalities in this country since April 29, 1965, when seven died as the result of the Puget Sound, Washington earthquake. Three deaths were the result of falling debris, and four, heart attacks.

In August, 1966, the Environmental Science Services Administration opened the National Earthquake Information Center in Rockville, Md. Operated under the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, the agency's object is to make information about earthquakes available to a larger range of people.

Among the first of the NEIC's new activities was the establishment of the Earthquake Early Reporting Services, which provides the location, magnitude and significance of larger earthquakes within two to three hours.

To gather this information so rapidly, ESSA has equipped five of their observatories with alarms. These are at Guam, Mariana Island; Honolulu, Hawaii; Palmer, Alaska; Newport, Washington, and Tucson, Arizona. Whenever a 6 to 6.5 magnitude earthquake occurs, the alarm sounds, and the information is immediately telephoned to Washington, D.C. and vicinity, and from foreign stations who report in, NEIC geophysicists locate the earthquake's epicenter—the point on the earth's surface directly above the shock.

This information is released to the press together with background reports; to scientists wanting to visit the area for aftershock and engineering studies, and to disaster relief agencies.

Sixty-eight countries and dependencies cooperate in a worldwide earthquake location program by providing earthquake observations to NEIC. The majority of these observations are on relatively minor earthquakes, whose epicenters do not need immediate location.

Computer Solves Problems

Twice each week, 15,000 or more such observations are fed into a high-speed computer capable of solving complex problems at speeds measured in billionths of a second. The computer locates four to five hundred earthquake epicenters within 15 minutes. Some 6000 earthquake epicenters are located each year using the computer.

Seismologists describe earthquakes and their effects in terms of magnitude and intensity. There is a distinct difference in the two terms.

Magnitude is the measure of the ground motion of an earthquake at a fixed distance from the epicenter. It is the measurement of the shock waves from a quake, after corrections have been made for the distance the waves have traveled. An earthquake's magnitude can be determined by the recordings of one or more very sensitive instruments, called seismographs, at any distance from the epicenter.

Earthquake magnitudes are described as being on the Richter Scale. An increase of one unit on the Richter Scale means a tenfold increase in ground motion. Therefore, an earthquake of magnitude 8 is ten times greater than a magnitude 7 earthquake from the same distance, and 100 times greater than one magnitude 6. There is no highest or lowest value on the Richter Scale, and it is not on a scale of one through ten as is commonly believed.

The largest earthquakes ever recorded took place in January, 1906, off the coast of Colombia-Ecuador, and in March, 1933, off Japan, and were rated at 8.9. The smallest earthquakes are about minus 3. A magnitude 5 shock will generally cause some damage near the epicenter, depending on the soil conditions, type of building construction and other factors.

Intensity is the measure of effects observed by people in any part of the shaken area during the earthquake. It varies from location to location for each earthquake, generally decreasing farther from the epicenter. In the United States the Modified Mercalli Intensity Scale is used to evaluate earthquake intensity. I on this scale indicates the effects are not felt except by a very few under specially favorable conditions, whereas intensity XII indicates the damage as total.

The Good Friday earthquake that devastated Anchorage and southern Alaska on March 27, 1964, was the strongest shock in North America in historic time. It was rated magnitude 8.5 on the Richter Scale. The NEIC reported property damage from the earthquake and accompanying seismic sea wave was estimated at over $450 million. One hundred thirty-one lives were lost, and thousands were left homeless without any source of income.

The force of this earthquake was so great that two mountain ranges 80 miles from Anchorage were shifted to the south by 50 feet, and mountains south of Portage, Alaska, sank nearly 10 feet. Kodiak, Afognak and Ushagat Islands moved to the south and east, and Montague Island, located near the center of the earthquake in Prince William Sound, rose by more than 30 feet. In addition the Matanuska Valley settled by one-and-a-half feet, and the ocean floor between Kodiak and Montague Islands rose about 50 feet — the greatest such rise ever recorded.

Death From the Sea

An earthquake's greatest killer can come from the sea. Occasionally an earthquake will generate disturbances on or near the ocean floor, causing a seismic sea wave. Often mistakenly called "tidal waves," the great waves are known internationally as tsunami (pronounced soo-NOM-ee), a name given them by the Japanese, whose islands have been swept by the giant waves time and time again.

Tsunamis are a series of ocean waves of extremely long length and period. As a tsunami crosses a deep ocean at speeds up to 600 miles an hour, its length from crest to crest may be 100 miles or more, while its height is only a few feet. It cannot be seen from the air, or felt aboard ships in deep water.

As the tsunami nears the coast, the speed diminishes and the waves increase in height, sometimes to more than 100 feet high, causing great property damage and loss of life as they crash ashore. For reasons of which scientists are not yet certain, a tsunami's waves may be nearly negligible at one point along a coast, and violently destructive at other points nearby.

Of 131 fatalities in the 1964 Alaska Good Friday earthquake, only nine persons died in the actual earthquake. The tsunami that followed killed 107 in communities along the Gulf of Alaska, and in Oregon and California.

Killed Many Thousands

Before methods of rapid communication were developed, seismic sea waves often roared ashore on unsuspecting coastal areas thousands of miles from an earthquake's epicenter. More than 36,000 persons were killed by a tsunami in the East Indies in 1883, while 27,000 Japanese died in a wave in 1886, and 1000 more died in 1933.

On April 1, 1946, a tsunami generated five hours earlier by an earthquake in the Aleutian Islands, struck Hawaii without warning. The 55-foot-high waves killed 159, injured 163 and destroyed $25 million in property.

Following this disaster, U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey scientists started development of the Seismic Sea Wave Warning System. Headquartered in Honolulu, the SSWWS is a maze of complex and sensitive seismic detectors, tied in with a network of Pacific seismographic and tide measuring stations. When an earthquake strong enough to cause a tsunami occurs, or unusual wave activity is recorded, the SSWWS immediately broadcasts the tsunami warning and its estimated time of arrival at various locations throughout the Pacific.

The chances of your being injured in a major earthquake are extremely small, although they are probably greater if you happen to live in California or Alaska. But if the house begins to sway, and the earth shakes beneath your feet, what should you do? The National Earthquake Information Center offers this advice:

If you are inside, dive under a table desk, doorway or any covering that will protect you from a falling ceiling. DON'T rush into the street, where you may be struck by falling cornices and chimneys and other flying objects.

If you are outside, try to get into an open doorway or into the middle of the street if it is a wide one. But be careful, cars can be as deadly as the earthquake.

Do not reoccupy a seriously damaged building without the approval of local authorities. Just because the building withstood the main shock does not mean it will also withstand strong aftershocks.

Stay calm and heed the advice of local authorities.

While it is not now possible to predict earthquakes in advance, scientists are making detailed studies in this area.

In the meantime, far beneath the surface of the earth, unbelievably high pressures are generating stresses in the earth's crust. When the stresses build until the strain becomes too great, an earthquake will occur — when the earth rebels.

The Soul of China

By Peter Arnett and Horst Faas

TAIPEI (AP)— The cavernous tunnel is gouged 500 feet into the mountainside. Air conditioners filter the air, the machinery whirring like a heart beat.

Tight security ensures that the tunnel is burglarproof. The builders hopefully claim that it is also H-bomb proof.

"This is the soul of 4,000 years of the living Chinese culture," declares Marshall P.S. Wu, a Chinese scholar.

The tunnel and the ornate National Palace Museum at its mouth house a quarter of a million examples of the gorgeous panoply of Chinese art.

The small island of Formosa, separated from the huge China mainland by 100 miles of water and a much larger political gulf, is now the repository for much of the great Chinese tradition in the fine arts.

In the crates of scrolls, porcelain, bronzes, jades and books is 70 per cent of the existing treasures of the imperial Chinese emperors. Many of the vast imperial collections were scattered to the four winds by revolution and conquerors during China's tumultuous history.

"The emperors always had the best of everything," says Wu, who also is chief of the exhibition division of the National Museum. "We have the best now."

The accumulation of these priceless national treasures on Formosa is as dramatic a story as any in the history of Chinese art which had potters throwing themselves into their kilns because of less than perfect work, and emperors having senior officials executed because they sometimes dared question the authenticity of some of the most treasured imperial possessions.

The 23,000 porcelains, 4,500 bronzes, 7,000 paintings and numerous other items were gathered together in the decade following the violent overthrow of the faltering Ching dynasty in 1911.

The imperial treasures at that time were lodged in three localities. The Nationalist Chinese collected a quarter of a million of the best pieces and in 1933 began an art odyssey that lasted 17 years.

The vast treasure trove was first packed in boxes that had withstood being dropped from high buildings. They were shipped to Shanghai by train, then by ship to Nanking moving with the headquarters of the Nationalist government that was fighting both the Japanese and the Chinese Communists.

As World War II got under way, the 13,500 crates were hastily split up and shipped to various points by truck, ship and river barge.

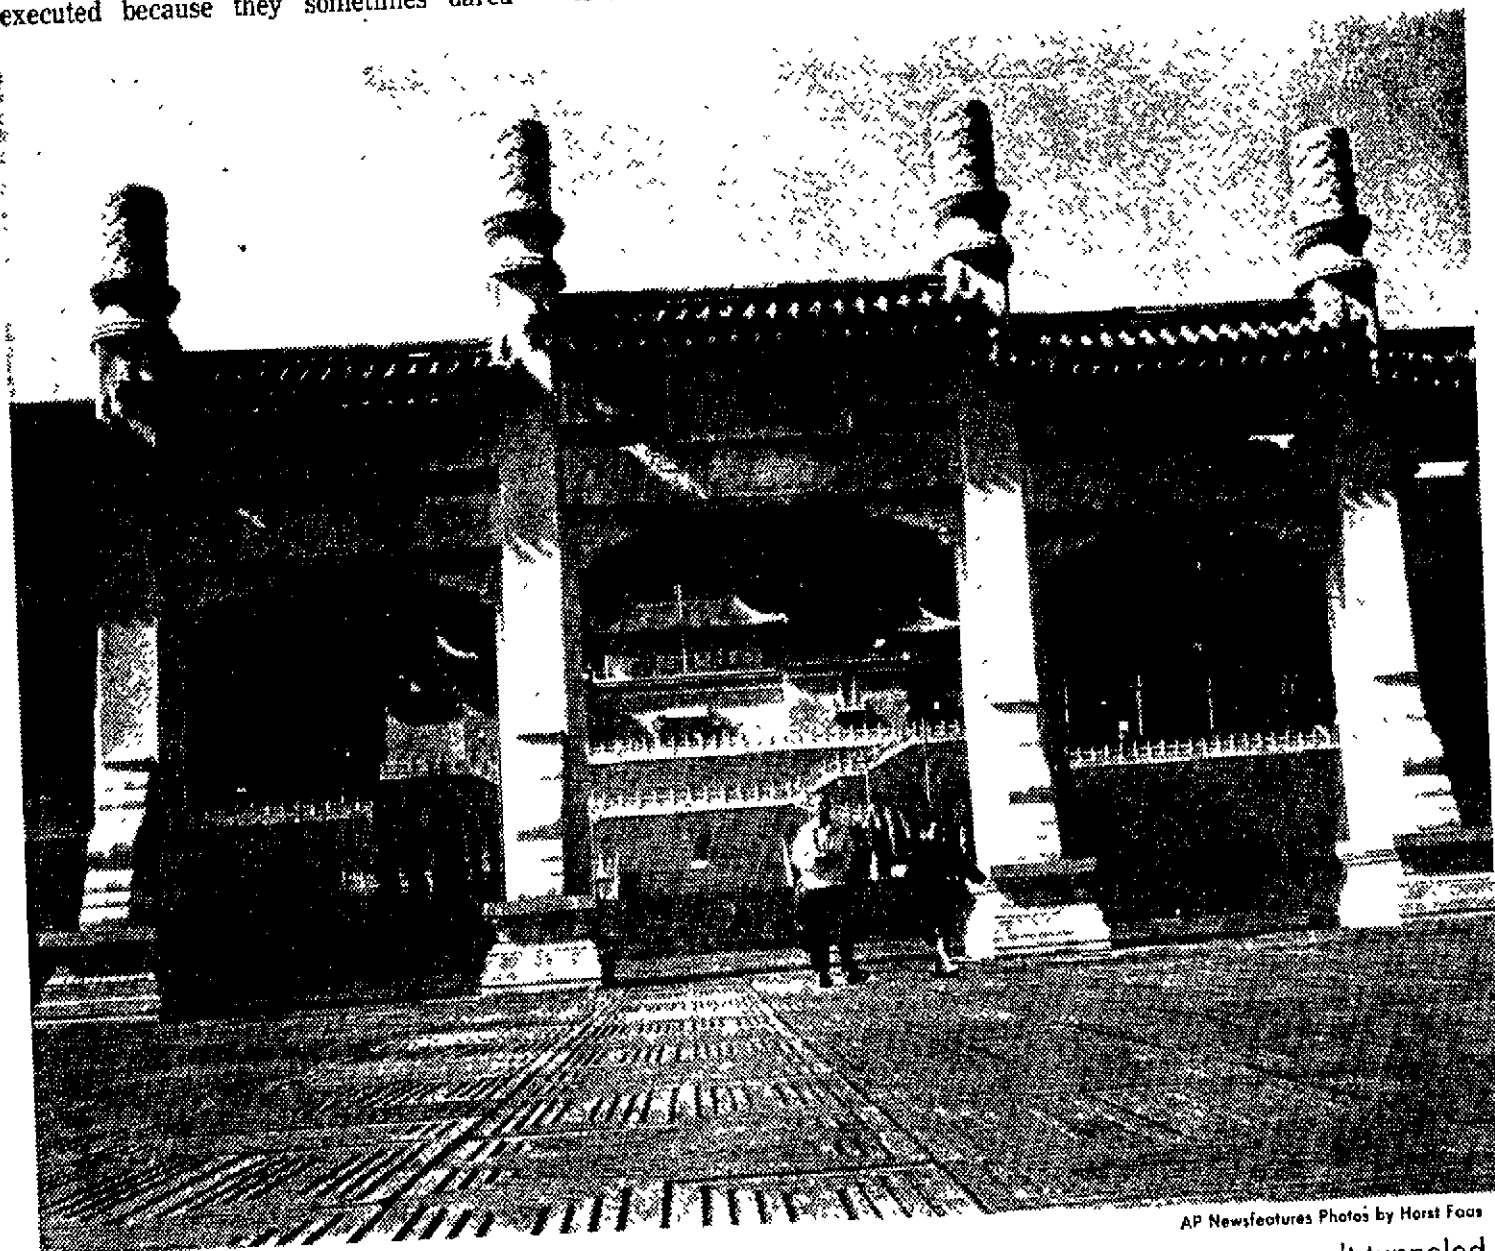

Several times, Japanese bombers raided the heavily guarded convoys carrying the rare cargoes, but none was damaged in that way. One truckload of rare books was washed away in the Yellow River. Some moves took a whole year.

But according to museum officials, the collection reached Formosa in the late 1940s almost intact, minus some heavy stone pieces left behind on the mainland because of their weight.

There is enough space available in the museum only to show 3,000 of the objects at a time. The display is changed every quarter. It would take four visits each year for 20 years to view the whole collection.

The Ching Dynasty of China (1644-1911) produced this fish-shaped flower container. The Chinese Nationalists have miraculously managed to save and preserve an unrivalled collection of a quarter of a million art treasures, which is now housed in the Palace Museum of Taipei, Formosa.

The ornate National Palace Museum, three north of Taipei, on the island of Formosa, displays for public view at any one time only a fraction of the priceless collection of Chinese art preserved in the huge storage vault tunneled 500 feet into the mountainside behind it. The collection represents "the soul of four thousand years of living Chinese culture."

The Love Affair of Jefferson Davis

Jefferson Davis at 34—an Engraving by S. Hollyer

SAILING north on the Mississippi river in 1829, to his new assignment in Wisconsin, Lieutenant Jefferson Davis no doubt wondered what lay ahead of him. In the short span of six years, he became the first lumberman in Wisconsin, met his future chief antagonist in the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln, battled Indians and fell tragically in love with a daughter of another future president of the United States.

Just out of West Point the previous year, the handsome and debonaire Davis had left the congenial surroundings of Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, for the wild dangers of Fort Crawford, at Prairie du Chien. The young officer and future president of the Southern Confederacy had not made any great record while at West Point, finishing 23 in a class of 34. The smooth-faced young man, in full military regalia, reported to a senior officer who acknowledged Davis's smart salute with a casual nod.

In 1829 Fort Crawford was a frontier post, located at the confluence of the Mississippi and Wisconsin rivers. Situated deep in Indian country of the Sac and Fox tribes, it had been built to protect the fur traders and pioneers who ventured into this dangerous area. The surrounding country was a beautiful prairie where Indians used to discuss their treaties and barter with the white fur traders. In earlier times, an Indian settlement at the junction of these two rivers was called Prairie du Chien by the French fur traders.

Because Fort Crawford was in need of repairs, Lieutenant Davis was assigned the task of obtaining lumber. This assignment necessitated a trip to the north where there were virgin forests, since the surrounding area of the fort contained practically no trees.

In this new role of lumberman the young lieutenant, with a detachment of soldiers and two French Canadian voyageurs, sailed up the Mississippi River until he reached the Chippewa River. Ascending the Chippewa River, the party entered a country of great natural beauty, filled with wild game and menacing Indians. It was on this trip that some Indians tried to trap the young lieutenant and his men by pretending to barter with them. However, the experienced voyageurs warned Davis of the intended duplicity, and the lieutenant ordered the men to set sail immediately. This incident was to be one of many such harrowing experiences that Jefferson Davis was to have with the savages during his tour of duty in Wisconsin.

Reaching the Red Cedar River, the party turned northward, sailing until they reached a spot somewhere near where the present city of Menomonie stands. It was here that Davis decided to set up his lumber camp. The soldiers set to work, felling the trees and cutting them so that they could be floated downstream. Such work always entailed the dangers of Indian attack, and many alarms were given. Still, the lumbering expedition was successful and Lieutenant Davis returned to Fort Crawford. Some historians report that the young lieutenant was perhaps the first lumberman in these wild parts of what is now the state of Wisconsin.

Two Future Presidents—at Odds

Later in the year, 1829, Lieutenant Davis was ordered to Fort Winnebago. On the order of John Jacob Astor, this fort originally was erected to protect the fur trade. These western forts, it must be remembered, also served as protection for the settlers against the Indians. The Winnebagoes had become restless with the increased flow of white settlers into their country. When Davis arrived at Fort Winnebago, he was assigned the task of strengthening the defenses of this fort.

The fort was well situated for defense against hostile Indians. Its site was on a hill, rising between the Fox River and a thickly wooded ridge that extended toward Lake Puckaway. The fort commanded the junction between the Wisconsin and Fox Rivers, a very important portage in the continuous journey from Green Bay on Lake Michigan to Prairie du Chien on the Mississippi River.

The young lieutenant again went on a lumbering expedition. This time Davis took his men up the Wisconsin River to cut pine logs. These were floated down the river in the spring and hauled to the fort. Besides lumber, stone had to be obtained, and parties were sent to quarry the stone for the fort.

Daily Reconnaissance Needed

From 1829 to 1831, Jefferson Davis was stationed at Fort Winnebago. During this time he made several expeditions against the hostile Indians. Daily reconnaissance was required, and death lurked for any man who ventured too far from the safe environs of the fort.

Apart from the excitement of these dangers, the officers and their wives managed to engage in social activities. Often these social functions were quite gay, and they gave much pleasure and amusement to both the fort residents and the surrounding settlers. Davis apparently enjoyed these functions, particularly the dances, which he had been expertly taught to do at West Point. For other social diversions, there were sleigh rides and theatrical entertainment.

On a number of occasions, Davis would ride on horseback to Dodgeville to attend parties at the home of Colonel Henry Dodge, who later became governor of Wisconsin. The young officer had made friends with the daughters of Dodge, and formed quite an attachment to Mary. However, nothing came of this attachment, and Mary Dodge later married a Colonel Dement.

Chief Black Hawk—an Oil Painting by Robert Sully

During these frontier days at the fort, there was much gambling and drinking. Davis did not indulge in these vices, but often utilized his spare moments for studying and reading. Other times he liked to ride wild horses for the thrill of it. Despite his youth Davis showed great courage and daring in many things that he did.

In 1831 Lieutenant Davis was ordered back to Fort Crawford. On his arrival there, he was again sent out on a lumbering expedition. This time he was sent up the Yellow River to construct a sawmill. In the pristine country of the Yellow River, the work of the sawmill became very arduous and difficult. To make matters worse, the winter developed into one of the severest that had ever been experienced in these parts. It was during this winter that Davis became ill with pneumonia. With the loving care of his servant, James Pemberton, he managed to pull through. Ever afterwards Davis always attributed his recovery to the extreme cold of the north he endured while in the army.

After his return from the Yellow River lumber expedition, Davis participated in the Black Hawk War, where he met such men of later prominence as Maj. Anderson of Fort Sumter, Albert S. Johnston, later a commander of a Confederate army. The most prominent man Davis met in the war was Abraham Lincoln, who was then a volunteer Illinois captain. There is an unconfirmed story that Lincoln, when being mustered into federal service, took the oath of allegiance to the United States from Lieutenant Davis.

Black Hawk Defeated

As a lieutenant of the First Regiment, Davis saw action against Black Hawk at the Battle of Bad Axe, where the Indians were decisively defeated. Eventually, Davis was instrumental in capturing Black Hawk on an island in the Mississippi River, just above Fort Crawford. Actually, he received Black Hawk, a Sauk chief, from the Winnebagoes to whom he had surrendered. Later Davis had the responsibility of taking the Indian prisoner to Jefferson Barracks. In this war, as in all of his contacts with the Indians, Davis thought they were brave and resourceful in their fighting. He always regarded them with a soldierly respect in war and was considerate of them in peace. Black Hawk was to mention later of the kindness that he received from the young lieutenant on his journey to Jefferson Barracks.

It was during the year 1832 that South Carolina and President Jackson were having their difficulties over nullification. With the enactment of the Force Bill and the likelihood of hostilities between federal forces and South Carolina, Davis had reluctantly concluded that he would resign his army commission rather than face possible military action against one of the states of his beloved South. Fortunately for all, the differences between South Carolina and the Federal Government were settled without resorting to arms. Such an expression of his determination to resign his commission, if necessary, from a profession for which he had great love, indicated Davis's early belief in state rights.

Despite his states' rights political philosophy, Lieutenant Davis was considered one of the better young officers by his superiors. During the lead mine troubles near Dubuque, Davis was sent to get the miners to leave the region until the Federal Government could complete its treaty arrangements with the Indians. The miners were in an ugly mood at the arrival of the soldiers, but Davis' tactfulness and courage averted any bloody conflicts with the miners.

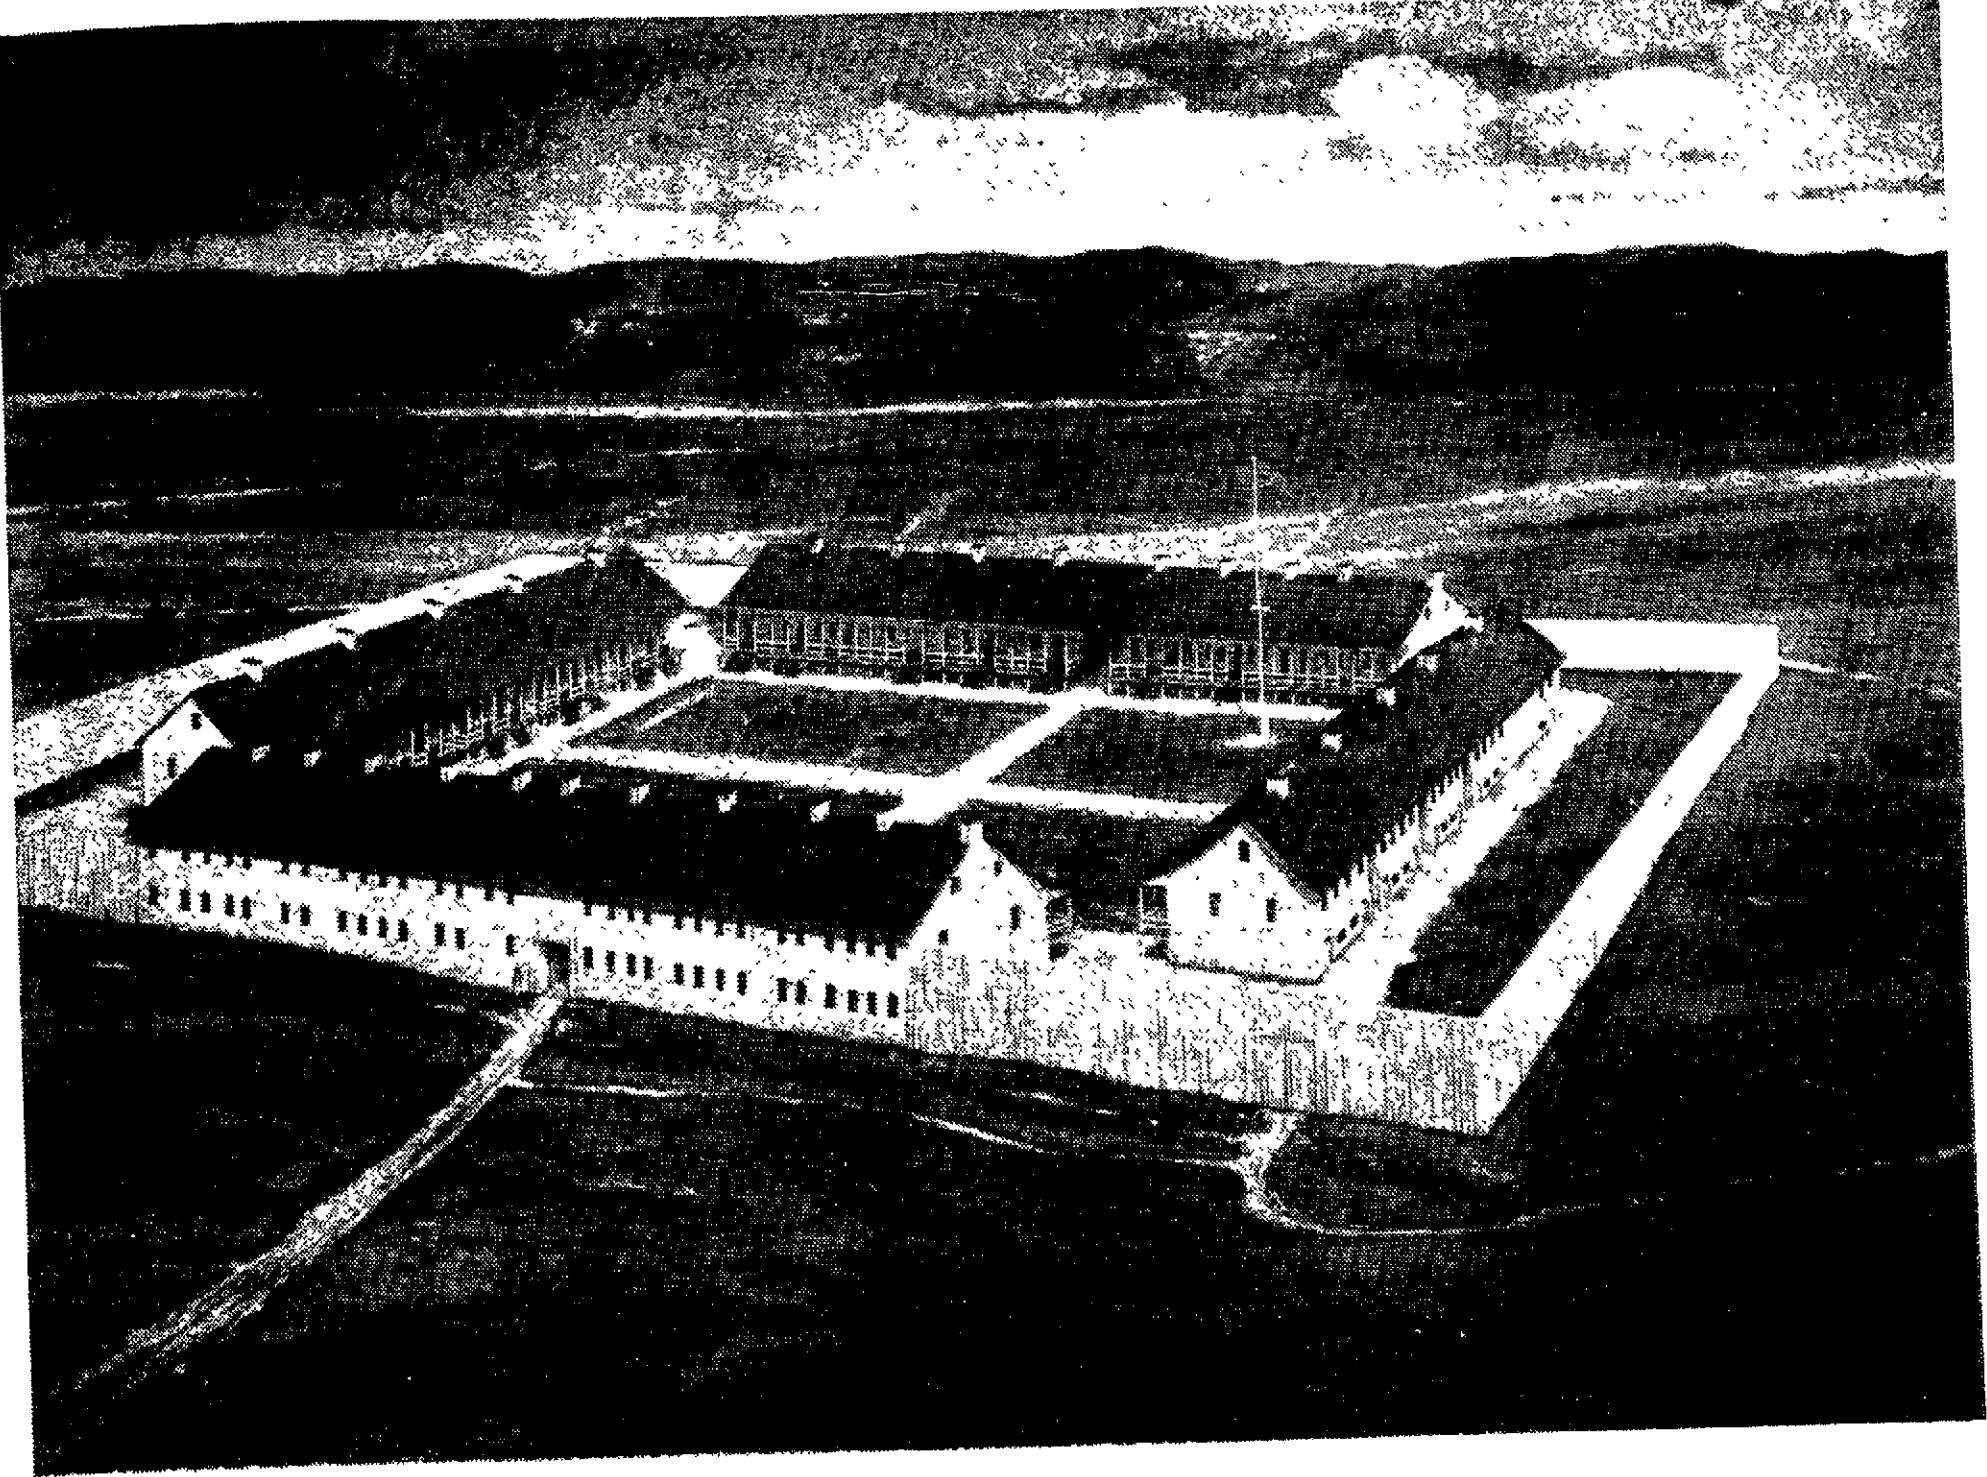

Loved Sarah Taylor

When Jefferson Davis returned to Fort Crawford from his Yellow River assignment, the commanding officer of the fort was Colonel Zachary Taylor, who was to become the 12th president of the United States. The home of "Rough and Ready" Taylor became the center of the fort's social life. Of his three daughters, Davis fell in love with Sarah Knox Taylor, a graceful but rather small girl of 18 years. She had wavy brown hair and hazel eyes, and could dance very well.

The courtship of these two young people was disapproved of by Colonel Taylor. There have been several reasons suggested by historians for the Colonel's disapproval. Perhaps he did not want Sarah Knox to suffer the hardships of military life as her mother had done. His oldest daughter, Ann, had married an army surgeon, and she had borne a baby under very primitive circumstances at Fort Snelling in Minnesota.

It could very well have been that Colonel Taylor was being spiteful toward Davis. The younger officer had had a difference of opinion over a court martial procedure in which Davis had voted against his commanding officer. Whatever Taylor's reasons were for not sanctioning the courtship, Lieutenant Davis was forbidden to come to the house to see Sarah Knox.

Regardless of parental disapproval, the courtship moved along clandestinely. It happened that Sarah Knox's best friend faced a similar situation with her father. This young friend, Mary Street, daughter of the Indian Agent General Street, was being courted by a Lieutenant Wilson. The two young couples would contrive to meet in private, unknown to the intransigent fathers. On the fort lived a Captain McRee and his wife, who helped both couples meet in secret.

Fort Crawford, at Prairie du Chien, looked like this in 1830-31, when it was visited by the young Jefferson Davis.

Davis was later promoted to the newly created regiment of dragoons which was to be stationed at Fort Gibson, Iowa Territory. This new assignment of station ended his stay in Wisconsin territory.

In the meantime the love-match between Davis and Sarah Knox continued. Since Colonel Taylor still refused to give his blessing to the match, Sarah Knox decided to marry Davis without her father's consent. Taking a steamboat down the Mississippi River, Miss Taylor traveled to Louisville and married

Soon after his marriage to Sarah Knox, Davis resigned his army commission and took his wife to live with his sister, Mrs. Luther Smith, near Bayou Sara, Louisiana. Soon after their arrival, both became ill with malaria. Although Davis was desperately sick, he managed to survive. Sarah Knox, however, never recovered. She died on Sept. 15, 1835, and was buried in his sister's family burial ground. It was a tragic end to the romance that had started in Wisconsin.

The author, a free-lance writer, lives in Milwaukee.

This is Fort Winnebago, at Portage, in about 1830. Jefferson Davis was stationed here from 1829 to 1831.

Webster's Landmark

By Syd Kronish

College controversies are not new to the American scene. In fact, one of the most famous campus capers which resulted in a landmark case before the Supreme Court occurred 150 years ago and is being commemorated on a new U.S. stamp to be issued Sept. 22.

The monumental legal decision—the Dartmouth College Case—was argued by Daniel Webster before the Supreme Court. The new 6-cent stamp will feature a portrait of Webster with Dartmouth Hall in the background. First-day ceremonies will be at Hanover, N.H., on Sept. 22.

The case involved the school's removal of its president by the board of directors. In reprisal, the New Hampshire legislature revoked Dartmouth's charter, established a rival institution and named the deposed president to head it.

The legal issue was whether a charter was a contract, and if so, could the legislature revoke a privilege it had not granted. Webster, a Dartmouth graduate, argued the case successfully before the top court and thereby reasserted the sanctity of contracts.

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations may send addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Hanover, N. H. 03755. The outside envelope to the postmaster should be endorsed "First-Day Covers 6 cent Dartmouth College Case Stamp." Cover requests must be postmarked no later than Sept. 22.

Animals and their newborn are featured on a new set of four stamps by West Germany commemorating the 125th anniversary of the Berlin Zoo, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. The Zoo, oldest in Germany, was opened Aug. 1, 1844.

The 10 pfennig shows three adult orangutans and the baby of the family. The 20 pfennig depicts a papa pelican and baby pelican. The 30 pf illustrates a gaur and calf. The 50 pf pictures a zebra and foal. Souvenir sheets are also available.

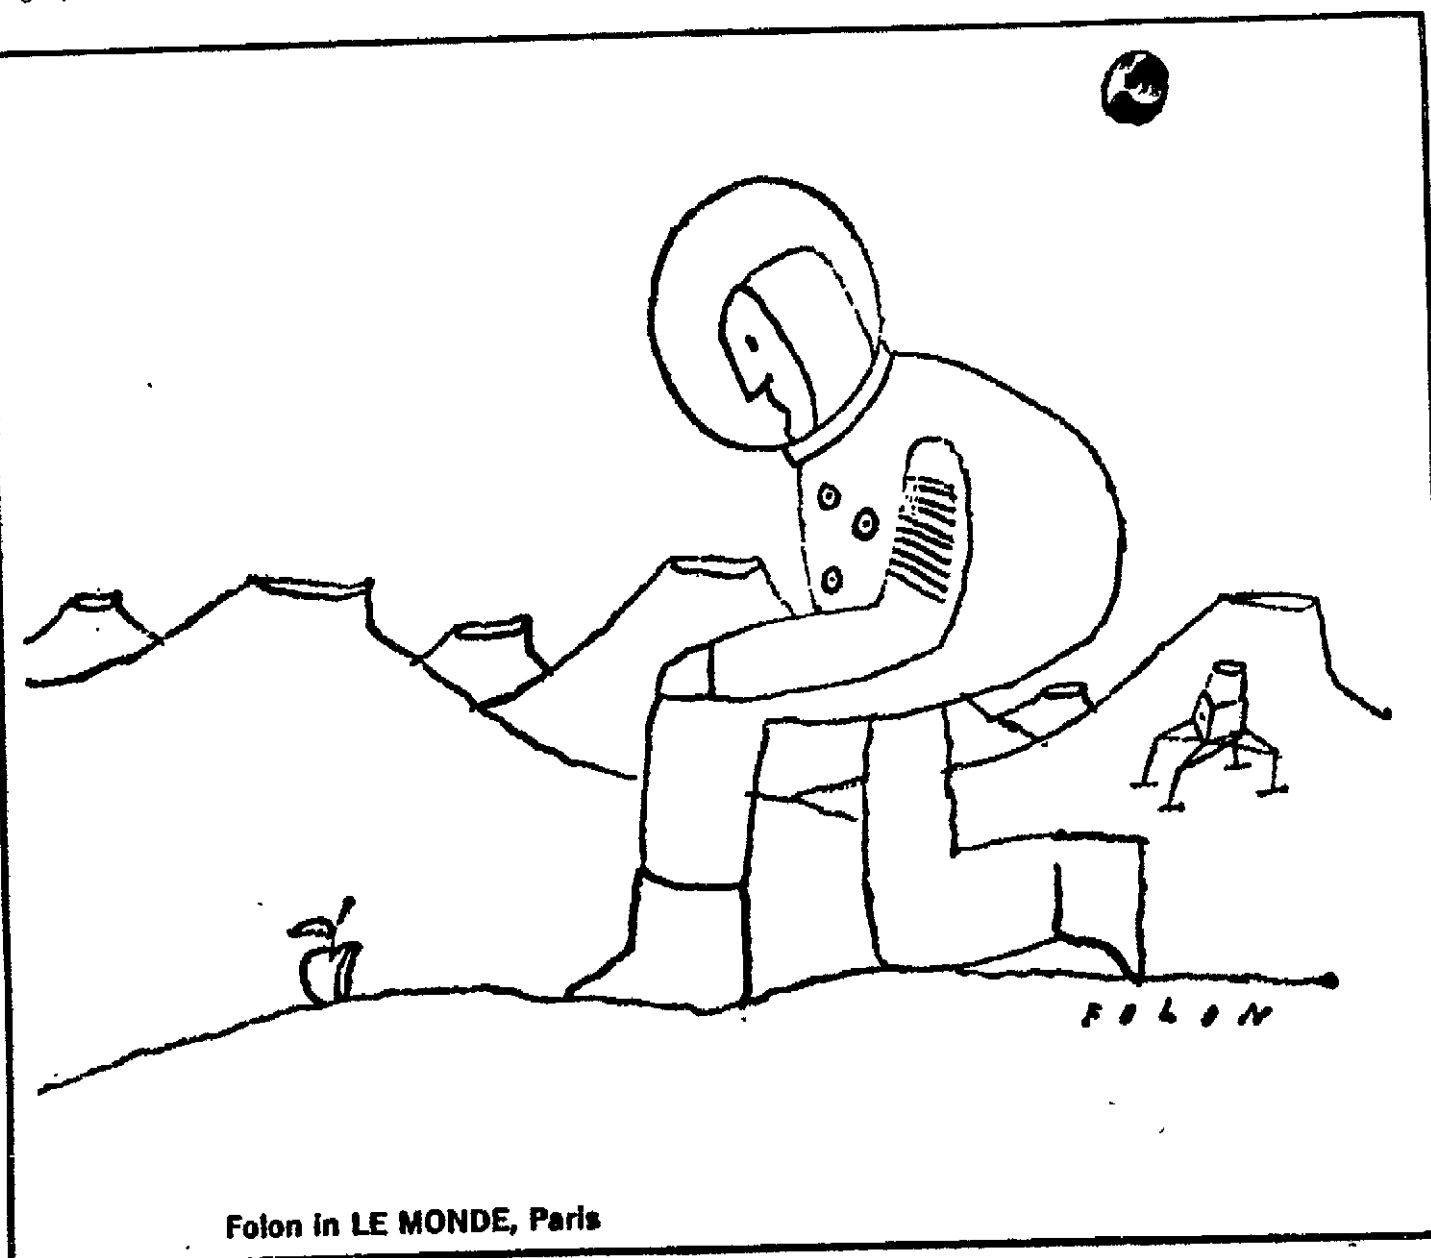

Speaking of Germany, a concrete example of the change in attitudes of the people in a country where once hatred and genocide reigned was brought to our attention by noted philatelist Jacques Minkus.

A special postal cancellation was recently applied by the Main Post Office in Frankfurt to honor a Jewish Book Exhibition sponsored by the local B'nai B'rith.

Instead of burning Jewish books, the Germans now honor them—and publicize the fact on their envelopes.

DID YOU KNOW THAT ... Stamp collectors could benefit from laboratory tests just started by the Post Office in London, aimed at finding a better way to protect stamps from fading ... Recent auctions show that Canadian plate blocks are having a resurgence. Also selling well are France, Spain and Vatican City ... One of the most unusual new issues comes from New Hebrides which produced stamps hailing its timber industry and showing the Kauri Pine. The stamps are printed in sheets of nine on a simulated wood grain background with the border design of the sheets depicting the various stages of the local timber industry. The stamps blend right into the border design of the sheet.

The Chautauqua Phenomenon

By Lillian Mackesy

Appleton had a brief, two-year part in that cultural phenomenon as American as blueberry pie and apple pan dowdy — namely the traveling Chautauqua. Although this circuit Chautauqua stemmed from the original, permanent assembly started in western New York in 1874, it had no official connection with it nor any of its many imitators.

The Assembly at Lake Chautauqua, N.Y., began as a Sunday school teachers' summer school and developed into so great an educational idea that by 1900, 31 states had at least one permanent adult education unit patterned after it. It was natural to borrow the name of Chautauqua. The most noted permanent unit in Wisconsin was established near Madison in 1881, after holding its first meeting at Green Lake a year earlier. Its official name was the Wisconsin State Sunday School Assembly, but everyone called it the Monona Lake Assembly or Chautauqua.

It was these Chautauquas which have been credited with originating the ideas of the summer school movement, correspondence courses and schools and university extension programs. The New York Assembly in 1878 founded the home study course of reading called the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. It has been noted that Appleton women organized one of these early study clubs, but it is possible they began later when the traveling Chautauqua came to town.

Assembly Hall a Tent

The circuit Chautauqua was different from its forerunners. It came to the people with tents; the programs were more informal. The Chautauqua officials brought the huge tent auditorium, the seats to furnish it, the rostrum and the program. The program was a curious mixture of religion, elocution, music, woodlore for the children, political, social and economic discussions on timely topics, and the ever present inspirational speeches dubbed "mother, home and heaven" talks by the circuit managers.

The traveling Chautauqua was an instant success, welcomed with fervor by the culture-starved people of the small towns and rural districts of America. This phase of Chautauqua started in about 1903 and hit its peak in 1924 when an estimated 30 million Americans — one-third of the nation — attended the summer programs. From then on, the Chautauquas began to lose favor; their number dwindled and they died almost as suddenly as they caught on. By 1932 the Chautauqua was dead. Radio was on the scene, cars were more numerous and the world no longer was so isolated.

Tent Chautauqua came to Appleton only two years in a row, the summers of 1906 and 1907. Both years were a financial failure for manager W. O. McClure, but a great success in terms of program and their enjoyment. The first year, 634 season tickets were sold for the 10-day event; the cost was $2.50 a ticket with children's admission to the daily Seton Indian camp (where the boys and girls "lived like their red brothers before the white man came" and learned enough songs and war whoops to give a program) was $1.25.

According to the program printed ahead of time and not necessarily correct, the auditorium tent was the usual big one, 100 feet by 150 feet, with a seating capacity of 4,200. It had flooring for the comfort of the patrons. The seats were ranged in the central portion, 1,200 of them, for the reserved section for season ticket holders with a circle of 3,000 seats forming an amphitheater around the outside circumference of the tent.

Other Tents Set Up

There were other tents among the Pierce Park trees, set up for special service. One was for the young people's club activities, under the supervision of local volunteers. The newspapers noted that a Mrs. C. E. Risser, Chicago club-woman, was to organize the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Society in one of the tents and that Miss Carrie Morgan, of Appleton, was scheduled to present a talk on her European tour during a morning session.

The Seton Indian camp was removed from the main cluster of tents, so that the children could pursue their woodcraft, beadmaking and other activities by themselves (and probably be safely away from the area of the main events so as not to bother the grown-ups). Miss Lillian Ohman was the organizer of the Seton Indian Tribe Youth and the Appleton Post reported that "a goodly number of boys and girls were enrolled for the 10 days and they will delve into the forest lore and wisdom of the Indian," besides living the primitive life among the trees at Pierce Park, just above the ravine. There also were cottage tents for rental to families.

The Rev. George McNutt, billed as "the dinner pail man," saved the Chautauqua program of 1906 by filling in for speakers who didn't show up.

The program was a busy one with speeches in the morning, a concert in the park, "under the trees," rendered by the Appleton Band, then more afternoon speeches followed by a twilight concert, again "under the trees." Every night had its headliner with either the Kaffir Boy's Choir, whistler and magician McCormick and his wonderful trick dog, Bronte, or Rossani "the greatest juggler in America" ending the program as a reward.

The Rev. George L. McNutt, billed as "the dinner pail man," proved to be the man of the 1906 Chautauqua. He was contracted to appear twice on the program, but ended up doing five or six speeches. It seems headliner Robert M. LaFollette couldn't leave his senatorial duties in Washington, so he didn't show. Then, the celebrated elocutionist Katherine Esty-Bowdon didn't arrive for her illustrated recital on "Hiawatha," so the good preacher stepped into the breach with another inspirational talk with humorous bent called "Who's Queer?"

When the Rev. McNutt did speak for himself, the papers said he "touched on the problems of the day — the Negro problem, the immigration problem, capital and labor, the problems of the big cities and the problem of expansion." Before he ended his stint, he also had to speak for another preacher, billed as England's greatest, besides filling in for a missing politician.

personator, who was the director of the Lawrence University School of Expression. Another was the popular contralto Helen J. Waldo.

One of the truly great Chautauqua speakers in 1906 in Appleton was humorist Opie Read, story teller par excellence who was as well known as feminist social reformer Jane Addams and Robert J. Burdette, who gave his famous "The Rise and Fall of the Mustache" at least 4,000 times.

The two headliners at the Appleton Chautauqua both years were Eugene V. Debs, champion of labor, and Col. George W. Bain, of Kentucky. They both could be classified as the traditional "mother, home and heaven" men with Debs the more serious of the two.

The Appleton Crescent reported the Bain speech ecstatically, saying the man came heralded as an orator, a man who can make an audience laugh and cause their tears to flow, and that he "more than fulfilled all expectations". Then, they explained the joke he told, the one that made the people laugh.

Joke of 1906 Speaker

His talk was on modern woman and his thesis was that the upcoming bloomer girl, the militant suffragette, was "not the typical American woman" at all and need not shock anybody. Then he told this story, which evidently brought down the house:

"A bloomer girl on a bicycle trip to a place called Warum (it must be pronounced wear-'em to make the joke come out) did not feel she was on the right road. She dismounted, walked up to a farmer and standing before him in her bloomers, asked: 'Is this the way to Warum?' 'I'm sure I dunno,' said the amazed farmer, 'I never saw them before!'"

It's enough to make one wonder about the Crescent report on Indianan Eugene V. Debs' speech which "electrified the large audience at the Chautauqua."

"Never before has such a lecture been heard in Appleton," the Crescent stated. "Never before such matchless flow of language. Elegant, strong English came forth from his mouth, easy, graceful, like crystal water from a classic fountain. Never before such logic, such passionate appeals, such vivid word pictures."

The crowd must really have liked the speech. They gave Debs the Chautauqua salute, the highest honor ever to be accorded a platform speaker. "Before, during and after his speech, he was vigorously applauded," said the newspaper, "and the Chautauqua salute was repeated at the close of the lecture."

Israel: a Dissenting View

By Francesco Gabrieli

ISRAEL AND THE ARAB REFUSAL: SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS OF HISTORY. By Maxime Rodinson. Seuil: Paris.

Maxime Rodinson is a French sociologist and specialist in Semitic studies who, from his first innocuous study of medieval Arab cuisine, has graduated to more committed themes such as those of his volumes on Israel and capitalism and on Mohammed. In none of them has he attempted to hide his Marxist (though of no party line) convictions and method.

His latest work, "Israel and the Arab Refusal: Seventy-Five Years of History," tackles one of today's thorniest topics, and whoever reads this brilliant display of Jewish intelligence and polemic skill soon becomes aware that the author, determined to be fair and objective on every point, Jewish Arabophiles don't grow on trees. That's why it's intriguing to drop in on one now and then. Maxime Rodinson is a Marxist, a sociologist and a Frenchman (not necessarily in that order) who has been studying the plight of the Arab for many years. In his latest book, "Israel and the Arab Refusal: Seventy-five Years of History" (Israel et le refus arabe: soixante-quinze ans de l'histoire), he contends that the Arabs are quite right in being upset over the planting of an "alien" body into their own century-worn soil. This review, translated from Italy's middle-of-the-road daily Corriere della Sera, was written by Francesco Gabrieli, who finds the volume "jarring" but "stimulating." It is the first of a series of European book reviews to be provided to The Post-Crescent by Atlas News Service.

has been forced to exercise this determination against the interests of the side we should least have expected: Israel itself. The spirit and aim of the book is to shed light, in the name of historical truth and of a morality that seems to need no justification (even for the Marxist Rodinson), on a whole tangle of facts and problems.

These facts have often been obscured or twisted for political motives and by emotionalism in Western Europe and America with the result that the Arab cause is not given its due. Rodinson, however, presents a carefully documented case that takes Israel's motives into consideration — but devotes considerably more warmth to those of her enemies. A Jewish Arabophile is a rare bird these days. But rarer still (in fact nonexistent so far) would be a pro-Israeli Arab, and in this very impossibility, Rodinson might perhaps see a confirmation of his own assumptions.

Common Origin

His central thesis is that the planting of Israel in Palestine meant the occupation of that country, almost wholly Arabized for more than ten centuries, by a people who, though of common origin, were now foreign and completely alien. According to him, therefore, the "Arab refusal" (including terrorism?) is nothing but legitimate resistance to a foreign occupation. From this occupation and abuse, and the corresponding reaction throughout the Arab world, the author outlines the phases and policies that emerged, from the beginnings of Zionism with Herzl and Weizmann to the Balfour Declaration, from the two decades between the wars to the proclamation of the State of Israel and its political and military consolidation, right up to the lightning war of 1967 and the unchanged — and perhaps aggravated — impasse that has resulted.

It is obvious today, he says, that the Six Days War was technically started by Israel under the widely publicized threat of Arab encirclement and aggression. The fighting broke out because of a disastrous combination of circumstances in which extremist tendencies joined forces and gained the upper hand on both sides over factions more disposed to seek compromise. Among the moderates, according to Rodinson, was the rather surprising figure of Nasser, whom he rates a warmonger in words rather than deeds — but who was finally forced to go along with the extremists.

This concept — so different from widely held Western views at that time — should be enough to warn of the bitter taste that many pages of this book will give the average reader, who is generally inclined to go along with Israeli propaganda rather than accept the much less skillfully managed Arab line. Yet a reader with some knowledge of the facts is forced to concede the accuracy of many of the author's corrections of widely accepted factual errors, as well as the truth of his often unpleasant diagnoses.

The point of departure of this wholly Europeanized Jew is his aversion to Zionism, the spiritual parent of the reborn State of Israel. His point of arrival is not — and cannot be — after the fifty years of history we have just lived through — the nonrecognition of Israel's right to live, but he says: "When insistence on a right provokes too many disasters and injustices or even too many practical inconveniences, then the suggestion that that right should be given up may be justified." Hence we now have the prospect of a resurgence of the moderate on both sides: in Israel, someone of the caliber of Sharett or Eshkol, now unfortunately both dead, against Ben Gurion and the military hardliners; among the Arabs, perhaps Hussein and even Nasser — if they can make a compromise solution acceptable to their people.

I repeat that many pages in this book are jarring and even irritating, but at the same time they provide food for thought. It is not a pamphlet in the service of orthodox politics, of which Rodinson shows himself thoroughly independent: it is an intelligent and stimulating book, even if it raises many arguments that cannot possibly be discussed in this space.

FUN WHILE IT LASTED. By Barnaby Conrad. Random. $7.95.

Conrad is one of those dashing, irrepressible figures who probably would have felt more at home in Renaissance times than in the 20th century.

What he offers here is a memoir covering about a dozen years. He begins at the age of 19, when in Mexico he first dabbled in amateur bull fighting. He was a more avid bull ring amateur in Spain during World War II, when he was sent there in the consular service, and was befriended and coached by several of the greatest toreadors. Much of his book is about the thrills and hazards of the cape and sword profession.

But there also was an episode after the war, when, needing a job, he became a so-called "secretary" to aging author Sinclair Lewis; his real position was that of Lewis' "punching bag," he says. This section is an acid portrait of Lewis as a childish and suspicious old man. But Lewis coached Conrad in his writing, and no doubt that helped Conrad write his best seller, "Matador."

The author tells about his other occupations—such as night club pianist in Peru; portrait painter; breeder of sea horses and tropical fish, and saloon operator in San Francisco. He is quite frank about his many love affairs, and almost as frank about his marriages and divorces. He is a name-dropper, having known many celebrities, but he blithely gets away with it.

Conrad, as they say, has been around. In his story there's never a dull moment.

MILES A. SMITH

THE SEMPINSKI AFFAIR. By W. S. Kuniczak. Doubleday. $5.59.

International conspiracy, professional spies and counter-agents, the cold war, individual combat, the double cross, desperate escapes, an assassination plot—and in the midst of it all an amateur adventurer named Oliver Hazard Shippe, a 42-year-old American expert on antiquities.

These are the ingredients of Kuniczak's suspense novel, which follows his popular "The Thousand Hour Day," a story of the fall of Poland in World War II.

Shippe is lured into going in a professional capacity to an unnamed Soviet satellite state, where it takes a while for him to realize that antiquities are not the reason for his presence there. He has become a pawn in an international game of secret organizations.

He becomes involved with a young woman named Kristin, a captive of the plotters, and while he is trying to match wits and guts with the shadowy spies, he fights out the battle for Kristin's sake.

As in many suspense tales, this novel has a great many plot switches and quite a few fancy, superhuman feats of physical endurance. If you like tall yarns, this is your book. It is marked "An Entertainment," and is a rousing example of that category.

GOOD TIME COMING. By Edmund Schiddel. Simon & Schuster. $6.95.

Anson Parris is a 33-year-old publishing executive whose wife Faye is fed up with him.

As the novel opens, Anson has just swung a big deal by getting $1 million for the paperback rights to a novel by David Steen.

Steen, who runs with the swinging crowd, has marital problems of his own. His wife Jeannette is alienated from him and keeps visiting a psychiatrist.

Anson—for no very clear reason—starts living it up. He jumps into bed with assorted females; in the author-film producer-actress crowd he tries the sex orgy circuit; there is a homosexual episode; he takes psychedelic drugs. He and David cuckold each other; Jeannette falls into a sordid encounter with a taxi driver.

The whole thing winds up with a big party that turns into a shambles. In the party's aftermath there is a pat ending in which Anson and Faye decide to settle down with each other.

All in all, this 507-page novel has a lot of sex, a lot of talk about writing and publishing, and a great deal of stuff about the nutty gossip of suburbia.

A Master Storyteller Chronicles Life on 'The Avenue'

THE AVENUE. By R. F. Delderfield. Simon and Schuster. $8.50.

The author of "The Green Gauntlet" and "A Horseman Riding By" has turned his talents in this long (1,032 pages) but enormously enjoyable book to a London suburb which adjoined open country until after World War II. He traces the interwoven lives of several families that lived on the Avenue from the end of World War I through the Depression and World War II.

There is Jim Carver, who comes home from World War I to find his wife dead of influenza. There is Harold Godbeer, solicitor's clerk, who finally marries Eunice Fraser. There are the Friths, the Misses Clegg and a number of minor characters, all carefully developed as they grow older and cope with the often troublous times before and during World War II.

Jim's children grow up; some are a joy to him, others not. The story goes on with Esme Fraser, Eunice's son, who first makes a bad marriage with Elaine Frith, then comes into real happiness with his childhood companion, Judy Carver. Judy grows from a callow teenager, heartbroken when Esme prefers Elaine, into a well-adjusted young woman while Esme pursues his writing career. She marries another, who is lost in the war, and joins the W.A.A.F. before she and Esme come together.

Delderfield is a master of characterization; as the years pass, his characters grow and change in a most life-like manner. None of the people in this book remains a two-dimensional being.

The impact of World War II on the Avenue is well described. When the street is first hit in the early Battle of Britain, Mrs. Frith and her disagreeable son, Sydney, perish in a direct hit. Late in the war a V-1 devastates the other side of the Avenue with heavy loss of life and property; among the victims are Jim Carver's oldest daughter and her husband. Along the way, the residents cope with blackouts, shortages, and the fear and boredom that are so much a part of war, but their determination to take the worst and keep going is never extinguished.

There are good and bad characters among the many in this volume, but in the main, many of the seedier ones improve as the years pass, and the general tone is one of cheer, rather than gloom. The author believes wholeheartedly in sex as a necessary ingredient of a good marriage, but happily for the reader who dislikes sex and violence, he does not go into details beyond the bedroom door.

THE EMPEROR'S SWORD. By Noel F. Busch. Funk & Wagnalls. $5.95.

For a battle which marked the beginning of the end of colonialism, Tsushima is little remarked nowadays. But, as Noel Busch points out in "The Emperor's Sword," the battle had a considerable string of firsts and onlys to its credit.

Most important, the Japanese destruction of an entire Russian fleet in an afternoon showed that an Oriental country could defeat an Occidental one. Arising from that realization came Pearl Harbor, the increasing nationalism of the Far East and finally the end of traditional colonialism in India and Indonesia.

But Tsushima was also notable as the first sea battle in which an armored battleship was sunk by gunfire alone. It was also the first modern battle which resulted in complete destruction of an enemy fleet.

Busch, an old Japan hand, has devoted a disproportionate amount of space to the Japanese side although the lackadaisical voyage of the Russian fleet half around the world is a better human interest story. Casual, opium-ridden and discontented seamen in ancient and weedgrown ships are not a happy theme, but there's a moral in lack of morale.

The author concedes this in a passage of Gibbonesque dignity and balance. Russia's very size, he says, caused a singular disadvantage:

"This was a high degree of internal dissension between a corrupt and ineffectual ruling autocracy on the one hand and a surly and ignorant peasantry on the other, which the shrill complaints of an overly articulate intelligentsia did more to accentuate than to relieve."

One other observation is worth remembering to explain the rise of transistor radios and such-like exports:

"Industry in general was," he says in commenting on the Japanese, "considered not, as it was then and still is in the West, as a means to personal prosperity but rather as the means of national survival."

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Our family likes to eat out in the back yard when the weather is nice, so we have worked hard to make it comfortable—stone patio, barbecue grill, shrubs, tables and chairs—just like a park.

Since the grill is near the garage, my husband recently bought a large piece of thick plywood and attached one end of it with hinges to the side of the garage. The other two corners have hinged legs so the table can be folded up and held against the side of the garage by a hook and eye when not being used.

Now the Head Chef has plenty of elbow room when entertaining guests at a cookout.

Instead of buying the round shower soap on a cord, my husband bores a hole through a large cake of soap, threads a heavy cord through the hole and then ties it.

WINS BY A NECK

DEAR HELOISE:

My daughter recently had her tonsils removed and the doctor suggested an ice collar.

Not having the dollars to spend for something I would probably use only once, I stood there and wondered what Heloise would do . . .

The thought then struck me — those large plastic bags we use for freezing turkeys would be big enough to go around a small child's neck.

So I crushed the ice cubes, put them in the big bag and rolled it (making a tube), then put a towel around it.

Pinned around her neck, it worked nicely and stopped the "ouch!"

Just remember to drain the water every so often.

LET'S SHELVES IT!

DEAR HELOISE:

Simply had to share this space saver with you all.

My son has oodles of indoor games that we didn't want to put in the toy box. So we had them up on the shelf in his closet. I was forever running to get something down for him.

Today I stood back and looked the situation over. Here is what we came up with.

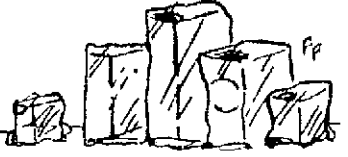

My husband put in two shelves, 12 inches deep, at 10 and 20 inches off the floor in the back of his closet.

My son's clothes still have plenty of hanging space, and he can now reach all his toys himself.

As he gets older, the shelves can hold extra books, shoes, etc.

GOOD COVERAGE

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep these staples clean, I slip a plastic bag or bowl cover over their tops. They're quick to remove and are washable and reusable.

CUSTOM SHIRTTAILS

DEAR HELOISE:

I found the answer to the long, curved shirrtails that curl, the ones many of us like to wear with our shorts and capris.

My daughter's long shirrtails always curled a few minutes after putting them on and so did mine.

So I took a strip of iron-on tape and pressed it onto the very bottom on the inside of the shirrtail. It sure solved our problem.

By the way, I cut the tape in three pieces and then pressed each piece on separately.

Take Care of Your Pet -- and Vet!

By Carole Warner

So you have a new pet!

You have acquired the right type of food, as specified by the person from whom you bought the animal. You have a new collar and leash, brushes, combs and dishes. But have you forgotten something?

You have if you have neglected to take this new member of your family to the veterinarian.

Why?

For your own protection and that of your family, as well as for the health of your pet, a visit to your veterinarian should have top priority.

First, you wouldn't want to bring into the home an animal that might be ill. Nor would you want to lose that new member of the family to disease — especially distemper — which can easily be prevented.

Fortunately, we in the Fox Cities area have a number of well-qualified veterinarians. If you are not already acquainted with a veterinarian, the person from whom you acquired your pet may be able to recommend one for you.

Most veterinarians appreciate an appointment. Then they will be able to devote more time to examining your pets, and giving him the shots that he may need.

Your veterinarian will keep a record of your visit and record all necessary information. He will notify you when your animal needs booster shots. If you should happen to need his services in an emergency, he can, by referring to your pet's record, more quickly and easily diagnose the trouble.

Such information as the dog's age, his general physical condition, his temperament and breed (certain breeds have ailments common to themselves) can help your vet make the right diagnosis and prescribe what is necessary for its return to health.

Depending on the breed, dogs and cats will live, on the average, from 12 to 15 years of age. By giving good physical care and the proper medical help when needed, you can help your pet equal or exceed this average life expectancy.

Many times, medical problems of pets are found too late to effect an adequate cure or comfortable relief. Remember, your pet cannot tell you when something is wrong. Many will even try to hide their problems. Therefore, a program of periodic health examinations will benefit both you and your pet.

Let's go over some routine matters concerning our pet and his health.

First, the young animal should have a routine examination. The various types of immunization should be discussed and a preventive program planned. He should be examined for worms, fleas or any skin problems.

Second, every six months to a year, your pet should visit his doctor. His teeth, skin and temperature should be checked. Any abnormality in behavior should be noted and discussed since this could be a clue to a health problem. His immunizations schedule should be checked and any needed boosters given.

In the first eight to 10 years of life, the health exam will be of a general nature. After 10 years of age, you may want some laboratory work done, such as a blood or urine analysis.

Third, follow your veterinarian's recommendations for any shots or preventive measures. In some parts of our country, a certain disease is more widespread than it is here. If your dog is to go hunting, he should have his rabies immunization; if he is only to be a house pet, then he may be able to do without it.

If your animal is going to be transported to another part of the country, he will need both a health certificate and up-to-date shots.

Your veterinarian can help your pet only as much as you let him. Careful observation of an animal by the master can assist the veterinarian in arriving at a quicker, more accurate diagnosis, and perhaps, even in saving the animal's life.

One last thing: be considerate of your veterinarian. He loves his work, or he wouldn't be in it. Yet he, like all of us, does like his evenings off, his weekends free. If at all possible, and except in cases of emergency, call on your veterinarian only during office hours, and then by appointment.

Alpine Meadows Abound in Alaska

By Clara Hussong

Above timberline, in high mountains all over the world, you will find rock-strewn meadows filled with tiny, colorful flowers. These are called alpine meadows.

The farther north you go, the lower the altitude for timberline, the point at which trees no longer grow. On our trip to Alaska we found alpine meadows at only a few thousand feet. This is due to the short growing season of the far north and the presence of permafrost. Even the low, flat tundras near the Arctic Ocean can be called alpine meadows.

Many of the flowers that grow in this kind of habitat are the same kinds that grow here, but much smaller. On our trip to Alaska we found miniatures of the toadflax or "wild snapdragon," bluebell, fireweed, fringed gentian, sunflower, daisy, lupine and many more. There were also such strange (to us) species as bistort, moss campion, leutkia, and various kinds of mountain heathers and mountain primroses. Some of these we had seen in high places in our western parks.

If you've never seen an alpine meadow, you can get an idea of how beautiful it is by looking at the pictures accompanying the article, "Alpine Summer," in the July issue of Audubon Magazine. In it the author and photographer, Bill Ratcliffe, observes that the tundra, or alpine meadow, is the same the world over.

World Without Trees

"It is the world of no trees," he says, "and if the scientist were to view only a narrow piece of tundra removed from its environment, he would not be able to place it geographically."

So if you want to see an alpine meadow, you don't need to go to the European Alps. You can see beautiful flowery meadows in such western and Canadian parks as Yellowstone, Rocky Mountain, Mt. Ranier, Glacier, Banff and Jasper, as well as in various parts of Alaska.

There are flowery mountain meadows at lower elevations, too, in all the places mentioned above, but here the plants grow at their usual heights. The climate and soil conditions are such that they can grow and flourish as they do at low levels such as are found in Wisconsin, for instance.

In an alpine habitat, however, they grow very slowly, Ratcliffe says in the Audubon article. Some may grow only a third of an inch in 10 years, and may put out only two tiny leaves a year. A moss campion, he says, may take 10 years before it puts out its first blossom. Almost without exception these plants are perennials. An annual has hardly a chance of producing blossoms and fruits (seeds) during one season.

In one of the bookstores in Anchorage we bought "Wild Flowers of Alaska," by Christine Heller, published by the Graphic Art Center, Portland, Ore. It has hundreds of colored pictures of flowers of that state, including those found in alpine meadows.

Violets Love 'Lava Rock'

By Katherine B. Walker

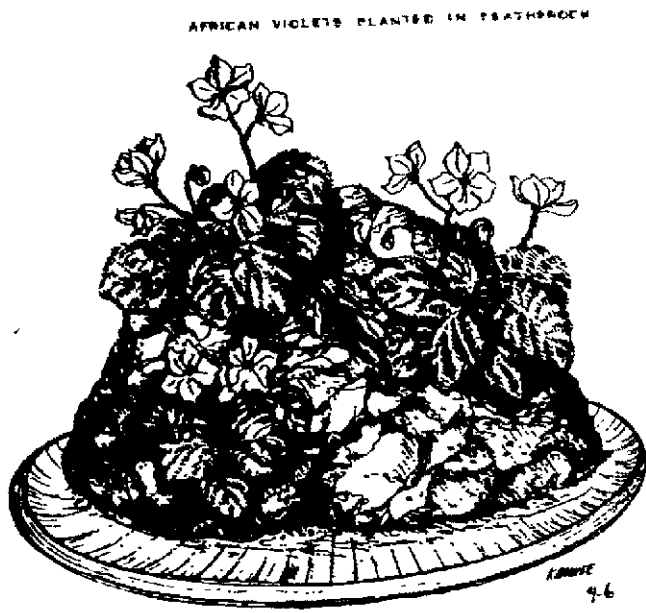

Many years ago I became interested in growing African violets in a material known as cellular lava foam. At least it's known to some people by that name. To me, it's lava rock. The stuff looks like a rock when seen from any distance; close up, it resembles sea-froth that has solidified. It is lightweight, a chunk weighing only about a fifth as much as a real rock of equal size would weigh, and it is rather widely used for decorative purposes (indoor waterfalls, etc.) where the weight of real stones would make their use impractical. When thoroughly soaked, it can be worked with almost any tool you happen to have around the house. Wear heavy gloves when working with it; it can slice your fingertips like a thousand tiny knives.

Through experimenting with it, I have found that the minimum height for a lava rock on which you wish to grow an African violet is three inches, and the diameter should be no less than seven inches. It can be much thicker and broader, if you wish. A planting pocket should be no larger than necessary to accommodate the plant's roots with a little crowding, and only as much soil should be used as is necessary to hold the plant in place. Gouge out the hole with a heavy screwdriver, or use a large bit. Saw the base of the rock off flat, to provide a steady foundation, but leave the rest of the rock roughly rounded.

Beneath the rock, use a watertight saucer not much larger in diameter than the rock itself. Watering should be done from above, in the normal fashion, with sufficient excess to fill the saucer. The plant should not need additional water until the saucer is bone-dry.

Lava rocks offer many good things for plants. Their porous composition provides aeration for roots, and excellent drainage, yet the material holds moisture over a long period. It will also retain plant nutrients if these are applied as a solution. Inquire at a stone yard or a building supply house; if you don't get any response when you ask for lava rocks, try asking for cellular lava foam! That ought to get attention, even if you can't find the rocks.

I'm experimenting now with some Tom Thumb orchids (the babies of miniatures) growing on lava chunks. I'm hoping the material will solve some of my watering problems with these little treasures. If it does, I'll report on it later.

kept under them for as long as they live. That would rule out my plans to transplant the small plants into the garden. What advice do you have about this?

A. Go ahead and get your Gro-lux lights, and forget what you were told about plants having to stay under them forever. I have started plants under these lights, then moved them outdoors, I've started plants outside and moved them under the lights, I've shifted plants back and forth more times than I could count, and they've done splendidly. The only thing you will have to watch is hardening of the seedlings or protecting them when they are first set out, and this has to be done with most nursery stock.

To increase readers' understanding and enjoyment of indoor gardening, Katherine B. Walker has compiled the "Indoor Gardener's Encyclopedia," a glossary of professional terms and advice for the amateur grower. Questions and Answers

Q. I got an amaryllis a couple of years ago and took care of it after flowering just like the directions said. Rested it for a few months, repotted, and got nothing but leaves for my trouble. The florist said I had put it in too big a pot, which didn't make sense, because it was the same pot it came in originally. How can I get it to flower again?

A. It is possible that your amaryllis was forced the year you got it, and needed a year of growth without bloom to rest. If you have given the bulb good care, including feeding it and resting it, it should bloom this year.

Q. Since I didn't win the contest you had some time ago, will you please tell me the title of the book (I lost the clipping that gave it) and tell me where I can buy it?

A. It is "The World Book of House Plants", published by World Publishing Company. It can be ordered through your local bookstore.

Q. I planned to install Gro-lux fluorescent lights so that next spring I could start tomatoes and other vegetables which need to have an early start. Now a nursery tells me that any plants which are started under these lights must be

Range and Variety Of Ornamental Plants Virtually Limitless

By Uncle Jack

One of the delights of the home gardener in our climate is the gradual discovery that the range and variety of ornamental plants is virtually limitless.

I fancy that I have had a somewhat better than average experience in puttering about the backyard—at least in duration of the hobby—but I have been pleasantly surprised this year with the discovery of a thrifty, hardy, prolific and beautifully ornamental plant known as the hosta.

I must confess also that I learned about this distinctive foliage plant from a comparative amateur—my daughter-in-law.

My son and his wife bought a new home a few years ago, and thereby inherited a row of hostas that had been set out by the previous owner. So rapidly did they spread and multiply that Linda suggested that some of the clumps could be divided and the surplus offered to me, and idea that I found eminently sound.

Ergo, I now have a plant that will prosper in the most inhospitable spaces around my house—the sunless, dry and otherwise difficult edge between walk and house that is beneath the wide roof overhang of our one-story home.

The bloom of the hosta is relatively insignificant. But its foliage is gorgeous, with the various strains producing in green, yellow green, gray, blue-gray, white and yellow margined, and probably yet other combinations that I have not yet found in perusing the catalogs and the reference books in search of more knowledge about my new plant acquisitions.

For the beginner, perhaps the most appealing characteristic of this plant is its hardiness. It was already late in the spring when we divided the clumps, chopping roughly with a garden spade. We set the pieces about a foot apart, and watered well. Within a month they were as healthy and prosperous as they had been in their original bed. Within a few years we will have a solid mass of the richly-colored leaves close against the basement foundation where we have had repeated failures in attempting to introduce other flower and plant varieties.

Blaze of Glory Covers State In Autumn

By Lola Frazier Olsen

Wisconsin parks and historical sites are beautiful at any time of the year, but they take on a special blaze of glory when autumn spreads its glory throughout the state.

Devil's Lake State Park, with its magnificent scenery, is even more exciting when the hardwoods have added their reds and yellows to the lake's cool coloring.

Naturalist John Muir often enjoyed the view on state 51, south of Poynette, where blue, sapphire hilltops appear to have been in a golden setting. The emerald appearance of the evergreens adds to the jewel-like scenic beauty that unfurls itself to the western horizon. A marker set in a small park beside the highway, points out the place where Muir stopped to gaze on his frequent trips to and from Madison. How the blue hills in the distance must have refreshed him when he walked from the University to his home!

The high bluffs of Perrot State Park, overlooking the winding Mississippi, seem to present an even more splendid panorama when the foliage forms a colorful accent to the mighty river.

The stony heights of Rib Mountain are softened by the white birches with their yellow crowns. The birch trunks form a picture frame through which can be seen the far-flung flatlands.

Autumn Spotlight

A wild, scenic canyon from the west seems to have been dropped into northern Wisconsin where the Bad River flows through Copper Falls State Park. The cascades and waterfalls take on an added beauty when Autumn turns her spotlight of colors on the trees rimming the rocky gorges and the rushing waters.

Potawatomi State Park, where Green Bay and Sturgeon meet, is especially colorful in the fall. Government Bluff, a famous limestone headland, is breathtaking not only from the bays on one side but because of the trees growing all around it—trees that seem afire with red, yellow and orange highlights.

Peninsula State Park, near Fish Creek, lies between Green Bay and Lake Michigan. The cool, almost aloof, expanses of water contrast vividly with the flaming trees and shrubs visible on the shore side. Wisconsin's peninsula thumb looks as though it had been holding a painter's palette and had become smeared with gold, green and red paints.

This state of great impasse:
No matter when I use the car,
I have to buy more gas!

LUCILLE KLEIST

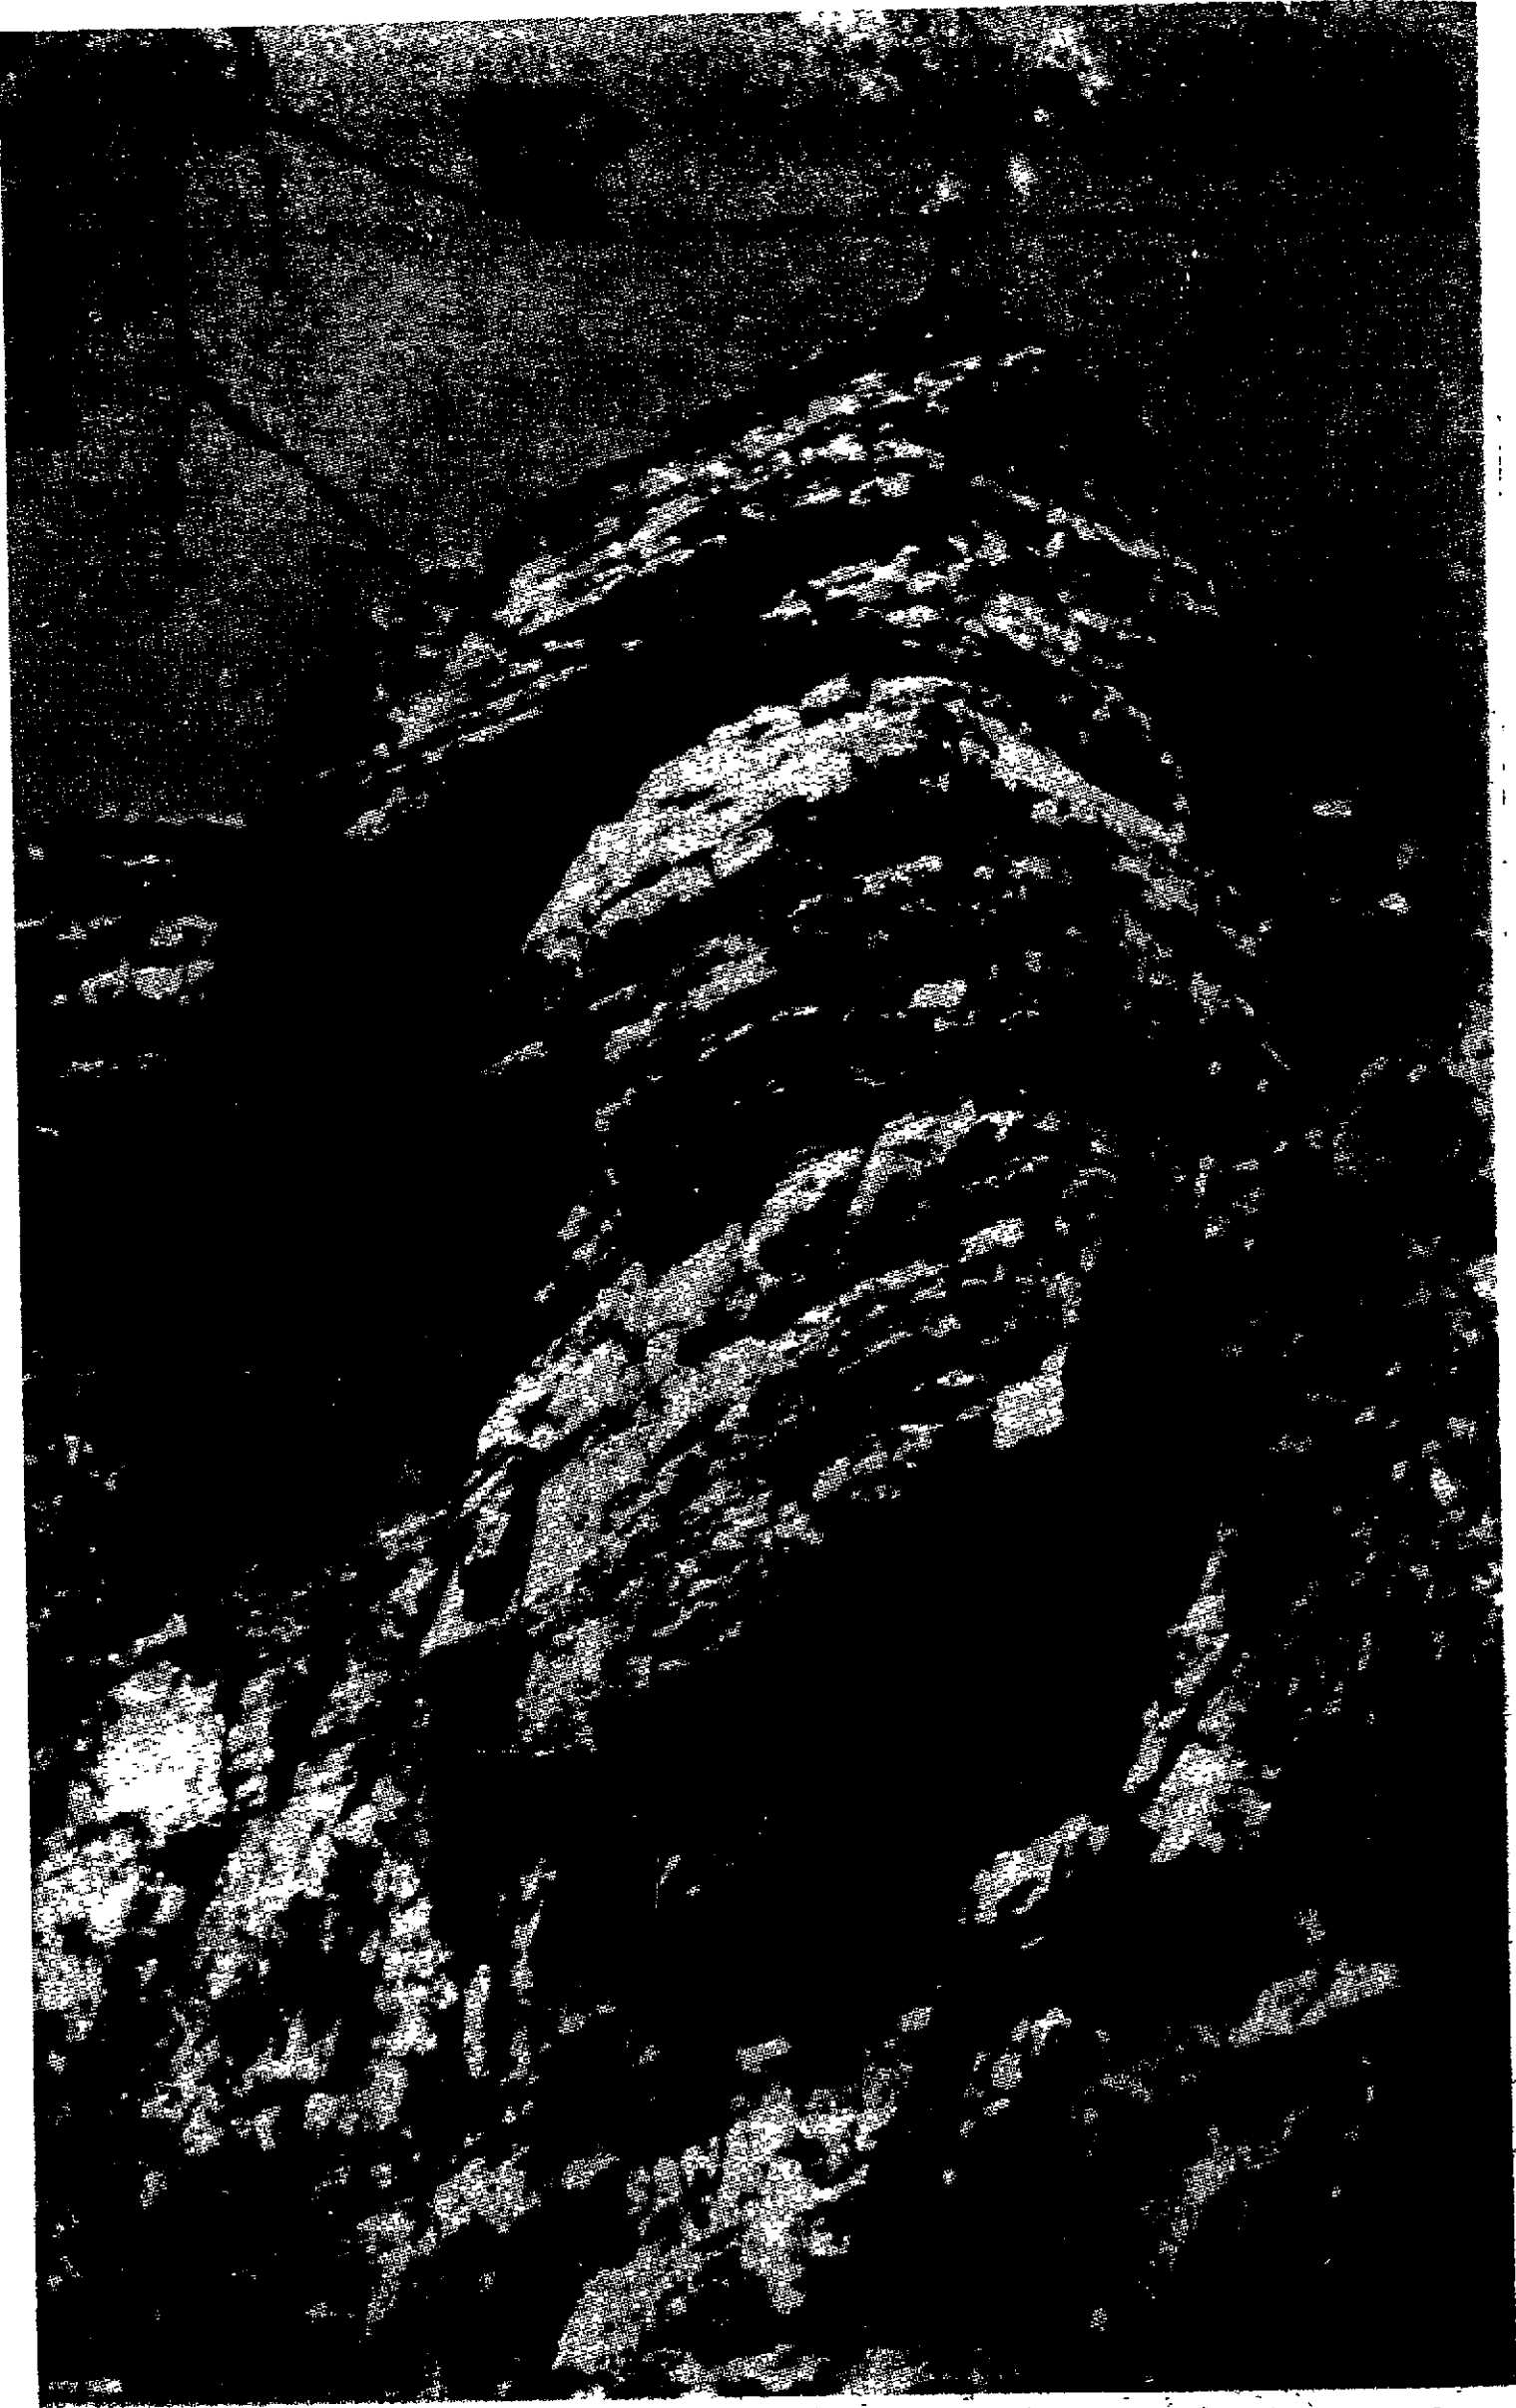

Many parks have observation towers that provide superb views of the surrounding countryside. The climb is well worth the effort, and the small tinge of fear that sometimes accompanies the climb is soon overcome by a feeling of elation at seeing, even for a short time, the same unrolling beauty viewed, by a bird in flight.

The unusual diversity of scenic splendor in Wisconsin is easily accessible to almost everyone. Take a trip this fall and store up some of Wisconsin's golden beauty for the white winter ahead.

Sargent's luck to change?

By Frank Langley

NEW YORK — Dick Sargent is in one of the most enviable positions a television actor can enjoy. As the replacement for Dick York as Samantha's husband, Darrin, on "Bewitched," he is virtually assured of instant success.

"It certainly is a different feeling for me," the tall, likable actor said. "I think I hold some kind of record in Hollywood for having done pilots that sold but never made it.

"I even did one with Dana Wynter that was an immediate sale but never got on the air. She changed her mind and decided she didn't want to do a series. And would you believe it was the 'Green Acres' premise?"

Sargent's long list of television credits includes a starring role in the "Broadside" series, which kept him from originally getting the "Bewitched" role five years ago.

"I've got so many of these flukes in the past," he said, "but the one that bothers me the most is 'The Tammy Grimes Show.' She is a great performer, but the series did so much damage to everyone connected with it. It's like a bad dream."

If that was a bad dream, Sargent is happily in for some good ones, starting with the new TV season. He is so effusive about his feelings for Elizabeth Montgomery that he almost stutters when he talks about her.

"We have the greatest rapport I've ever enjoyed with anyone," he said, "and I just hope that it comes over on the screen. I had only one problem when we started shooting and that was corrected right away.

"I seem to have some of the characteristics of a Charlie Brown. You know, the nice little guy who gets all the feminine sympathies without even trying.

"I had always assumed that Darrin was such a character and when we started shooting the first show, I let that aspect come out. And I was wrong.

"In all the years of watching the show, it had never occurred to me that Darrin is actually a very strong character. When you think about it, he really has to be to control his wife's magic. Did you ever notice that she never uses the magic except as a last resort?"

Although that was the only problem of any proportion, Sargent later admitted that there has been a raft of minor situations. It seems that the company has been together for five years and everyone is acutely aware of the character relationships from actors to carpenters.

After a series of disappointments, Dick Sargent's luck should change as he takes over the role of Darrin in "Bewitched."

"I'm the new kid on the block," Sargent said, "and I have to feel my way around. And it's kind of embarrassing when you play a scene and you see a prop man or electrician shaking his head and saying, 'No, that won't work.' But I watch them and listen and I think they've helped me get the feel of things."

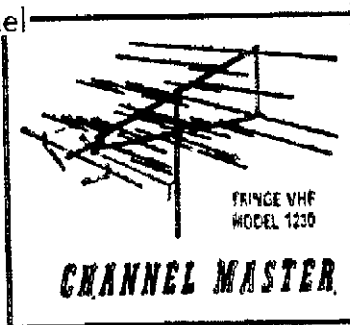

Whether or not he really has gotten the feel of things on "Bewitched" will only be known over the next five, 10 or 15 years.

Twiggy's run-in with Hussey

By Hy Gardner

Q: Who was the actress who almost broke up the romance between Twiggy and Justin de Villeneuve? — Brenda Williams, San Diego.

A: The Hussey was Olivia. Twiggy's ruffled feathers flew back in place when Justin explained he was only "coaching" the then 17-year-old actress. (From the raves his student won in "Romeo and Juliet" his "coaching" must have been brilliant.)

Q: In 1927 I saw Jack Dempsey play the role of "Tiger Dillon" in a New York theater. Will you ask him, if he hadn't picked boxing, would he have made acting his career? — Mrs. Sadie Baumgarten, Middle Village, N.Y.

A: "I never played in 'Tiger Dillon,'" the popular champ says. "My only Broadway show was David Belasco's 'The Big Fight.' I made a Hollywood movie serial in 1920, played the Pantages vaudeville circuit, and made many personal appearances in theaters, clubs, and fairs. But me as an actor? Nothing! And it's still the same."

Q: After all the shooting Elliot Ness was involved in (portrayed by Robert Stack in "The Untouchables") did he die as he lived — violently? — Mrs. Marie Greer, Richmond, Va.

A: No. Heroic G-Man Ness passed away in bed on May 7, 1957, at the age of 54. Married to Elizabeth Anderson Seaver, had one son, Robert Warren.

Q: Wasn't Duke Ellington (who was honored with a 70th birthday party by President Nixon) a steady visitor to the White House long before the incumbent dreamed he'd live there? — Arlene Wilde, San Antonio.

A: Yes, when he was a small lad, his father was a White House butler. The Duke's one of the few Americans alive who's met eight Presidents.

Q: Will one-time movie star Sen. George Murphy run again? How does he feel about the sex in today's movies and Broadway plays? — Grace Melan, Sacramento.

A: "I've never stopped running — and now I'll step up the pace," replies the Senator. "Along with a great majority of the public, I am offended by so much nudity and candor. However, I feel that once the public's good manners and taste have overcome curiosity, this fad will go the way of our once-profitable topless bars in California. They used to be 'in,' but I am now told their business is way off."

Q: What was the controversial comment about entertaining GIs in Vietnam recently made by Raquel Welch? — Henry Simon, St. Petersburg, Fla.

A: Is this the crack you refer to? "Sending actresses like me to Vietnam to entertain the troops is like teasing a caged lion with a piece of raw meat . . . I think it would be best if we stayed home and the government sent off troupes of prostitutes instead."

Q: I understand David Merrick still hasn't given 20th Century Fox permission to release the Barbra Streisand "Hello, Dolly!" film. What's he waiting for? — Grace Armstrong, Dallas.

A: More money. "When they sweeten the pot and up the ante, I'll say okay," Mr. Merrick says. Even then, the Broadway hit with Pearl Bailey and Cab Calloway will continue to run since Merrick believes a live show can always hold its own against a movie.

Q: Isn't Leslie Uggams a Sammy Davis discovery? — D. J. Blum, Madison, Wis.

A: No. At the age of 14 Miss Uggams won $12,500 as a contestant on "Name That Tune." Mitch Miller, in the studio audience, was impressed enough to hire her on the spot and make her a star. She's now 26 and poised to launch a reahhhly Big Series of her own.

New movie series on ABC

By Don Royal

Among the stars on ABC-TV's $16 million "Movie of the Week" series are Sammy Davis Jr., Walter Brennan, Janet Leigh, Ray Milland, Gene Tierney, Robert Cummings, George Maharis, Sebastian Cabot, Dorothy Malone, Ralph Bellamy, Elsa Lanchester, Don Murray, Ken Berry, Pat O' Brien, Eva Gabor, Jill St. John, Dina Merrill, Milton Berle, Jack Albertson, Paul Ford, Ricardo Montalban, Ruth Buzzi, Michael Parks, Lee Majors, Marvin Gaye, France Nuyen, Paul Lukas, Joey Heatherton, Keir Dullea, Bradford Dillman, Rosanno Brazzi, Edward Mulhare, Chill Wills, Rick Nelson, Carol Lynley, Eve Arden, Nina Foch, Darren McGavin, Patrick Macnee, Robert Hooks and Connie Stevens. That's definitely $16 million worth of stars.

This 90-minute series is to air every Tuesday night from 7:30-9 this season. Barry Diller, ABC vice president for feature films and program development — East Coast, is in charge of the network project.

Says Diller of the project: " 'Movie of the Week' includes 25 original motion pictures made especially for television. There is to be drama, mystery-suspense, comedy, action-adventure and film biography.

"The 90-minute form provides us with the opportunity to do justice to that special area of story ideas which does not quite work in the standard one- and two-hour television program forms," says Diller.

"Unlike previous movies-for-television packages, 'Movie of the Week' is drawing its films from several production companies, both here and abroad, and coupling the individual movie to the company best equipped to produce it. This approach takes into account not only the production company's experience with certain story formats, but also its ability to enlist the talents of the most appropriate producers, writers and stars.

"We view 'Movie of the Week' as an excellent opportunity to further expand the scope of network television. We have been attempting to build into each movie maximum viewer appeal, which can hold its own as an alternative to the continuing series form."

The wide variety of movies scheduled among the 25 programs reflects much research as to audience appeal of various themes.

There is the comedy western, "The Over-the-Hill Gang"; the science-fiction "The Immortal"; the sensitive contemporary "Seven in Darkness" tells the story of a group of blind people who seek to grope their way to civilization in the wake of a plane crash.

drama "The Ballad of Andy Crocker"; the stylistic action-adventure "The Monk."

Each picture has been designed for visual excitement, fascinating story idea and lively pacing of plot.

There is, for example, "Wake Me When the War Is Over," a comedy starring Ken Berry as a bumbling Army lieutenant who accidentally parachutes into Nazi Germany during WWII and is hidden away by an anti-Nazi baroness. When the war ends, the baroness decides not to tell him so, and when he escapes he continues to "fight the great war." Eva Gabor, Werner Klemperer, Jim Backus and Hans Conreid costar.

"The Over-the-Hill Gang" brings together four great veteran actors in novel western roles. The old-timers are played by Walter Brennan, Pat O' Brien, Edgar Buchanan and Chill Wills, all former Texas Rangers — and all over 60. When they set out to clean up a lawless town in their old age, they find their skills aren't what they once were — but their wits are. Rick and Kris Nelson, Andy Devine and Gypsy Rose Lee are also featured.

In the dramatic vein, there is the suspense drama "The Surrogate." With philosophic overtones, it tells of the death struggle of Darren McGavin as an American guerrilla fighter on a small, deserted, sub-tropical island in the Pacific, against a Communist enemy. It's a real cliff-hanger, and we won't reveal the suspenseful details here. Broderick Crawford, James Whitmore and Skip Homeier are also starred.

Another movie designed as a spellbinder is "Seven in Darkness," the story of a group of blind people who must pick their way out of a treacherous forest area after their plane crashes in a remote mountainous region in the United States. Among the stars: Milton Berle, Dina Merrill, Barry Nelson and Alejandro Rey.

Sophisticated humor abounds in "Three's A Crowd," a movie about a man who commits inadvertent bigamy. After the apparent death of his wife in a plane crash, he remarries, only to learn that she survived both the crash and being washed ashore on a desert island.

The macabre intensifies "Daughter of the Mind," a ghostly drama which concerns a Nobel Prize scientist haunted by the (imagined?) spirit of his deceased daughter. Ray Milland and Gene Tierney head the cast, which also features Don Murray and George Macready.

"Movie of the Week" turns film biography for "The Unfinished Journey of Robert Kennedy," made with the full cooperation of the Kennedy family.

Award-winner David L. Wolper produced the film, which includes privately filmed sequences of the late senator never before shown on television.

(Director Mel Stuart was also responsible for the two "Making of a President" films and "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich.")

"Blue Water Gold" — an underwater action-adventure movie — is being produced by Metro-Media Productions, the same company that produced the "Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" for ABC. This movie introduces a new star, Aron Kincaid, and you'll be seeing Keir Dullea, Bradford Dillman, Ricardo Montalban and France Nuyen.

Thomas-Spelling Productions, a leader in contemporary drama, offers "The Ballad of Andy Crocker," the story of a returning Vietnam veteran, played by Lee Majors, who finds his world has changed. The film features the acting debut of singer Marvin Gaye. The same studio is producing "The Pigeon," with Sammy Davis Jr., Pat Boone and Dorothy Malone.

Screen Gems is providing the series with such light-hearted larks as "In Name Only," with Michael Callan, Ann Prentiss, Paul Ford, Eve Arden, Ruth Buzzi and Elsa Lanchester; and "Gidget Grows Up," with Karen Valentine as a new Gidget, supported by Robert Cummings, Edward Mulhare, Nina Foch and Paul Peterson.

"Movie of the Week" roams the globe to put these talents to work, and productions ranges from Hollywood to Malta, from New York to Spain, from London to Nassau.

Altogether, with stars, stories producers, and locations, it adds up to $16 million worth of "new look" for movies on television.

This is the OLD west, and you'd better believe it. Edgar Buchanan, Chill Wills, Walter Brennan, Gypsy Rose Lee and Pat O'Brien are shown in a scene from "The Over-the-Hill Gang," one of 25 movies in ABC's new-for-TV 90-minute films for Tuesday evenings this fall.

Super group's first album—is it super?

By David F. Wagner

The formula for creation of a "super group" is to take at least two big name rock stars from separate backgrounds and place them in the same combo. The first truly super "super group" is Blind Faith, comprised of Steve Winwood (late of Traffic and previously Spencer Davis Group), Eric Clapton and Ginger Baker (two-thirds of disbanded Cream) and formerly obscure Rick Grech (of an English group called Family). The odds are strong we'll see more of these combinations in the future, especially considering the massive success of Blind Faith's first concerts, both in England and the U. S.

Whatever unexpected gatherings take place in the future, Blind Faith really started it all. What of Blind Faith?

The name of the new "super group" is a literal expression of at least a couple of members' religious beliefs. Winwood's "Can't Find My Way Home" shows an anti-materialistic desire to be spiritually pure (or perhaps to become purely a spirit). Vague and incomplete phrases speak of finding someone: "You are the reason I've been waiting so long." Is the "you" Eric Clapton? Steve also speaks of being lost and wasted and not finding "home." (Sweet Loretta Martin of the Beatles' "Get Back" may be able to go home, with her Mama waiting for her and everything, but who else finds it so easy?) "Somebody holds the key," but Steve "ain't got the time" and is "wasted." Sad, perhaps, but the best cut on "Blind Faith" (Atco SD 33-304A). (Incidentally, the A at the end of the record number indicates the cover, which is shown at the right. If it has a B at the end, a picture of the group substitutes for the 11-year-old girl, who looks suspiciously like she could be Baker's daughter.) "Can't Find My Way Home" is handled with utmost delicacy. Steve's voice is at its purest — a fine, high tenor; not really the falsetto some have called it. Guitars and drums are in a wonderful conjunction of understatement.

Clapton's "Presence of the Lord" in some ways answers Winwood's despair with a confession of faith in the form of a beautiful hymn. Where Steve states, "Somebody holds the key," Eric says, "I can open any door." He disclaims any personal power, however: "Everybody knows the secret; everybody knows the score."

Though Steve sings "Presence" very well, as he does all six numbers, I think Eric should have sung this himself. Firstly, whatever his shortcomings as a vocalist, the extremely personal statement, and very clear message to us, deserved Eric's personal attention. Leaving the lead vocal duties to another makes it seem secondhand or just another song, which it certainly isn't. Secondly, had he sung it, he might have kept out of mischief; i. e., his totally wrong-headed, misplaced, flashy-dashy, I'm-not-Hendrix-yet-but-I'm-trying guitar solo. Seriously, would we accept this bridge if it weren't Clapton? Would we allow it if it weren't his song? Thankfully, it's short and as he pulls in and wah-wahs to the end, we can only wonder what Winwood might have "favored" us with were he not singing.

I only mention the reference to Winwood's taste because of a small interim piece between an excitingly-executed "Well All Right" (BUDDY HOLLY LIVES) and "Presence." The Holly song ends and a beat later there's this dreadful little third rate jazz bit in which Winwood on piano gets progressively triter. I can't imagine what it's supposed to mean, save to get us on a different wave length for "Presence." Whatever, it doesn't work.

Two other Winwood pieces begin each side. "I Had to Cry Today," over-long (8:49) and reminiscent of the first Traffic album ("Mr. Fantasy"), tends to weld his voice too closely to the instruments, losing the subtle shadings and nuances that deserve to stand a bit apart. Still, it is an adequate, all right song. But quite unintentionally, the very distinctive and prominent bass pattern reminds me so strongly of a novelty song of some time ago ("Please Mr. Custer") that the whole thing never quite makes it for me.

"Sea of Joy" is a simple, attractive sort of thing which I could believe Winwood writes in his sleep. Absolutely unforced and pleasant, it is enhanced by some violin work (either two or double tracked) — a sideline of Grech's. That bit of unexpected, rather country sound, makes side two worth hearing.

The only track unmentioned is the 15:20 "Do What You Like," by Baker. Every critic I've read has hated it; but in truth, it doesn't get tiresome until everybody is called upon to do his thing whether he has anything to say. Steve's is a one-handed organ solo which is restrained beyond belief. Clapton's guitar is meatier and the listener should stay with this until he's finished. The tone is crystalline; more like what "Presence" needed. Well, in between chanting we get an almost invisible, but long, bass solo by Rick and Baker's so-so drum solo. Then, the whole thing craps out along absurdist lines — probably Winwood's idea.

Has the super group produced a super album? No. But it's an album with many nice (there's an indefinite word) features, and as so many critics have predictably said, I can hardly wait for the second lp.

As mentioned near the outset, Blind Faith's religious ideas come across occasionally, which has been a fairly significant trend in rock during the last year or so. The "Back to God" trend, if not crusade, has seen Quicksilver Messenger Service ("Pride of Man"), the Who ("Tommy") and even John Lennon ("The Ballad of John and Yoko") as its exponents. And now Blind Faith. It's fitting. I seem to recall some critics who almost thought Clapton could walk on water. Here's his chance.

Under the Album Covers

Motown is up again

By Mary Campbell

The fortunes of Motown accelerate and hit the brakes. Once, everybody was listening to the Motown sound. Then there was trouble in Motor City. Motown began to be thought of as too smoothly packaged, and the rougher Memphis sound came up. Motown's three top writers, Holland-Dozier-Holland, backed out of the garage; there was dissension among the Supremes, who got new billing and partial new membership.

But now Motown is pulling up again. A Stevie Wonder song was No. 4 on July 26, and David Ruffin and the Supremes were on the singles chart.

And so were Smokey Robinson and the Miracles, on the Tamla label, twice—with "Dog-gone Right" at No. 36 and "Abraham, Martin and John" at No. 44.

Smokey Robinson and the Miracles have been with Motown for the whole ride. Robinson now is one of four vice presidents of the company, working with new talent.

The group was formed by the kids when they were students in Detroit junior high schools—Robinson, Bobby Rogers, Ronnie White, Pete Moore and Marv Tarplin. There also was a girl named Claudette, but she has been Mrs. Robinson for 10 years, and while she still records with the group, she doesn't make personal appearances with it any more.

Robinson remembers that they met Gordy in 1957 when he was producing records but before he formed Motown. "We had gotten out of high school that June. We went for an audition for some guy from New York to sing some tunes that I had written. Barry was involved in writing some songs for some people this guy handled, and he was at the audition. The guy told us he couldn't use us, but Barry met us outside and hired us. We did background work for him at first.

"Then the Silhouettes got a No. 1 hit record, 'Get a Job.' We did an answer tune, 'Got a Job,' our first recording." The flip side was "Mama Done Told Me" written by Robinson.

Robinson, who seems to take things in stride, says, "My life revolves around singing, writing and producing. I can't say I prefer one above the others."

"I love personal appearances. I'm sure all the guys feel the same way. But we don't do many any more. The guys have personal business interests in Detroit now, and I'm involved in the company. But we do go every other weekend to colleges around the nation. And we occasionally do two weeks in a place. It's really a gas. I think it is almost something we have to do—a personal satisfaction."

"It makes me feel bad about my wife's case. When I made her stop working with us, we were working ridiculously hard—doing 50 one-nighters in a row. She was losing weight and going into bad health. She must feel bad sometimes, not going with us. But she's got her hands full now."

Mrs. Robinson's hands are full of year-old Barry, for Barry Gordy, William—Smokey's name—and Borope, for Bobby, Ronny and Pete Robinson.

"You want to see a picture of him?" Robinson asks. "I have hundreds."

Robinson says, "When we first started to travel on the road, all the guys would stay in one big room and my wife would have a room by herself. She'd sit up all night, afraid. She'd never been away from home. I asked her to marry me and her parents thought we were too young, but they agreed. We were 18."

"The first five or six years of the Miracles' career were really rough, but I think it was great because it gives us an insight that people do not have who don't go through the struggle. It is a hard, cruel business of here today and gone tomorrow and you can't let it make you think you're superhuman."

"What kept us together this long is that we love and understand each other. When you're involved in a group you have to have it."

Missing from schedule before starting

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Missing from the television season that is about to start is one show for which there was simply no place in the schedule.

The show, a comedy about two airline stewardesses, is in full production in London, Venice, Rome and New York despite the fact that it has no place to land.

Nine half-hour episodes have been filmed so far of the currently untitled series, which first was called "Meet Millie" and then "Up She Goes."

The man behind the program is Sheldon Leonard, one of the most successful producers in television, who is now under exclusive contract to NBC.

The show, which stars English comedienne Millicent Martin and American Patte Finley, simply could not be fitted into NBC's fall schedule. The network added only seven shows — one of which is Leonard's "My World and Welcome To It."

"Where is the time slot I need between 8:30 and 9?" Leonard asked. "Sunday, I don't want. There are three movie nights. 'The Virginian' is on Wednesday. What am I down to?"

"We're meticulously doing this thing—forgive my pompous attitude—like a Rolls Royce project. So we're doing a project with no time available for it."

Most likely, the show will be worked into NBC's lineup at midseason. But if it isn't then Leonard will run into the problem of keeping his cast together after completing the first 16 episodes.

Leonard is best known to the public for his gangster roles in the movies and his later television parodies of them. But his real success has been as the creative power behind such series as Danny Thomas, Dick Van Dyke, Andy Griffith, "Gomer Pyle" and "I Spy."

However, his last series, "My Friend Tony," was a flop. But he credits that to its placement at 10 p.m. Sundays, an hour when its teen-age idol, Enzo Cerusico, would be least likely to attract a young audience.

Leonard sat at the end of a deeply tufted brown sofa in his office at Paramount Studios. Behind him, near his desk, a sculptured horse's head reared out from the wall. Occasionally, Leonard lighted the stub of an expensive-looking cigar, but mostly he used it to stab the air emphasizing his points.

"There are a great many things wrong with television," he said.

"From my point of view the circumstances are such that a show can't survive on its merits.

"Danny Thomas took 11 years to establish, but you more program turnover than he said. 'Dick Van Dyke' canceled at the end of its first year. In the next three years became a show business end."

He waved the unit on about. "Gomer Pyle, Andy Griffith—not one of these shows could have survived today. know, if a show doesn't make by the eighth or ninth program they're already lighting candles for the head of casket."

Impressionism in black and white

By Pierre Thonon

Emile Degelin, the Belgian director, recently finished his third feature-length film, "Palabre," which is probably also his most interesting from an international point of view. "Palabre" tells the story of three young male Africans, scholarship students at the University of Louvain, who spend one of their weekends exploring the Belgian seacoast resorts, like any ordinary tourists. Except for the color of their skin, they could be Flemish or Walloon youths,

A Ghanaian at the University of London, a Senegalese at the Sorbonne, a Congolese in Brussels. Not long ago black African students were lonely figures in European universities. Now their numbers are growing fast under the impetus of demand for teachers, technicians and administrators. In "Palabre," Belgian filmmaker Emile Degelin seeks with superb style and perception to get at the nub of their experience. Forty-four-year-old Degelin, evincing a touching faith in the young, used only untried actors, African students in Belgium for his story. Pierre Thonon, of Special, the Time-ly Brussels weekly, reviews "Palabre."

hailing either from the northern Dutch-speaking part of Belgium or from the French-language regions of the south.

"I am struck by the unbelievable number of blacks you meet in all parts of Europe these days," Degelin explained. "Fifteen years ago, when I was in Paris, I knew a few at the Cite Universitaire; but they were looked upon as rare phenomena indeed. Today, young Africans and other blacks are everywhere — wherever the young congregate to study, wherever the mood and tempo of modern-day living is most apparent. And what I admire about them most is their extraordinary capacity for adapting. Recently I met some black students in Czechoslovakia; they were speaking Czech. In Germany, they spoke German. And that was the point of departure for my film. It intrigues me how a young man arrives from Africa, willing to bury himself in some corner of Europe for a certain length of time; and not just in a large city like Paris, as was the case a few years ago. I wanted to examine fully the conditions of life faced by these students. Because they are so young, for one thing, they still have an enormous ability to adapt themselves; and then, even more important, they have that one saving resource — which is an immense joie de vivre, a completely natural desire to take from life all of the pleasures it has to offer. That's why I decided to make three black students in Belgium the protagonists of my newest film. I wanted to show how they approach life — which is usually in a sunny, optimistic manner — despite the fact that their lives here are liable to terrible disappointments and very difficult moments, on the moral plane as well as in other areas."

Passing through Bruges, the three Sunday excursionists come upon a couple who set them to dreaming: the man is black, like them; the girl is white, like the young girls who flutter around them in the university corridors of Louvain. The couple are getting out of a sports car. They are laughing, happy. The happiness of people who always insist that money does not bring happiness. And, from then onward, all along their journey — Ostend to Nieuport, Coxyde to La Panne to Furnes — the three young Africans are haunted by this brief encounter. They never stop discussing it among themselves, letting it affect their reactions to everything — to the countryside, to the various episodes and discoveries that await them on this holiday.

Even the title of the film illustrates this. "Palabre" is a word that resists translation; "palaver" or "powwow" might serve as vaguely appropriate synonyms, if these did not contain a kind of humorous ironical condescension which is not evident in the French term.) For, in this endless conversation about the couple who fascinated them, their imaginations returning again and again to this chance meeting, the three students transform what might have been a banal weekend outing into one long palabre, never quite finishing, continually starting up all over again, reinforced by various country settings, moods, events.

"I have always been fascinated by the art of palabre," states Degelin. "One would be wrong to think it exclusively African. It is found equally in the old French tradition, for example, of family dinners or reunions among friends — whose essential justification lay in this need to talk about everything and nothing, to exchange impressions without any obligation to settle anything, without any desire to convince one's partner. In our country this delicious art has been well nigh lost, killed off by television; but the African students living among us know how to preserve this patrimony. And how right they are to do so . . . !"

"Palabre" is the first 100 per cent Belgian film (until now, films have been co-productions, usually with France). Another distinguishing factor is that it is in color. "But I wouldn't like people to think I made 'Palabre' in color from any opportunistic motives," the moviemaker explained. "On the contrary, I'm rather convinced that using color simply in order to get a lot of 'pretty pictures' is just throwing away a lot of extra money on something that is not very important. After 10 minutes an audience no longer even notices it is watching a color film. On the other hand, if color is used freely, in an experimental manner, without any blind allegiance to post-card-type 'realism,' it can constitute an additional dramatic element." And it is in this way that Degelin has used it, just as he has also manipulated the soundtrack, both sound-effects and dialogue, to dramatic ends. "Palabre" . . . the very title implies that the words must not be mere explicative additions to what is being shown, but must also translate precisely through their tone a certain manner and style of living. Because of this, "Palabre" is being released in three different versions: in Dutch, because the film was sponsored at the start by the Cinema Section of the Flemish Ministry of Culture; in French, to permit international distribution — and also because it is the language that the African scholarship students speak at Louvain (with the exception of some blacks coming from the Netherlands Antilles); and, finally, in Lingala, because that is the mother tongue to which the blacks resort when they palabre among themselves — which repeatedly happened throughout the shooting.

"In order to obtain maximum authenticity, I recruited my actors from the students at Louvain and Brussels," Degelin explained. (The three excursionists are portrayed by Gregoire Mulimbi, a law student; Jacques Mulongo, a medical student; and Jean Kabuta, a philosophy student. The couple is played by a black from Cape Verde, Umberto Betancourt, an agronomy student, and a young Belgian model, Arlette

"These young people have tremendously all intelligences," Degelin continued. "But none of them had any acting experience, despite three months' coaching I made them understand before I began shooting. In this sense, they were very much less pliant than professional actors whom you can ask to do anything without even having to furnish them the least explanation why. These young men were worried about dramatic use I might make of certain scenes, I asked them to play. And that pleased me, actually. It proved that they did not consider themselves the way professional actors do, as before to their own personalities; they felt invested with a certain sense of responsibility concerning the characters. I had the feeling that they would have refused to act in any scene they deemed detrimental to their own individual dignity, that might have given a distorted image of black students in Belgium. And that's what I wanted. My interpreters were, in some ways, 'technical advisors' as well in all that concerned the essential nature of the film. For that reason, I believe that the movie will truly illuminate, with dignity, the manner of life led by so many African students in Europe."

This does not mean, however, that "Palabre" is the kind of problem film so many intellectuals insist on making. Neither politics nor social interest Degelin. Only the cinematic art . . . films for the mass public. " 'Palabre' is a rather gay film — at least, I hope so — joyous and optimistic, filled with strictly cinematographic gags," Degelin states. "Nevertheless, I realize that I am not the first film director who believes one can treat in a light and funny manner subjects that are essentially serious and profound."

There are so many in the cast that Degelin required an entire train for his company crew, rather like the "tycoon" producers of International superspectaculars. The National Society of Belgian Railways loaned him a train locomotive and engineer included, for four days which ran along a no-longer-used line, Nieuport-Dixmude. Four days, a train . . . that's three on director Andre Delvaux and his already famous recent French-Belgian enterprise starring Yves Montand and Anouk Aimee, Soir, un Train . . .

A water snake writhes in Robert Shaw's hand when he leaps into an infested ditch during escape from canefield flames started by his pursuers in "Figures in a Landscape." The chameleon met Shaw when they were both running through the field. The Cinema Centers Films production is being filmed near Malaga, Spain.

Good pay, but such work

MALAGA, Spain — Robert Shaw, who earns a quarter of a million dollars a movie, laughed at the question. It was: How can you EARN that kind of money?

"I know a lot of people feel it's unfair that actors should get so much for what they see as being so little work," he said, "and they are right in a way but wrong in another."

"First of all the economics of Western society — which I may or may not agree with — decree that sums of this order are payable because of the returns. But what many people do not realize is the way the money is sometimes earned."

"They hear of scandals, divorces, huge alimony payments, yachts, private airplanes and all the trimmings of what the man in the street must see as the nonsensical high life of a group of people who are grossly overpaid. That, admittedly, is to a large degree true but there is more to it."

Shaw, who is starring in "Figures in a Landscape" now being shot near Malaga, southern Spain, said: "Take this production. It is an excellent example."

"We are working in what is sometimes appalling heat. The temperatures are normally over 85 degrees, but we often work on locations which are natural sun traps. There are dried up river beds where the sun beats down into what becomes a reflector and the temperatures soar.

"We began shooting about 70 miles from here right on the snowy peak of the Sierra Nevada, well over 10,000 feet high. We were looking down on the clouds. The sun was brilliant and bounced like a hard ball off the snow. Everyone, Joe Losey, the director, Malcolm McDowell — the boy from 'If' who is appearing with me — was burned. We had all just arrived from London but there was no time to sunbathe gradually, there is an enormous amount of money at stake — so out we went and our faces were raw. The air was thin because of the height, breathing was difficult, but Malcolm and myself had to run and climb for miles every day with our hands tied.

"For me a terrifying feature and a very important one of 'Figures in a Landscape' is the helicopter. Malcolm and I are two escaped prisoners who are hunted by this lone helicopter for 400 miles. The pilot is cunning and vindictive. He swoops to a few feet from the ground and harries us over broken ground like some big bat trying to knock us over with his skids."

Shaw continued: "As it happens I am a bad flyer. I am very uneasy about planes or anything that flies. Yet here is the helicopter — and the pilot who flies it for us is quite fantastic — swooping within inches of our heads with a propeller whizzing like some lunatic scythe."

"There is a vital scene when we are burned out of a sugar-cane field by soldiers the helicopter has called up. We had to race through the blazing stalks which were over seven feet tall then dive into a stagnant ditch which, believe me, really did smell and was full of water snakes. They are not my favorite creatures but I had to grab one."

"The canefield where we are working is hopping with the fatest spiders I have ever seen, the occasional scorpion and chameleon."

Shaw added with a smile: "So, apart from the considerable concentration needed to play certain parts let it not be said that actors do nothing for their fat fees."

Jingo announces fourth annual 'Readers Take Over' offer

By Jingo

It hardly seems possible, but Jingo's "Readers Take Over" offer is in its fourth season. After an unfortunate experiment last year, in which readers were invited to send in comments at random, Jingo returns to the old system, with official entries, which you see on this page.

The offer is the same — if you want to review one or more of the new TV series this fall, send in the form and Jingo will assign a show. As previously, reviews will be printed, subject to editing at Jingo's discretion. In the past, only mild editing was required.

The procedure will be the same as in the first two years, but it won't hurt to review procedures:

From the applicants, Jingo will choose his home viewers. Depending on how many send in the form, Jingo will have one, two or as many as three home viewers covering each new series. Their comments will appear here for as many weeks as it takes to cover all home reviews.

The shows to be reviewed will be assigned by Jingo and the applicant will receive further instructions in the mail. Jingo will enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope in which to return the review.

To assist Jingo in the assignment of reviews, please circle the type of program you wish to review. If there is an overbalance of one type of show, though, Jingo reserves the right to select a different category.

If the turnout is heavy, no more than three persons will be assigned to any one series, so only about 80 persons will be eligible. Send in quickly. On the other hand, if turnout is light, entrants may be asked to review more than one series.

As in the past, review tears sheets will be packed up and forwarded to the three networks. So your opinions CAN be heard by those who decide network series, as well as by thousands of Wisconsin readers.

Don't miss your chance. Send in the form today. Thank you.

Jingo: I would like to review one of the new television series as part of your fourth annual "Readers Take Over" offer. Please send me further instructions, including a self-addressed, stamped envelope in which to return the reviews.

Limiting mass media ownership studied

WASHINGTON—To prohibit ownership of more than one radio or television station or newspaper in a single market would be "detrimental to the public interest" and contrary to objectives of the Federal Communications Commission, a study conducted for the National Association of Broadcasters reveals.

Such limitation would not increase balanced competition, nor encourage diversity of news and program sources and in-depth public service programming as the Commission desires, the study concludes.

It also revealed that the mass media "have less influence on thought and behavior than is popularly believed, and are more likely to reflect and reinforce existing attitudes than to change them."

The study, "The Effects of the Common Ownership on Media Content and Influence," was commissioned by NAB following the FCC's proposal to limit common ownership of mass media outlets in the same market.

It was prepared by George H. Litwin, assistant professor of the Harvard Business School and William H. Wroth, research director of Intermedia Systems Corp. They were assisted by Neil M. Moss, managing director of the Motivation Research Group, a division of the Behavioral Science Center of the Sterling Institute.

The findings show that in the vast majority of cases, particularly in medium and large markets, common ownership of several media outlets is favorable to the public interest.

In markets where there is influential competition and where no common owner can achieve a dominant position, "the substantial resources available to commonly-owned media enables them to provide better service to the public and to maintain higher standards of business ethics and public service."

Balanced competition, the study shows, will not be achieved by limiting ownership to single media outlets.

"Rather, it is important to consider the particular media operating in a market, and to encourage the growth of singly- or commonly-owned media which have sufficient resources to provide effective service, and yet are comparable in media influence and audience share."

It said that in many cases, limiting common ownership or forcing divestiture "would lead to a decrease in both diversity and validity of news and information, and a reduction in the quality of entertainment and public service programming."

The media then would be forced to rely very heavily on the same few news and program sources, such as networks and wire services, and would not have resources sufficient to develop meaningful local origination programming.

The result would be the opposite of what the FCC intends: control of news and program sources would be concentrated in fewer hands, rather than more hands.

The study recommends that the Commission or Congress develop flexible guidelines which would take into account particular market conditions, the nature and influence of present and anticipated competition and economic and organizational resources of media owners.

Regarding influence of the mass media on public thought and behavior, the study reported that "the popular myth that a strong media message by itself can change attitudes or behavior is not supported by the evidence."

It said the audience's predisposing attitudes combined with their opportunity for choice and their economic behavior gives them significant influence over the content of the media.

The content of the media," the report stated, "to a great degree reflects and reinforces public attitudes and behavior rather than molds them."

Mixed emotions

By Cynthia Lowry

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Doris Day, like lots of Doris Day fans, was disappointed by her first year in television. Her emotions, however, are mixed since she also realizes it was the strong, if unpleasant, medicine that pulled her through the most difficult period of her life. Martin Melcher, her husband, died a few weeks before production on "The Doris Day Show" was to start last spring. They had not only been married 17 years but Melcher had been her agent, her manager, her business brain and her partner. Doris Day, of course, is a valuable theatrical property. A motion picture star whose name for years has created box-office magic, she was committed contractually to CBS in a multimillion-dollar deal that included future theatrical film as well as the network's half-hour situation comedy series, so she could not just give up to a personal crisis. The blonde actress recalled that period in her life almost as one remembers a nightmare. Composed and relaxed, she sat in her dressing room at CBS Studio Center during a lunch break and talked about the past and the future. "After Martin died, I felt paralyzed," she said. "I knew that we had to start the series, but all I wanted was to shut myself up in the house. My mother, my son and my friends took turns trying to persuade me that activity and work were the only ways to recover. But, to me, it seemed impossible." She was finally nagged into spending a couple of weeks at Palm Springs. There, watched anxiously by her mother and two close friends, she submitted numbly to walking, bicycling, swimming and resting. "I was still in pretty bad shape when we started work," she continued. "But I had to get up at 5:30 to get to the studio and we often had to work until 8. I was dead tired and lost 18 pounds. On doctor's orders, I was whisked to my dressing room to rest between every scene."

Slowly, the recipe of work and time began the healing process.

"Looking back I think I found the most comfort in the garden," she said. "Particularly the crabgrass—I spent hours pulling it out. For some reason that was soothing and restoring. The birds helped, too."

Then came a time when the fragments of her life were beginning to be patched together and her old interest in work began to return.

"I suddenly realized what was happening in the series," she continued, with a slight, wry grimace. "I was supposed to be a widow living on a farm and giving up my life to my father. I was sweet and kind and always trying to fix things up—oh, was I sick of fixing things! I didn't have any of the comedy lines. Anyway, I knew that it wasn't right for me."

Miss Day was not the only unhappy one. The series was a mild success, but across the nation the Day fans were not particularly ecstatic about what television was doing to their golden girl, and the ratings showed it.

When the season's shows were finished, she sat down with executives of her own production company and announced that she was unhappy.

Result has been considerable change. When this season starts, there will be a new producer, new concept, new locales and a new Day—or at least a Day that is more like the one in "Pillow Talk" and the succession of hit movies that followed it.

The shift will get Doris out of those blue jeans which were last season's bucolic uniform and into some high-style clothes: looking at Doris Day's clothes has always been a popular spectator sport among women.

The screen Doris Day may be an artificial creation of script writers, directors and producers, but there is a lot of the real person in the blend. Off-camera, Miss Day has the same fresh, scrubbed look of her American-girl image. Her personal taste, reflected in the clear bright yellows and burnt oranges in which her dressing room is decorated, is impeccable. She is frank, cooperative—and she is thoroughly professional in her work.

Well into the batch of shows for her second season, she is working the usual horrendous hours that television demands. Her Beverly Hills home is 20 minutes by car from the studio and she is ready for makeup each morning at 6.

Weeknights she gets to bed early—like 8:30 when possible—and usually has dinner on a tray while watching television or looking over her next day's lines.

On weekends there is swimming, bicycling and gardening: "I still weed a lot of crabgrass."

Learn to behave, dummy

By Alfred Sheinwold

None of the textbooks on bridge (including my own) have any helpful advice on what the dummy should say or do. At best they tell you the rules of the old morality: Never look at a player's hand, whether it is your partner's or an opponent's, and never let a word of criticism pass your lips.

In most rubber bridge games, dummy and declarer exchange hands before the opening lead is made, thus enabling the dummy to follow the play with more understanding. Experts wouldn't dream of doing this, of course, but there are a hundred million bridge players and only a few thousand experts. Many a time I have seen a dummy get up and stand behind his partner during the entire play of a hand, sneering at every move.

If you want to be a good dummy, your best procedure depends on the nature of your partner. When you have a reliable partner, use your dummy time to get coffee, mix drinks, wolf down a sandwich or powder your nose. You're lucky if you have this kind of a partner even one-tenth of the time.

In most cases you should sit still and look at no player's cards. Whenever your partner looks as though he's about to lead out of the wrong hand, pound the table quickly or bellow "In the dummy, stupid." In some games you must substitute a coo of "You're over here, darling." (Just thinking of this sissy approach is enough to bring on an attack of the collywobblers.)

Whenever your partner fails to follow suit, you must ask "No clubs?" (or whatever). And if he looks vague, you may persist with "Look among your spades."

Your most important duty, as dummy, comes at the end of the hand. If your partner has staggered through the hand, making his contract in spite of his blunders, give him a "Well played, old boy!" (Don't try "old girl" on the female of the bridge species. I did. Once.) If you can't trust your voice, just beam at your partner. If you can't beam, try to suppress your moaning; it may unnerve your next partner.

If your partner has tossed a trick away, breathe through your mouth and practice counting from one to 20 in Hungarian. The trouble with saying what you really think is that you may have to eat your words. Just think of the case of the Long-Suffering Husband.

When this hand came along, North thought that he'd been behaving pretty well, considering. He hadn't once scolded his wife for the way she bid or played, although he had muttered a few times and had kicked the cat twice. As every bridge husband knows, these are things that could happen to anybody. North pushed the hand to slam and sat back to watch his wife mangle the play.

He didn't have long to wait. West opened the singleton diamond, and our heroine won with the king. She thought about her next play, looked nervously at her L. S. H., and led the ace of diamonds from her hand.

West ruffed with the queen of spades, and the dummy turned a remarkable shade of magenta. "Forty million bridge players learn to draw trumps," he growled, "and I have to marry the one that never learned!"

Whose side are you on — the husband's or the wife's? Make your choice before you read on. Study the hand carefully before you make up your mind.

For what it may be worth to you, my own vote goes to the Long-Suffering Husband. It isn't a matter of men sticking together, and I'm as fond of cats as the next bridge player. It's only that what happened to him shouldn't happen to a dog.

First, let's finish the play of the hand. After ruffing the ace of diamonds, West led a club to dummy's ace. Declarer ruffed a diamond, led a trump to the king and ruffed another diamond. Then a trump to the ace put dummy in to cash the last two diamonds. South discarded her two low clubs and made her slam contract.

Then she said: "Don't be angry, darling. I had to let him ruff that diamond. I couldn't make the slam if I drew trumps first."

She was perfectly right. If South leads a trump to dummy's king at the second trick, there aren't enough entries to dummy to bring in the diamond suit. South won't lose a trump trick, but she will eventually lose two clubs.

Yes, the wife was perfectly right — and that's why my sympathy is with the Long-Suffering Husband. It's bad enough to shudder when you see your partner mangling a hand, but then to find out that her play was correct and that you have to eat your words — no, no — that's cruel and unusual punishment and should be declared unconstitutional if there's any justice.

Why not Lafayette, Fla.?

By W. R. Doberstein

What's in a name? The community with a distinctive and unique name can consider itself lucky. There are certainly a lot of duplications — the result of bad communications, indifference or simply disdain for originality. The name Lafayette is a case in point.

At least five U.S. cities and towns bear the name. Several differentiate by using a capital "F" but the basic spelling is the same for all five. What is hard to understand is why there aren't six Lafayettes.

With or without the capital "F", there is a Lafayette in Alabama, Colorado, Georgia, Indiana and Louisiana. Four of these were already members of the union in 1824 when Marquis de Lafayette last visited the United States and toured all 24 existing states of that time. Colorado didn't make statehood until 52 years later. So there's a Lafayette, Colo. (north of Denver). But why not a Lafayette, Fla.?

After all, the Marquis was loaded with American appreciation for his personal contributions to the cause of freedom — in America and other countries. When he left the States, in 1824, he took with him gifts from Congress of $200,000 and ownership of 23,000 acres in Florida. Of course, he had blown his inherited fortune in France with his activities for freedom. These gifts were hardly financial replacement of what he had lost.

The puzzle is, with the Marquis owning that much Florida real estate and the effect of French influence in Florida from time to time in history, why didn't a Lafayette, Fla. come to be?

Maybe he should have stayed around and surveyed his property. True, Florida didn't become a state until 1845 — 21 years after the Marquis' visit. But someone might have remembered that he had stopped overnight at a particular place in his 23,000 acre township — and suggested naming it for him.

Anyway, there's no Lafayette, Fla. Someone just tapped me on the shoulder and asked, did you see "this" Atlas? Seems that Florida has a Lafayette County. So they did remember, after all. And Florida statehood has been remembered several times on U.S. postage, the last time in 1965. And if anyone cares to remember, it was 144 years ago today that the patriotic Marquis made his last farewells at the White House and left for France, for the last time.

Liza knows exactly where she's at

By Kay Bartlett

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — A tiny creature, a little mouse, arrived in a gift package for Liza Minnelli on the movie location here this summer.

She was delighted with it, planning to add it to the huge collection of little creatures, stuffed, furry and ceramic, scattered about her New York City apartment.

A friend asked what she had named it. Liza said it had no name. The friend, who knows Liza names anything and everything, scoffed.

"But if I told you the name, then there would be no point in it having a private name of its own," was Liza's reply.

This is the Liza Minnelli who at 16 declared her independence and landed a $34-a-week job in an off-Broadway revival; the Liza Minnelli the critics have finally stopped calling Judy Garland's daughter; the Liza Minnelli with an almost fanatical desire to succeed; the Liza Minnelli who handled her mother's funeral with a dignity many thought would be impossible at the public's final look at Garland the Legend.

It is also the Liza Minnelli who adopts a homeless mutt she finds wandering the streets of Puerto Rico; the Liza Minnelli who bursts into little wisps of song when she is bored; the Liza Minnelli who goes on pizza and chili and onion binges; the Liza Minnelli who compulsively chews her fingernails; the Liza Minnelli who vows her private life will never be stolen from her.

Candid about her career—"I come across awful on television guest spots"—Liza shies away from talking about her private life, the life where she is Mrs. Peter Allen, a young housewife who likes to throw dinner parties—Italian food and large roasts—who has paintings and photographs hung all over their East Side three-room apartment, and who calls up friends at 3 a.m. to say: "Get up. There's a great old movie on the late show."

"My private life is nobody's business," says the girl who watched her mother's divorces and suicide attempts, her magnificent triumphs at the Palace, her every move, chronicled in headlines.

"Besides, I lead a very routine, normal, boring life. Why should anybody be interested?" she asks. "When people get curious I try not to be rude but to head them off at the pass."

Liza once explained that her mother was bored by the middle-of-the-road existence. Not so for Liza.

"I just kind of like loping right down the middle," she says. Then she adds, cynically: "Or perhaps I should say staggering down the road."

Liza has been married for two years and says she would quit show business immediately if her husband, an Australian singer, asked. The girl who has described her own erratic childhood as "wonderful but different" or, more rarely, "horrendous," has no immediate plans for a family of her own.

"I want to grow up before my children, not with them."

Liza was on location at the Salem Hospital for the filming of "Tell Me You Love Me, Junie Moon," a movie about three afflicted young people who decide to face the world together when they are released from the hospital.

With her was her mongrel, Ocho. She found him six months ago outside of a San Juan, Puerto Rico, restaurant called Ocho's and took him home with her.

"He's not a pet," she says of the dog. "We just sort of bumped into each other and are stringing along together."

"I just love him. He's so bored by everything."

Liza herself seems to have little middle ground between boredom and enthusiasm. When she is bored, she bursts into song in the midst of a conversation, or looks away, distracted. But when she is interested, she is intent, all concentration, as she rereads the script for the 100th time.

There is also little middle ground between Liza's two images—Liza the vulnerable waif and Liza the tough professional.

"Liza is 23," a friend said, "but just as often she is 16 going on 23. And as often 23 going on 40."

She is the kind of girl who spontaneously dashes off to fetch coffee for a novice actress who was shaken after she performed her part before Otto Preminger, a director not known for his tolerance. On the other hand, she can dispose of night club hecklers or pesky autograph seekers with a polite firmness many veterans never have learned.

But there seems to be almost a calculated niceness about Liza, a studied off-camera graciousness for which her mother was not always known.

She looks younger than 23 and somewhat smaller than her 5 feet 5 inches and she has the smile that causes Garland fans to shake their heads in wonder.

The makeup man on the set, Charlie Schram, was the man who, many rainbows ago, made up Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz." He thinks of Liza as a daughter.

"But the spontaneity and the laugh, they are her mother all over again," he says.

Her nose is that of her father, director Vincente Minnelli, but her most striking feature, her huge brown eyes with lashes half an inch long, are all Liza.

"I really have a funny looking face when it gets right down to it," she says. "One of my good friends says I have a dummy face and I think that's a pretty good description."

In the title role of the movie she plays a girl who has been terribly disfigured when acid was tossed in her face. In only one flashback sequence does she appear without the grotesque makeup that covers one side of her face and left arm.

"I had first thoughts about appearing disfigured," she admits. "But I wanted the part and took it and have not had second thoughts."

It is her third movie, the second in which she does not sing or dance, and it is by far the most demanding role she has undertaken.

Her publicity people are billing her as the only triple threat entertainer—a singer, dancer and actress—in her age group. Liza says she doesn't know in which field she would like to excel. She doesn't think of herself primarily as an actress, singer or dancer.

"I'd just like to be respected as a successful artist, a successful human being," she said.

Relaxation for Liza is being home with her husband and her dog, or watching movies or, sometimes, just being alone, away from center stage.

She is also relaxed, she says, when she is on camera.

"The camera affords a certain kind of privacy. You hear the click and there's a purr. It shuts out everything else, like a great cat."

But there are times when that isn't enough.

"Sometimes, when I feel I can't find Liza, I go down and watch 'Gunsmoke,'" she said.

But she said there was no search for Liza Minnelli.

"I know exactly who she is. And that's all that's important. There's no need for anyone else to know."

Liza Minnelli has two images—Liza the vulnerable waif and Liza the tough professional—with little ground between.

Respect, black belt style

By Frank Langley

NEW YORK — Gregory Hines, the middle man in the singing team of Hines, Hines and Dad, is very often a frustrated man, a situation brought about by his avocation, karate.

Gregory is a black belt, the highest level that can be attained and one which takes years of training to achieve.

Unfortunately, the real precepts and practices of karate are far different from the popular conception, as Gregory has found out.

"People still think of karate as some kind of weapon which it is not," says Hines. "Karate is a combination of very hard work and discipline. It takes a long and concentrated effort to get anywhere with it, but when you do, you find that you not only have a unique physical skill, but you've learned something much more important—something too lacking in our world today—and that is respect."

"Karate is an Oriental sport and respect is built into every aspect. That's why the belt system. If I had a 12-year-old kid in my class and he'd won a black belt and I hadn't, I'd look upon him as my superior, and he would be."

"When I came into the room I would bow to him, and that's not just a gesture. I would be giving him my respect. Even when I wanted to leave I'd ask permission before I'd go. Of course, when he left he might start reading a comic book while I got out the Times, but when it comes to karate, he is the top man."

Gregory is anxious to get started on a school for ghetto children.

"It's not to teach them to fight," he said. "It's to teach them discipline and respect and to give them confidence in themselves."

"I know when I was a kid I was the skinny guy on the block and when someone came up and asked me for a dime, I gave him a quarter. I didn't want to mess with anybody."

"An insecurity like that winds up affecting many other aspects of your life. It hurts you socially, in your studies, hobbies and business or professional life. But when you develop yourself enough so that you lose that insecurity and you gain confidence, your whole life changes."

"Most simply, you're not afraid anymore. That's some yoke to take off anyone's shoulders."

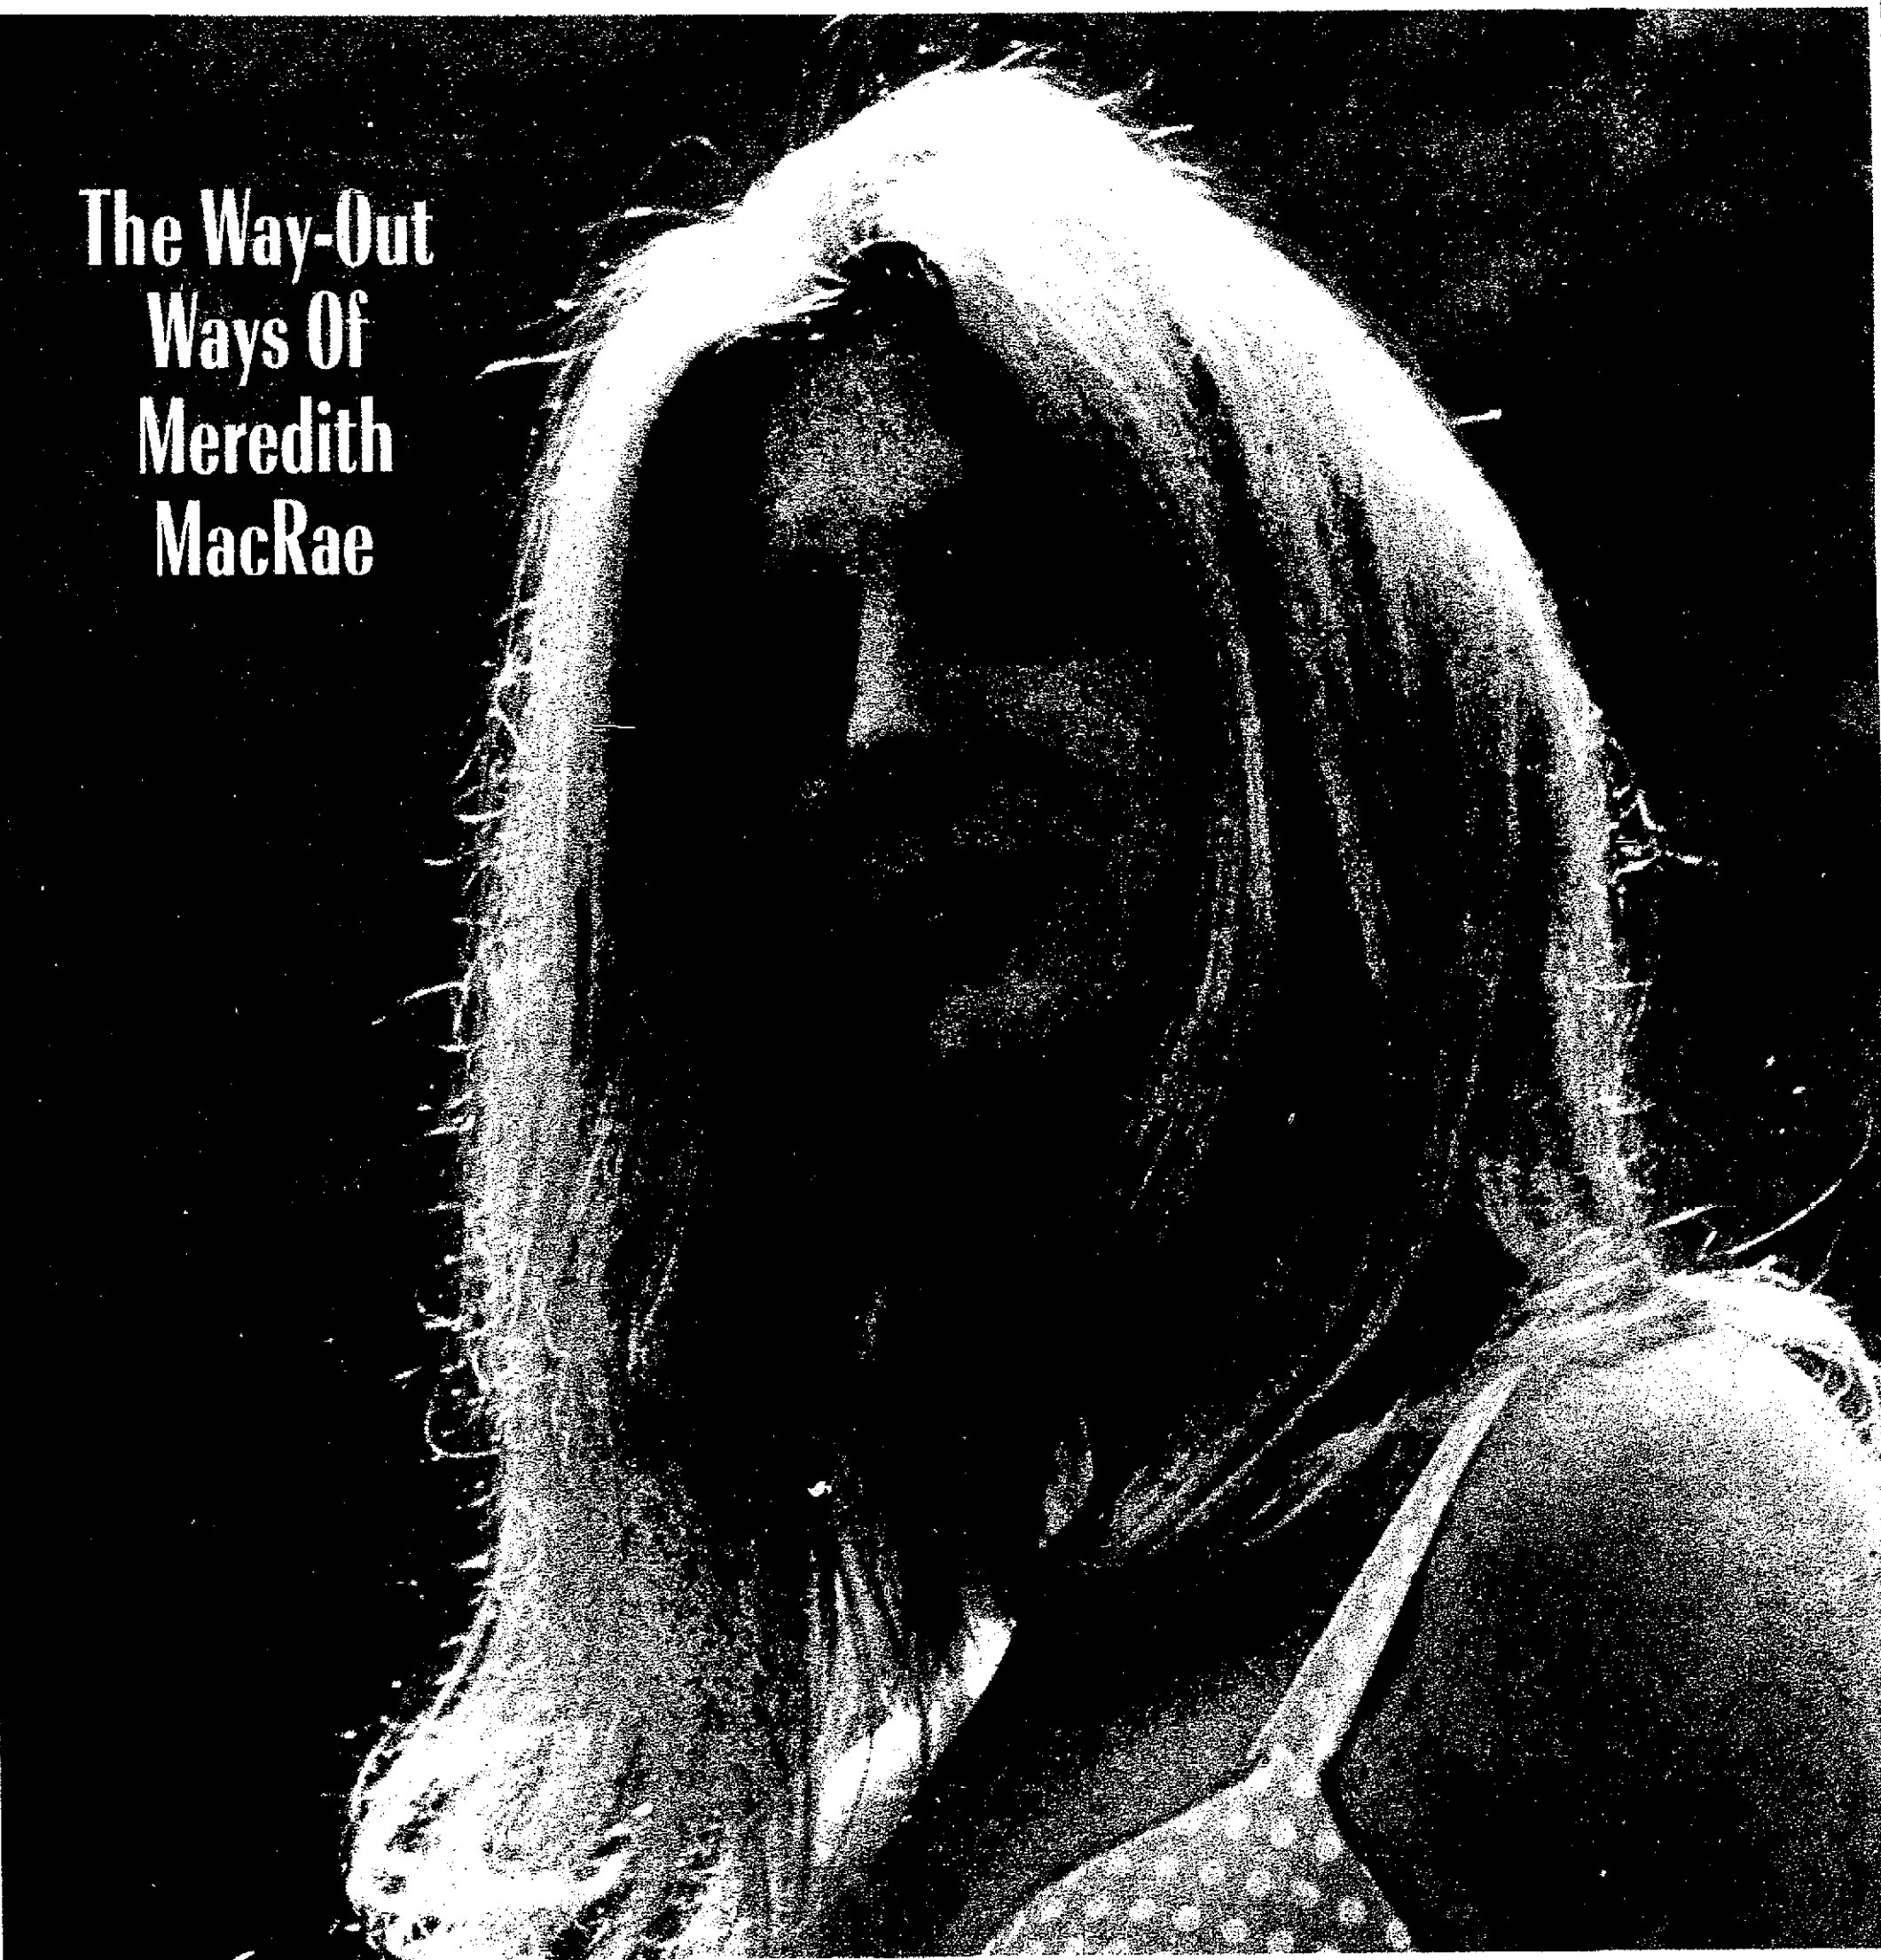

Gregory would like everyone to study karate, but he knows there are some people who wouldn't make it through the course.

"In the first place, they couldn't do it," he said referring to the biggest negative group, the bully who wants a super weapon to add to his arsenal.

"We get them coming to the school," he said, "but they don't last. First, they think they are as good as you before they start and when you show them up, it embarrasses them and they leave."

"Second, most of these types are undisciplined and unlike a youngster who can be trained, they refuse to accept the discipline that is required. So we lose them too, and who cares? We don't want that type anyway."

Ask Them Yourself

FOR JIM BISHOP,

author of "The Day Kennedy Was Shot"

Who paid for John F. Kennedy's casket?—D.L., Lancaster, Pa.

● It and ambulance service were bought from Oneal funeral service in Dallas. Vernan Oneal, senior member of the firm, told me he sent bills to the Kennedys for 14 months, then the Government paid $3,400 for it. The Government also paid for another casket—the one in which President Kennedy was interred.

FOR TOM JONES, singer

What do you think of men's fashions today? Do you like them?—Kathy Early, Brick, N.J.

● I really don't care too much for today's fashions. They're too far out. Today's accent on style is good, and it puts excitement into dressing. But it must be done with good taste and in moderation.

FOR BESS MYERSON GRANT,

Commissioner, New York City Consumer Affairs

What is the worst unfair practice in consumer affairs you have found to date?—A. S. Kravitz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● Prime consumer difficulties arise from the sellers taking unfair advantage of the buyers' lack of expertise. Whether the seller induces the buyer to sign a blank sales contract on which an exorbitant price is later filled in, or whether the customer consumes a mixture of meat and soya bean believing it to be hamburger, the buyer will always be at the mercy of the seller. The answer: Wise up! Assert your rights!

FOR ROGER MARIS

When you hit 61 home runs in 1961, who was the pitcher who threw number 61 to you?—Rob Ridley, Casper, Wyo.

● Tracy Stallard of the Red Sox.

FOR BOB EUBANKS,

host of tv's "The Newlywed Game"

For prizes, do you choose certain gifts for each couple, or do you choose just one kind of gift for all of them?—Beverly Reynolds, Glendale, Calif.

● The grand prize is especially chosen for the winning couple. When the couples are interviewed prior to being chosen for appearance on the show, they are asked what they would like for a prize.

FOR SEN. EDMUND S. MUSKIE

of Maine

Are there any prospects in the near future of a Federal crash program to clean our waterways and to save our natural resources?—Larry Leach, Owensboro, Ky.

● The Water Quality Act of 1965 is basically responsible for cleaning up our nation's waters. But more adequate funds are needed to save our water resources. Appropriations have lagged far behind, and public pressure must be brought to bear for more adequate funding.

FOR PEGGY LIPTON,

"Julie" of Mod Squad

To settle an argument, is your hair as long as it appears on the show, or is it a wig?—Joi Spadafore, Pasco, Wash.

● It's my own hair.

FOR DR. GEORGE P. CRESSMAN,

Director, U.S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D.C.

How powerful is a recorded wind of 100 miles an hour?—Joe Jille, Buri, Wash.

● A 100-mph wind is 100 times as powerful as a 10 mph breeze. Disregarding tornadoes and hurricanes, 100-mph winds occasionally occur at the earth's surface under unique circumstances. They are powerful enough to cause considerable damage, ranging from roofs being blown off to buildings collapsing. Empty railroad cars have even been blown from their tracks.

FOR BOB HOPE

Are there any plans for another road picture with that crooner, what's his name? I hope so.—L. L. Johnson, Caldwell, Idaho

● There are no Crosby-Hope movies planned for the future.

FOR ELBERT L. LITTLE, JR.,

Why do most autumn leaves fall to the ground face down?—Mrs. Sarah E. Warren, Elkland, Pa.

● Leaves fall to the ground with upper and lower surfaces exposed in approximately equal numbers. This ratio may be confirmed by counting a sample of leaves in a small area. However, in certain tree species with upper and lower surfaces of contrasting colors, the showy surface might seem to be much more numerous.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

Idol Golfer Arnold Palmer will be 40 on Wednesday. He was honored with a unique advance birthday present. Students in Prof. David L. Lewis' "entrepreneur in history" course at the University of Michigan cited Palmer as being one of the businessmen in whose footsteps they'd like to follow. As a result of his career, Palmer is identified with several businesses, some far removed from golf. "Name a better way to become a millionaire," said one admirer, "than by playing golf the world over and then selling the goods and services of one's trade."

Scholastic Windfall Social Security officials estimate that $490 million in benefits will be paid to 500,000 high-school, college, and other full-time students in the upcoming year. That is more money than is granted in scholarships at all American colleges ($415.5 million in private and Government grants). Who is eligible for this newest and fastest-growing benefit program? Any full-time, unmarried student, 18 through 21, who is a dependent or survivor of a parent eligible for Social Security. Check with your local office.

Cry, baby, cry

Clear Signals "Our greatest problem with our feelings comes in communication," declares Dr. Everett L. Shostrom in his book, "Man, the Manipulator." The error in communicating or sending out ideas is not asking for what we really want, hoping people will comply with our secret wish anyhow. The error in receiving ideas is pretending to ignore a message. For example, someone hurts us, and we don't say so but instead become unresponsive and crushed. "A healthy relationship," says Dr. Shostrom, "does not always have to be an agreeing relationship." Next time, say so.

an ordinary basketball around from the 25-foot high poles. Those who miss must climb down and retrieve it. The students become so agile that their only occupational hazard is an occasional case of splinters.

See Baby Cry For about $8 a year, London's Royal Institute for the Deaf rents to deaf parents a transistorized amplifier with an ordinary light bulb instead of a loudspeaker. Mrs. Ruth Carstairs, mother of four-month-old David, became totally deaf during a sudden illness and was worried how she could look after him properly. "Since we got this electronic baby alarm," she says, "I can go about my work in the house with my mind at ease, knowing that as soon as David cries, the lamp will light. Even if he was right next to me, I could not hear him. Now I can see him cry, even when I'm in the next room."

What Should Parents Tell

College campuses are no longer secluded retreats for the wealthy, the goldfish-swallower has given way to the social-protester—and is

By SLOAN WILSON

■ Sloan Wilson's The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit is just one of this accomplished author's many novels which have headed best-seller lists over the years. His latest book is Away from It All. He also wrote the novel A Sense of Values. He has had a voice in education since 1949, when he served on the National Citizens Committee for Public Schools until 1953. He was assistant director of the White House Conference on Education for one year.

WHEN I FIRST left home for college some 30 years ago, my father said, "Son, you now have an opportunity to forget the present and study the past as prelude to the future." A few minutes later he added, "And please don't come home with a raccoon coat and a ukulele!"

Right now I have three children, a son-in-law, and two nephews enrolled in American universities, and I can't think of anything like that to say to any of them. I feel more like giving them the advice I got when I went to war: "The important thing is to learn how to stay alive and keep a good conscience, too."

As everyone knows, college campuses are no longer secluded retreats or playgrounds. Instead, they are battlefields, where scholars must ask themselves whether they are shirking their responsibilities if they refuse to take an active part in making the great political and moral decisions of the day.

I might as well admit right now that I can't mourn this. I've talked to a lot of college students lately whom I have met while lecturing. They are a new breed, and some of them are frightening.

But I prefer them to the members of my Harvard class who made headlines by swallowing live goldfish or the young of a later day who rioted only when they tried to steal underwear from the women's dormitories. What with football rah-rah, fraternity high-jinks, and the listless studying of dull, eminently forgettable courses, I don't think the colleges of the past can be treasured as an ideal worth recapturing.

Students today are more serious, and they should be, for they have greater problems than my generation. For one thing, the Depression instilled in us the need to earn money and security. A lot of today's youngsters have been brought up prosperously unhappy. They can't see the point of working hard to get a good job and a mortgaged house in the suburbs. That's what they're trying to escape.

Present-day colleges have lots of students from the slums, both black and white. In my day, the poor seldom went to college, and we rarely heard their complaints. Our era of prosperity is in some ways harder on slum children than the Depression was. It makes their poverty unique and more hopeless.

Most of the youngsters nowadays are also far more confused and angrier about war than my generation was. When the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and when we understood what Hitler was doing to the Jews and other Europeans, my generation experienced the great joy of taking up a righteous cause that we knew we could win soon.

The war in Vietnam is, of course much harder to get enthusiastic about. Our youngsters hear some of their elders, both at home and abroad, protest that it is immoral and insane; others shout that we must win to protect the world against communism. And the history of the Vietnam war, which isn't even legally a war, is foggy and complex. But one thing is clear—any war, pushed to its ultimate conclusion, will blow up everybody. It's also clear that while the elderly argue about the war, the youngsters are forced to fight it, no matter what they believe, unless they can prove that they are conscientious objectors, a burden which the present laws make almost impossible.

Is it any wonder that the youngsters are angry and bewildered? But the great majority of them go calmly along taking the prescribed school courses, falling in love, and trying to make reasonably constructive plans for the future.

I do not think, however, that this great majority of quiet ones react the way their parents did. They couldn't, for the world has changed too much. They listen to the wild ones screaming of injustice and try to figure things out. In the quiet ones there is a constant struggle between their desire to lead productive, private lives and to make public protest against injustices.

There is not much doubt that many of the quiet, sensible students admire the wild ones. That is why the campus radicals are important nowadays far beyond their number, which is still small. The bearded, long-haired rebel screaming of the outrage of war when this country has not been attacked, poverty in the midst of prosperity, and racial prejudice in the midst of reforms is the big man on the campus these days. The football hero, fraternity president, or that quaint old-fashioned character—the man judged most likely to succeed—run poor seconds.

Our youngsters are not stupid! How could they be with us as their parents? They know that there are radicals of many kinds. Some are psychotics who at heart want to destroy everything; some are disciplined Communists. Others are simply using the great problems of the day as an excuse for stepping up the ancient struggle of the young against the old. There are also a good many genuine idealists who feel that the world is going mad and that it is the job of every sane man to work toward saving it.

The great majority of quiet students are listening carefully to the rebels, and when they are convinced that they are right on some particular cause, follow them. Youngsters today need a lot of strength to concern themselves with the great issues of the day and at the same time to work toward the high marks which good jobs and graduate schools universally require.

Students, who even in normal circumstances might have difficulty making the grades, are often bewildered and depressed by the demands made on their conscience and intelligence. But colleges emphasize the fact that they are supposed to be dealing with mature persons, not children. A large university is an especially impersonal place with few advisers who have the time to cater to a confused student and offer much encouragement. Colleges do not attempt to supervise the pri-

Sculpture, Drawings Haendel at OSU

OSHKOSH -- The recent drawings and sculpture of William Haendel open Monday in the Dempsey Gallery at Oshkosh State University.

The works, which continue through Sept. 26, were described in a recent review at Calgary, Alberta, Canada, as "one of the most exciting exhibitions to date."

A reception for the artist, a Northern Illinois University instructor, will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Haendel was lauded in a Calgary review for "his strong sense of unity and his sympathetic eye for scale (which) has created a most successful interaction between the architecture and his art." The review continued, "Meandering through this exhibition is most exhilarating if only to experience the pleasant flow of space."

The artist is not obsessed with "machine Moquery" but finds satisfaction in the interpretation of the human form. His themes are derived from man and, like the Greeks, his aesthetic is concerned with human proportions. Titles for his works are mostly derived from classical myths but serve rather to catalog or index his work than to reiterate the story.

Many of Haendel's sketches show a marked resemblance to the undulating plastic forms of his sculpture which are achieved by building a mold around soft wax shapes. The resultant casting produces an odd hypothesis of hard material in liquid forms.

The Illinois artist has been exhibiting constantly throughout the United States since 1951 and has received countless awards for his jewelry as well as his graphic work and sculpture.

A program for students has been scheduled for Sept. 13 on the problems of sculpture and the creation of other art forms.

Grooms Work Gift

CHICAGO — The acquisition of "City of Chicago" by Red Grooms has been announced by Charles C. Cunningham, director of the Art Institute of Chicago.

The "installation," as Grooms calls it, was obtained from the Tibor de Nagy Gallery in New York and given anonymously to the Institute by a former Chicagoan. It is currently on exhibit at Gonsaulus Hall.

Weighing two tons, the tableaux of Chicago, consist of five main pieces built of plywood and bearer board and painted with acrylic. Among the reconstructed scenes of the present are the traffic-lined Michigan Avenue bridge, the commuter-congested Ravenswood "el" train, the Chicago River area around Marina Towers and the "Magnificent Mile" section of Michigan Avenue. The fifth scene is "The Historical Arch of Chicago" which in part depicts Mrs. O'Leary's cow, Lincoln and Douglas, Jane Addams of Hull House, Al Capone, Stryus McCormick, Red Grange, Sally Rand and Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer. Huge figures of Mayor Daley and Hugh Hefner striding along the Michigan Avenue scene complete the all-star cast. Says Cunningham, "The 'Chicago', 1968," containing scenes and well-known people of Chicago, is a work which has great appeal to all ages."

Grooms explains that the birth of the idea for the mock-up of Chicago, complete with moving parts, was in a boyhood attempt to duplicate the Ringling Brothers Circus in his own backyard. It took Grooms and his three assistants four months to construct "Chicago" which the artist considers "the city that looks like a city should." Before being given to the Institute, "Chicago" was exhibited at the Frumkin gallery, at the Smithsonian Institution as part of the National Collection to Fine Arts and at the Venice Biennale as one of the American entries.

Freckled with strawberry blond hair, Grooms was born Charles Grooms in Nashville, Tenn., in 1937. He studied art in high school, attended Peabody College and then the School of the Art Institute for two months. From Chicago he went to Provincetown, Mass., to study briefly with Hans Hofman and then to New York. Aside from his well-known abilities as a painter and sculptor, Grooms is also an accomplished dancer, cook and filmmaker. In "Shoot the Moon," "Lurk," and "Big Feet," movies made in New York with Rudy Burkhardt, Grooms participated as either producer, director, designer or performer. He is married to Mimi Gross, daughter of Manhattan sculptor Chaim Gross.

Other notable projects by Grooms include "Burning Building," a staged happening for which he won acclaim; a 50 x 15 foot billboard called "Chicago Magic City of the West" which was erected at LaSalle and Kinzie and sponsored by the Museum of Contemporary Art; and "Loft on 26th St.," an installation which was featured in the 68th American Exhibition at the Art Institute in 1966.

Acting Teacher Mann Lectures at Green Bay

BY THE ARTS EDITOR

GREEN BAY — "An Actor prepares—For What?" is the title of a lecture to be delivered by New York acting teacher Paul Mann at 8 p.m. Thursday at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Mann, whose students have included Sidney Poitier and Faye Dunaway, will speak in the new lecture-performance auditorium on the UWGB Shorewood campus. There will be no admission charge.

During his 35 years in the professional theater, Mann — who was recently appointed to the UWGB as professor of acting and director of the University's theater arts program — has filled the role of actor as well as teacher. He has appeared both on and off-Broadway, and played as guest artist at university and regional theaters.

He was named to the Repertory Theater of Lincoln Center as a featured player by its original directors, Elia Kazan and Robert Whitehead. Since 1949, he has directed a professional theater school for actors.

He has served as special consultant, guest lecturer and as a professor of acting at Yale University. He received his professional theater training ing in New York as a scholarship student at the Neighborhood Playhouse, School of the Theatre, the Group Theatre's Studio and the Michael Chekov studio.

Mann will return in January for a round of lectures at UWGB campuses at Menasha, Manitowoc and Marinette.

"Gakki: Musical Instruments of Japan" and "Contemporary Japanese Woodblock Prints" comprise the dual exhibition for the month of September in La Baye Gallery of the Neville Public Museum, 129 S. Jefferson St., Green Bay.

Seventeen musical instruments, some in miniature, and 12 photopanel constitute the exhibition, which is being circulated by the American Federation of Arts and sponsored by the Japan Society of

New York and the Kokusai Bunka Shinkokai of Tokyo.

A tape recording, allowing visitors to hear the various sounds produced by each instrument, accompanies the exhibit. The photopanel show how each instrument is played.

Forty-six woodblock prints from the Ben and Abby Grey Foundation of St. Paul, Minn., make up the second part of the show. The contemporary art exhibition is being circulated by the Western Association of Art Museums.

Both exhibits will continue through Sept. 29, and may be viewed Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

'Towers' Subject Of Museum Show

CHICAGO — An exhibition of towers will be on view at the Museum of Contemporary Art from Sept. 13 through Oct. 26. Architectural models, photographs, photostats, plans, drawings, films, and slides illustrate this survey of more than 350 towers by architects, engineers, artists, and fantasists in the museum's upper gallery.

Highlights of the exhibition include a full scale mock-up of the steel exoskeleton of the John Hancock Center's 75th floor; a working model of NASA's Saturn Launch Tower and Vehicle Assembly Building; architectural models of the Hancock Center, Marina City, New York's World Trade Center; Mies van der Rohe's Toronto Dominion Center; reproductions of 29 entries to the famous 1922 Chicago Tribune Tower competition; models of an archaeologist's reconstruction of the legendary Tower of Babel, and Chicago's Water Tower; and many fanciful drawings and models of tower projects by artists.

Displays of watch towers, architectural towers, engineering towers, communications towers, restaurant observation towers, artists' towers, and a brief historical survey of towers are systematically grouped with related tape recorded interviews and explanatory text.

The museum's curator, David H. Katzive, began assembling material for the exhibition last spring. The idea of a show on towers arose in response to Chicago's unique involvement with tower structures from the Water Tower through the Tribune Tower, Mies van der Rohe's 860 Lake Shore Drive towers, Bertrand Goldberg's Marina City, Schipporeit and Heinrich's Lake Point Tower, and Skidmore, Owings, and Merrill's John Hancock Center.

The appearance in the 1960's of many observation-restaurant towers throughout the world was also an influential factor in planning the exhibition. These structures, like the Eiffel Tower or Seattle's Space Needle, are slender structures offering a view and prestige to the city where they are erected. Frequently they are topped with a TV transmission mast which mercifully spares skyscrapers from this burden.

Tall structures customarily serve a function of providing a panoramic view. Curator Katzive explains that this "invariably creates a feeling of personal power or awe in the spectator. It is exhilarating to look down at the world from a high altitude. As in ancient times a high vantage point offers security and information about the terrain." An extensive portion of the exhibition includes towers with this watch tower function — airport control towers (with notable designs by the late Eero Saarinen and I. M. Pei), ranger lookout stations, crow's nests, primitive tree top structures, war-time sentry stations, and astronomical observatories.

An engineering section is devoted to functional towers including the NASA exhibit, graceful and innovative water towers, oil drilling rigs, mining towers, and bridge towers. "Among the most imaginative forms in the show," says Katzive, "are these water towers where the designer was not plagued by a conflict of human and functional requirements in one structure."

Communications towers transmit or relay information as opposed to watch towers which receive information. Lighthouses and railroad signal towers transmit light; bell towers and minarets transmit sound; radar, microwave relay, and radio-TV towers transmit radio waves, and high tension electric power towers transmit electricity.

The final section of the exhibition includes models, drawings, and reproductions of towers of whim and fancy by artists such as Claes Oldenburg, Jean Dubuffet, Francois Dallegret, Mathias Goerits, Andre Bloc, Nicholas Schoffer, Gregorio Vardanega, Christo, Vladimir Tatlin, H. C. Westermann, Simon Rodia, Siah Armajani, and John Furlival.

College-Bound Students?

*says this noted novelist;
this really so bad?*

vate lives of the youths who have come there for the sole purpose of improving their minds. What they do in their spare time is their own business.

Today's sudden freedom can be as frightening as it is heady to the youngsters who have been kept under tight reins by schools and parents. They find all the old basic assumptions being challenged. Why is it wrong for a young couple to live together without being married? Why is it wrong to smoke pot when so many of their friends do?

It is a rare and lucky parent who hears these questions asked at home. But they are there in the eyes of our children, and in one way or another they will find the answers, with or without our help.

College today can be so overwhelming that far more students drop out than in my day, despite the fact that it is harder than ever to get a good job without a degree, and despite the vulnerability to the draft that dropping out provokes. Faced with such circumstances, fond parents can't help but be worried about more than the soaring expense when they start their sons and daughters on the great adventure of getting a higher education. What do you say when you see the children off to college? What do you say to them, and what do you say to comfort yourself when you return to your suddenly quiet home?

Of course, the important thing for us elders to remember is the extraordinary fact that the great majority of the students are somehow coping very well with all the confusion on the campus. The youngsters are working hard to try to figure out answers to the great problems of the day which they did not create, and which all too many of their parents simply try to forget.

One way to keep in touch with youth is to show them that the old as well as the young care about the war in Vietnam, and the other great problems which concern them. The generation gap should not simply be between those who care and those who don't.

If students drop out, that should not be regarded as too great a tragedy, for many of them return to college and do better than ever, after a few months of work at dead-end jobs. The youngsters of today are trying to discover new ways to live meaningful lives, new paths that lead to something better than a big bank account and a new car. We shouldn't be surprised if the bravest explorers sometimes get lost.

In my opinion, the great majority of the students are learning a lot more than my friends and I did in college, not only from their professors, but also from each other. They use the word "love" a lot, and if you watch the way they deal with each other, you can't doubt that most of them mean it. They keep saying that the most important thing is to care about people, to be involved, and I think they are groping for the truth.

I have given up trying to give advice to college students these days. I just try to offer sympathy, understanding, respect, and a little money. My simple reward is that they often talk to me.

Much of what they say is foolish, but the old should be used to forgiving that. The extraordinary thing is that so much of what they say and do is wise and good. •

What a beautiful and delightful way to tell the weather! Set up this sparkling Royal Crystal Swan. Place it on your TV, table, shelf, mantle-piece, near a window, etc. Then be prepared for a pleasant surprise! As you watch, the ruby-red liquid creeps up or down in a strange, almost eerie sort of way. If it surges up into the graceful swan's neck, you are forewarned: stormy weather is in the offing. "WHAT MAKES IT WORK?"

QUIPS AND QUOTES

Little Mary, a first grader, was listening intently as her older brother talked with a couple of friends about the merits of college. The conversation turned to the average student's inability to read quickly. They exchanged helpful hints on the subject for several minutes. Finally Mary decided to give some advice of her own.

She announced gravely: "Well, I've found that you can read a lot faster if you don't stop to color the pictures." —Dan Bennett

An American couple was checking out of their French hotel, and the husband complained to the manager: "Your bill lists 'fruit, 200 francs.' We haven't had any fruit."

"The fruit was placed in your room every day. It was not the fault of the hotel that you did not eat it."

The husband replied calmly, "Very well. But I am deducting 100 francs—for kissing my wife."

"But, Monsieur, I have never kissed your wife!"

"Well, she was here. It isn't my fault if you didn't."

The Double Life of Meredith MacRae

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

MEREDITH MACRAE, who stars in "Petticoat Junction" as a demure country girl named Billie Jo, remembers her singer-actor father exploding in anger because, as a child, she spilled milk.

Meredith MacRae, who is anything but a demure country girl off-camera, remembers her actress-comedienne mother Sheila MacRae as being so permissive she allowed her to spend the summer at a boyfriend's house when she was only 15.

After 25 years of marriage, her parents divorced—almost simultaneously with Meredith, who married at 19 and divorced a few years later. Now she has remarried (so have her parents), and the life she lives still upsets her strict father but seemingly delights her permissive mother.

The manner of her marriages gives a clue to the real Meredith MacRae, a hybrid of her father's conservativeness and her mother's liberalism. She married her first husband, Rick Berger, now a movie executive, in a formal church wedding with 500 splendidly attired guests.

This year she married actor Greg Mullavey at "a church of all religions" off a Pacific beach with a Buddhist monk presiding and friends who came dressed—period. These friends were from a group-therapy cult which often holds nude meetings in sulphur baths. "Casual living," explains Meredith, "dissolves inhibitions and provides expression."

About her first husband, she says, "We were different personalities. Rick was an only child and conservative. I was the oldest of four children and an extrovert. We were good friends but not good mates."

About her second husband, she says, "I don't like being away from Greg. Last year I had to make 22 trips. Any time away from him is too much. That's one reason we hope some day to work together with our own production company."

Meanwhile, she hopes her own career will go beyond the "Petticoat Junction" image of her as a sweet rural lass in Hooterville. She has appeared in some bikini-beach movies and has just finished Paramount's big film, "Norwood"—in which she also wears a bikini but with some acting thrown in.

Gordon and Sheila MacRae did all they could to help Meredith in show business. "My first part was as an extra in one of Dad's films, 'By the Light of the Silvery Moon.' I was seven years old. After that I did a lot of singing with my father.

"At first, I wanted a career as a singer, but seeing what happened to my father's career made me decide it was better to become an actress who could sing than be known as a singer who always had to prove she could act."

Meredith is delighted that her younger sister Heather appears in Broadway's rock musical "Hair," and she thinks that it is natural that the cast often appears nude. She herself is noted for the briefest of dresses (blouse and skirt) and minimal bathing suits. When I met her, though, she was dressed demurely. "Well," she said, "I have an appointment connected with 'Petticoat Junction,' so . . ."

How do her parents feel about the mod behavior of their two daughters?

"Dad's not happy. I didn't tell him about my divorce until I filed. I knew he'd be disappointed. He thinks Heather's stripping is unnecessary—actually she keeps her clothes on when a member of the family is in the audience. What does my mother think? She thinks it's great!"

Meredith still has some old-fashioned ideas which would please Hooterville—and Gordon MacRae. She does her own housekeeping and cooking. Running a home isn't a new experience for Meredith who, at 15, took charge of her brothers and sister when her parents went on the road as a night-club act.

The Mullaveys' life is relatively quiet. "Greg doesn't like the typical Hollywood scene. Neither do I."

That didn't sound to me like she was much different from her image as Billie Jo. There's just some Hollywood mixed in with that basic Hooterville. ♦

Teen-Age Danger— Dieting Until Death!

Anorexia nervosa, doctors call it—an aversion to food caused by psychological hang-ups so strong even hunger cannot overcome it

By CAROL AMEN

RECENTLY an 18-year-old wanting to look like her modeling idol, Twiggy, died, a 45-pound skeleton. She had dieted herself to death—a victim of malnutrition and anorexia nervosa, which is an aversion to eating.

"Anorexia" means loss of appetite; "Nervosa" is self-explanatory, but this disease is far more serious than a high-strung absence of hunger pangs. Anorexia nervosa sufferers literally cannot force themselves to eat, even when they are starving and, in some cases, craving food.

The typical anorexic is emaciated, young, surprisingly lively, probably constipated. If male, he is most likely impotent; if female, she is probably not having menstrual periods. Except for the staggering weight loss, there is nothing physically wrong—it is psychosomatic.

Anorexia nervosa occurs more often in adolescent girls and young women than it does in males of the same age group. The background usually includes extreme family focus on food, possibly obese parents, and frequently a lifelong desire to be thin. It can be triggered by fears of physical maturity, usually starting during a diet. It is a symptom of deep-seated psychiatric distress.

From actual anorexia case histories come accounts of 1) a boy who hid food in a bag held between his legs during meals. He routinely scraped butter off his bread onto the underside of his chair and put other objectionable food into the bag, which he disposed of later; 2) a girl who slipped most of her food, meal after meal, to the family dog sitting under the table while her parents bickered; 3) a girl who weighted her underclothes with a large collection of half-dollars whenever her mother put her on the scales; 4) a girl who kept a marked satin ribbon around her waist, not allowing herself to expand beyond it. "I prefer dying of hunger than becoming as big as Mama," she said.

Teen-age is a time of hypersensitivity. Often anorexia patients admit feeling desperately lonely, ugly, cut-off from others, and unwanted. They can't cope with being called "chubby."

In addition, there are general factors. Middle- and upper-class adults often fluctuate between overeating and crash diets. Confused young people, especially in families where one or both parents are obese, may determine to avoid the same mistake.

The average person can diet without too much fear of aftereffects. The unknown anorexic, however, has no guarantee that normal eating habits can be resumed after the extra poundage is gone, and the disease does not erupt during a single traumatic incident with food.

One girl, for example, felt sure that if she ate squash she would vomit, so her family agreed that she should eliminate it from her diet. Gradually, more and more foods reminded her of squash and gave her the same nausea. By the time she saw a doctor, almost all food tasted like squash.

Tips on Teen Food and Diets

TEENS: Don't be afraid of food. It is an important fuel. During adolescence, large amounts of calories are burned. If you have a weight problem (over or under), consult your doctor.

A hamburger is just as nourishing for breakfast as bacon and eggs. If you like it better, why not?

Never risk fad diets. Check with your doctor before you start any diet.

PARENTS: Avoid using food as a bribe, reward, or punishment, particularly during early years.

Keep mealtimes as relaxed and tension-free as possible.

A three-year-old finicky eater does not have anorexia nervosa, but, by adolescence, he could develop it if overanxious parents turn mealtime into a nightmare. A pint-sized person actually requires little food.

Appraise your own attitude toward sex. Maintain a balanced, healthy environment as much as possible.

Just do your best. That's all anyone expects. It's usually more than enough.

Certain victims believe that only a specific food will not cause bad symptoms. One girl kept evaporated milk until it dried out into hard curds, which she considered a delicacy and ate exclusively.

One articulate girl told her doctor, "The fear of being fat has to this day constituted my most terrifying problem. Without a doubt, my inferiority complex has arisen from this one deep-seated fear. I won't be the same as when I was growing up—fat and insecure."

From psychiatrists' notebooks come accounts of childhood contributing factors. One mother followed her daughter to school and physically forced her to eat the remainder of an unfinished breakfast. Extremely common was the practice of using food as a bribe—"You've been a good boy. Have some cake."

Another anorexic's mother alternated between food orgies and starvation crash diets. The daughter had similar tendencies but overreacted. She just couldn't stop dieting, even when told that she was starving.

Food equals evil, self-indulgence, or sexuality to some. Under psychotherapy, one girl revealed that food had come to stand for sex. Because her upbringing did not permit her to date boys (though she wanted to very much), she denied herself food as a punishment for her lustful impulses. Some anorexics of this type alternate between almost total abstinence and binges, only to induce vomiting when finished.

There is no safe leeway for any home-style cures. Psychiatrists stress that best results are obtained with early and vigorous treatment. It is the doctor who must decide if the loss of appetite is truly anorexic.

Treatment is on two levels, physical and psychic. Frequent high caloric meals are sometimes prescribed, but in severe cases the anorexic is hospitalized and given tube feedings. Then immediate psychotherapy digs for causes. The doctor must reassure that there is no organic basis for the disease. With early treatment, the majority of anorexics recover.

If you suspect someone in your family of having anorexia nervosa or being a borderline case, get help fast. Never try do-it-yourself psychotherapy. Confide your fears to the family doctor. Let him decide if specialized treatment is needed. ♦

A Breakfast Spectacular

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

■ There may be occasions when a breakfast at nine is a more desirable time to entertain a crowd than a brunch at eleven. If you enlist many silent helpers—namely, cans and packages of convenience foods along with electric appliances—you'll probably be able to prepare all of the food yourself.

Skillet Roast Beef Hash with Eggs

- 4 cans (15 oz. each) roast beef hash
- 1 cup sweet pickle relish
- ½ cup chili sauce
- 1 tablespoon horseradish

1. Mix hash with a blend of pickle relish, chili sauce, and horseradish in a large bowl.
2. Turn into a skillet and set over medium heat, mixing occasionally until thoroughly heated, about 30 min. Spread lightly and evenly to sides of skillet. Sprinkle entire surface lightly with paprika.
3. Before serving, top with fried or poached eggs. Sprinkle eggs with paprika. Surround hash with buttered toast points (see photo). Serve from skillet. 12 servings

Glazed Smoked Ham for 16

Place a 5- to 7-lb. butt half of a fully cooked smoked ham, fat side up, on rack in a shallow roasting pan; insert roast meat thermometer. Heat uncovered at 325°F. until meat thermometer registers 130°F. (allowing 18 to 24 min. per lb.). About 45 min. before end of heating period, trim and score fat surface of ham to make a diamond pattern. Spread with a glazing mixture of ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar, 2 teaspoons flour, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, and 1 tablespoon cider vinegar. Return to oven for about 45 min.

Frosted Nut Bread Ring Loaf

- 1 pkg. (13¾ oz.) hot roll mix
- 1 pkg. (about 1 lb.) yellow cake mix
- 3 eggs
- 2 cups water
- 1 cup pecans, coarsely chopped
- Mocha Frosting

1. Thoroughly grease a 10-in. tubed pan; set aside.
2. Empty pkg. of hot roll mix and its packet of yeast into a large bowl; mix. Add cake mix and blend thoroughly.
3. Add the eggs and water. Using an electric mixer at medium speed

- beat for two min. Stir in the nuts.
4. Turn into the greased pan. Using a spoon or spatula, gently pull batter from tube toward edge of pan.
5. Bake at 375°F. 10 min. Reduce heat to 350°F. and bake 45 min. or until a cake tester comes out clean.
6. Remove from oven to a wire rack and allow to stand about 10 min. before removing from pan to cooling rack. Cool completely and frost top. If desired, garnish with chopped candied fruit.

One 10-in. tubed bread

Mocha Frosting

Following pkg. directions, prepare about ½ the pkg. of a 13½ oz. or 14-oz. creamy white frosting mix, or vanilla butter cream frosting mix. Stir in 1 teaspoon instant coffee powder until blended. For a thinner spreading consistency, mix in 2 or 3 teaspoons of water.

Instant Breakfast Pie

A pie filling of succulent fresh pears in gelled vanilla instant breakfast is a cool, refreshing contrast to the sweet, buttery, cereal topping in this unusual pie.

- 1 baked 9-in. pie shell prepared from a pie crust mix
- 3 env. unflavored gelatin
- ½ cup water
- 3 packets (about 1 oz. each) vanilla-flavored instant breakfast
- 3 cups milk
- 2 fresh pears, quartered, pared, cored, and diced
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 1½ cups high protein ready-to-eat cereal*
- ½ cup brown sugar

1. Sprinkle gelatin over water in a saucepan, stir over low heat until gelatin is completely dissolved. Set aside to cool.
2. Empty contents of instant breakfast packets into a saucepan. Stir in the milk until blended. Mix in gelatin; stir until smooth. If gelatin tends to sheet or lump, set mixture over low heat; stir until smooth.
3. Chill in refrigerator or over ice and water, stirring occasionally if refrigerated, and frequently if over ice and water, until almost set.

4. Blend in pears and extract. Turn into baked pie shell; chill.

5. Prepare cereal topping. Put butter or margarine in a heated skillet and stir until melted and slightly browned. Remove from heat, stir in cereal and toss until coated. Add the brown sugar and continue tossing until well mixed.

6. Remove pie from refrigerator. Cover with the cereal topping. If desired, spoon whipped cream around edge of pie and tuck in small pieces of unpared pear (see photo).

One 9-in. pie

*Ready-to-eat cereals high in vitamin and iron content may be substituted for those high in protein.

Hot Bread Duo

Team apple cinnamon muffins, prepared from a mix and topped with finely chopped nuts before baking, with crescent yeast rolls, prepared from packages of refrigerated fresh dough. Before baking, brush crescents with egg white and caraway seeds.

The How-To-Do-It Plan

(Follow steps in order)

1. A day in advance, bake and store the pastry for one or more pies (and the nut bread, if necessary).
2. The morning of the breakfast, put the ham in the oven early enough (about 3 hrs. in advance of serving) to allow for thoroughly heating and glazing it.
3. If a second oven is available, pre-heat it; mix the batter and bake the tubed nut bread.
4. Reconstitute frozen orange juice concentrate or orange drink and refrigerate in pitchers. Empty cans of tomato juice or vegetable juice cocktail into a pitcher and refrigerate. Cut orange slices into quarters and lemons or limes into small wedges for garnishing juice glasses; wrap and chill.
5. Make the pie filling. Turn into the pastry shell and refrigerate.
6. Prepare the hash mixture and put it in a large skillet for heating.
7. Mix cereal topping; complete pie.
8. If using only one oven, get muffin batter and crescent roll dough ready for baking. Remove ham, reset oven control for muffins; after baking, reset for rolls.

9. Spread glaze over ham; set aside.
10. Put nut bread on a plate; frost.
11. After baking rolls, reduce oven temperature and return ham to oven; heat until glazed, 45 min.
12. While hash is heating, prepare toast points; tuck in around hash. Fry eggs for topping and additional eggs to be kept hot in an electric skillet set on table with hash.
13. Also set on the buffet table the electric toaster with an assortment of fruit-filled pop-ups.

14. Put the breakfast pie, a server, plates, and forks on the side table after removing the juice service.
15. Have freshly brewed hot coffee available throughout the morning.

Juices and Coffee Service

Set up a side table with a tray of garnished juice glasses and the pitchers of chilled juices, a shaker of seasoned salt and a bottle of Worcestershire so guests can easily serve themselves. For those who like coffee before breakfast, keep a carafe of water boiling at this table. Accompany with jars of freeze dried coffee and instant coffee powder, teaspoons, cups and saucers.

Cereals with Instant Breakfast Service

On the buffet table, place a tray of 10-oz. glasses with spoons in them for stirrers. Alongside, set a basket filled with packets of instant breakfast in assorted flavors, a large pitcher of cold milk for mixing the instant breakfast, bowls of granulated and brown sugar, a stack of cereal bowls, and a choice of ready-to-eat cereals such as those high in vitamins and iron, others high in protein, and an assortment of bran and oat flakes. Guests may blend cereals if desired before pouring over their instant breakfast.

Pollution Crackdown Stuns State, Industry

Probe of Fox River Is Surprise

BY TOM TORINUS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

State officials and pulp and paper industry representatives are left "surprised" and "perplexed" by the federal government's new investigation of pollution in the Fox River.

Both groups claim the pulp and paper mills have made significant progress in abating pollution and will fulfill state orders by the 1972 deadline.

The state pollution orders pending against most Fox Valley mills have received the tacit approval of the federal government, state officials point out.

The new federal initiative directly against individual polluters on the Fox River, in the entire Great Lakes basin and in major river basins across the country was announced last week by Carl L. Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality.

Not Singled Out

Klein said Friday that the Fox Valley pulp and paper mills were not being singled out by the federal government, but would be investigated along with every other major source of pollution on the Great Lakes. He said there is at this point no evidence that their progress is too slow.

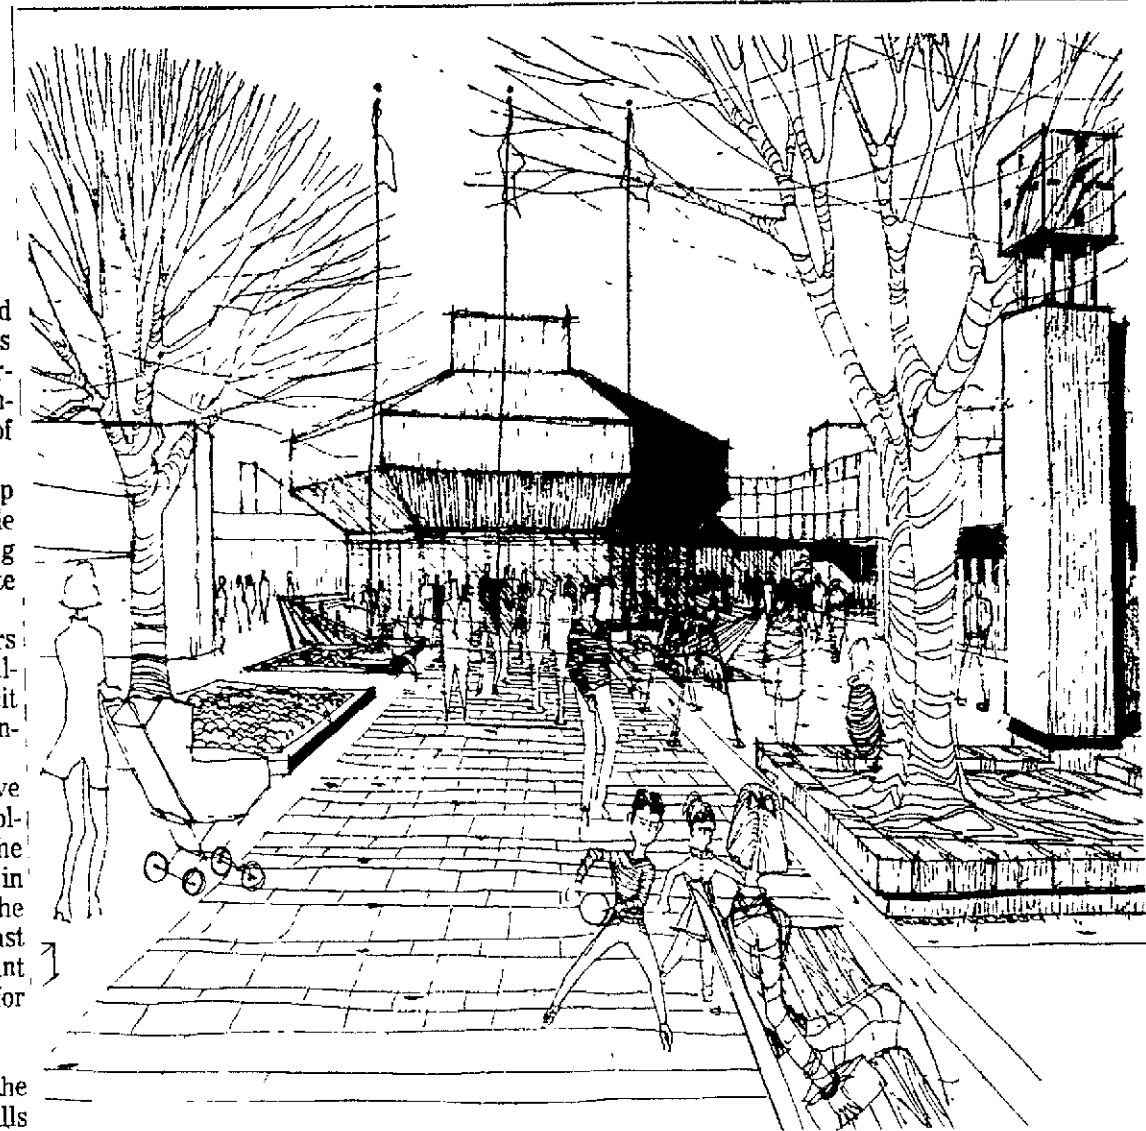

A team of federal investigators either already have visited the Fox River Valley or will visit here in the near future, Klein said.

If the investigators find that industries or municipalities are making unsatisfactory progress toward stopping their pollution, the secretary of the interior will order them to produce accelerated abatement plans at a public hearing within six months.

If the industry's plans are still unsatisfactory, or if it fails to produce plans, court action will be taken by the federal government.

Shopping District of the Future?

Step-by-Step Planning

New London Development Looks Ahead to Year 2000

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON — Implementation of the city's new downtown development plan will be a long and difficult task.

However, a pressing need and the firm recommendation of the planner could give it impetus by carrying through two of the key proposals.

New London is faced with a Jan. 1, 1971, state deadline for constructing a new fire station.

Max Anderson, Madison planner, said the location of a city complex in an area north of the main business district is second in importance only to developing Shiocton Street as a mainped and the shopping district traffic loop to carry U.S. 45 is attractive to the shopper, traffic around the central business district.

Downtown Area

Anderson was adamant in his view that locating the city's complex any place other than the downtown area would be a serious mistake.

Should the city follow the recommendations of the planner in order to comply with the state order, it would mean that the Shiocton Street traffic loop would be completed within 18 months. A temporary delay in completing the loop might be accomplished by an extended entrance to the fire station of Waupaca Street.

Anderson's proposal will involve an extensive urban renewal program using federal and state monies to supplement the city's investment.

Selective Removal

The residential area north of the North Water Street business district would be almost entirely included in the urban renewal. Anderson said selective removal would be used in the systematic removal and replacing of buildings around which municipal buildings would be constructed.

Estimated cost of implementing the plan is $2.8 million, which would be shared by the city, state, and federal government. Anderson said his plan is flexible and not stages of plan implementation.

A detailed plan stating, "this is where an office building should be, or this is where a downtown hotel belongs."

What will New London look like in year 2,000? Anderson said his plan is flexible and not stages of plan implementation.

The decks would be constructed where an office building should be, or this is where a downtown hotel belongs."

FBI Joins Search For Semi-Trailer

Missing Unit Contained $40,000 Worth of Tractors, Mowers

FBI investigators have joined Outagamie County sheriff authorities in investigating the hijacking of a semi-trailer containing about $40,000 worth of garden tractors, lawn mowers and accessories.

The theft was discovered Saturday morning by Gordon Graham, dispatcher for Diamond Transportation Co., whose terminal is located at the intersection of U.S. 10 and State 76, west of Appleton.

The trailer unit, destined for Islington, Ontario, arrived at the truck terminal Thursday night. However, because many trailers are constantly arriving and departing, company officials did not discover the loss of the unit until Saturday.

Lt. Jack Zuelzke of the Outagamie County sheriff's department, said the missing 40-foot long trailer is aluminum colored, and has a large green diamond decal in front. The trailer has Ontario, New York, Wisconsin, and Quebec license plates.

FBI and county investigators think the thieves used a semi-trailer rig to haul the trailer away. The trailer contained 35 garden tractors, 26 lawn mowers, 10 grader blades, five cartons of hitches and five cartons of hydraulic lifts. All equipment in the trailer was manufactured by the J. I. Case Co.

Authorities said a substantial reward has been offered for information leading to arrest of the hijackers.

Tipsy Driving Cases Usually Fail in Court

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Last April, an Appleton man was involved in an auto accident.

Police charged him with four traffic violations, including driving while under the influence of intoxicants. Police said he tested .18 per cent on a breathalyzer. A reading of .15 per cent is considered prima facie evidence of intoxication in Wisconsin.

Most police agencies will make an arrest if the reading is .15 or higher.

The Appleton man pleaded innocent. This month, the city attorney's office moved to dismiss all but one count. The man pleaded guilty of driving after revocation and was sentenced to 10 days in jail.

The court action was not unusual. Appleton police had 71 intoxicated driving cases in court last year. In 31 cases (44 per cent) the charges were reduced — usually to reckless driving.

Records show that through July of this year Appleton police have brought 23 motorists to court for intoxicated driving. In six of those cases, the motorists paid fines on reduced charges. Nine of the 23 cases are scheduled for trials. Five of the motorists pleaded guilty or no contest, and one was found guilty when he failed to appear for trial.

Asks For Reductions

One case was dismissed by the court because the arresting officer issued a faulty ticket. Prosecution in nearly all of the city traffic cases is handled by the city attorney's office. It was that office that asked for most of the reductions in the intoxicated driver cases.

Records kept by Outagamie County police indicated they made 12 intoxicated driver arrests last year. At that time, many of the traffic cases were prosecuted by the corporation counsel's office.

That office asked for and obtained reduced charges of reckless driving in six of the 12 cases. Four motorists pleaded guilty, one was found guilty by a jury and another was found guilty when he failed to appear for trial.

Lengthy Trial

The district attorney's office now prosecutes state and county traffic cases.

Dist. Atty. James R. Long said that six motorists were convicted of intoxicated driving this year. Five of those pleaded guilty or no contest and the scheduled for trials. Five of the

Welfare Recipients to Tell Their Story Froehlich to be Target of Pickets

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Welfare recipients from Outagamie County plan to picket the courthouse and the home of Assemblyman Harold V. Froehlich (R-Appleton) on Sept. 18.

Meeting at the Outagamie County Bank Saturday afternoon, a dozen women in the loosely organized welfare recipients' rights group agreed to make their first attempt at publicly demonstrating their feelings since formally organizing a month ago.

At the courthouse, they hope to express their view that county authorities have been lax in prosecuting ex-husbands charged with nonsupport.

New State Budget
Froehlich is the target of protests over cutbacks in welfare payments as a result of the new state budget he guided to passage in the Assembly as the Republican majority's speaker.

According to Mrs. Kathleen Groat, basic services supervisor for the Outagamie County Welfare Department, it is expected that the new budget will require welfare payments to families on Aid to Families of Dependent Children (AFDC) programs to be cut back by about $6 per person per month. A family of four, for instance, might experience a reduction of $24 per month in income.

Mrs. Groat was present at Saturday's meeting as a guest. "How do they expect us to get along?" she was asked by one welfare mother, referring to the state legislators.

"I don't know. I don't know how they ever came up with this idea that they could make these cuts and you wouldn't suffer for it," she replied.

Force People to Work

Mrs. Groat added, "Not only are you so opposed to it, but social workers also disapprove of the budget. We are very upset about it," she said.

Apparently, she stated, the lawmakers believed cutting welfare payments would force recipients to work.

"What about those who can't?" asked another woman. "I don't know. I don't think that the legislators took you into account," replied the welfare supervisor.

The women agreed another goal would be to meet with Alfred R. Eggert, county welfare director, and discuss his interpretation that state administrative regulations prevent welfare recipients from receiving work incentive credits for doing work in their homes. Some women said they would like to take in ironing or babysitting, but according to Mrs. Groat the director has ruled out such earnings.

Thus Spake Zarathustra

Bum Finds Oshkosh 'Very Edible'

BY MARK E. OLIVA
Sunday Times Staff Writer

Oshkosh, Appleton and Menasha are very edible towns, in the sense one can eat there, but to a young man choosing my profession I would say beware of Neenah. Terror reigns there for him who is unemployed."

Such is the hospitality rating of Fox Valley cities from a self-proclaimed "Duncan Hines of the Road" who chose to identify himself simply as Zarathustra.

When quizzed on the origin of his name, he replied:

"I baptized myself Zarathustra the moment you asked my name. After all putting my name in a newspaper would only help my wife to find me, wouldn't it? Besides, I've always been somewhat of a fan of Nietzsche. And now, after one of my quotes, you can write 'Thus Spake Zarathustra'."

Thus spake Zarathustra. He apparently had no desire to explain the "terrors" of Neenah. "I have no need to tell of the evils of the people of Neenah, Wisconsin."

since being booted out of the Army in 1965.

"I quit in my last year in high school and joined the Army in '44. The Army said I drank too much and was busted from sergeant to private too many times. I was discharged as an undesirable in '55 after sitting a stretch in the stockade for being AWOL about a month."

"I been on the road since then. There's no work. The Army didn't give me no trade. I was just in the infantry," was the word, according to John.

In contrast, Zarathustra, who maintains himself as and believes himself to be a man of culture and taste, said, "I don't drink, I think."

Yet drink appeared to be among Zarathustra's desires. Before he, the apparent leader of the duo for the day, would consent to either party being interviewed, he insisted they be treated to beer and hot beef sandwiches.

Once the beer was down, Zarathustra agreed to open his "heart, mind and mouth."

two cars, diet dinners and 'two pots in every chicken.' It's all worthless now. I just see, smile and say, 'Be nice, little children.'"

"There really is nothing else you can do, you know — nothing else at all."

When asked how he reconciled "being nice" with his desertion of his wife, Zarathustra answered:

"I have no regrets about my wife. She is a fully capable human being with no sense of compassion for her fellow man. Not even she could say I was not nice to her before I left her."

"But I am very sad that I brought three little babies into this world. It's terrible to make babies to face the human race."

'Bomb Is Solution'

In answer to a query concerning Zarathustra's solution to world problems, he said:

"I won't try to solve the world's problems. Besides, the human race has found a solution. I believe, the bomb. Exterminating the human race is the most painless, peaceful solution."

The writer's own experiences riding the rails in the past have taught him that if Zarathustra did represent himself correctly as a hobo, he is an exception in the "profession." John is more typical.

The filled box cars departing from the Dust Bowl and heading into the Depression are a thing of the past. The hobo trade's ranks are diminished. On the usual through freight train, you might find one or two, but probably none.

The drifters travel from town to town, via rail, partly from wanderlust, partly from shiftlessness, but mainly for "economic" reasons. They roam the North and East during the summer and South and West in winter.

'Yard Bulls' Gone

Even though the rules remain, the legendary "yard bulls" and "railroad dicks" of the past, with their pistols and clubs, are a thing of the past for most railways outside the big cities.

Some roads, notably the Burlington and the Southern Pacific, do enforce no-rider rules strictly. One railroad has a policy of putting noticed riders off in the desert. But most let the traveler continue in peace, if he does the same.

Andre' E. LeTendre, 32, Wausau, was honored at an Appleton testimonial dinner Saturday night for his recent election to the post of president of the United States Jaycees. Mr. and Mrs. LeTendre, center, are being congratulated by Jerry Schoepke, left, and Keith Long, right, banquet chairman. The banquet was held at St. Joseph cafeteria. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Air of Professor

Zarathustra and his companion-of-the-moment, John, were found in the North Fond du Lac switchyards of the Chicago and North Western Railway Wednesday afternoon. They had arrived that day via a Soo Line boxcar, after spending what they described as a relatively pleasant Labor Day weekend in Oshkosh.

Appearing more like a college professor than a hobo in his fairly clean and neat brown suit, trousers and sport shirt with a goatee gracing his chin and a thin mustache tickling his upper lip, Zarathustra described himself as a "professional hobo with about 10 years' experience."

"I was formerly a professor of psychology at Vanderbilt University — until 1950. I have my Ph.D.," he continued.

"I was an individual who invested his life in the profitless trials of marriage, television and five days weekly of teaching a rather uninteresting group of people things none of them certainly cared to learn or remember beyond test dates."

'Been in Trouble'

However, he refused to do so for a photograph, again citing his wife's search for her husband as grounds. "My wife, I believe, has been trying diligently to find me for 10 years now. A photo in the newspaper certainly will help her, won't it?"

John was equally camera-shy. "I been in trouble. Maybe I'm still in trouble. No pictures."

At the same time he explained his social drop-out, Zarathustra began philosophizing.

"I've discovered there is only one good thing in life man can do — only one — that is to be nice to others. I'm like Johnny Appleseed. I go around here and around there planting little seeds that say, 'Be nice, children. Be nice.'"

We all will live and we all will die. What else can we do for one another?

"Perhaps I taught men how one another's minds work. But don't you see it doesn't change how they work. We still have nothing better to do than, hurt and kill one another."

'Bomb Is Solution'

In answer to a query concerning Zarathustra's solution to world problems, he said:

"I won't try to solve the world's problems. Besides, the human race has found a solution. I believe, the bomb. Exterminating the human race is the most painless, peaceful solution."

'Bumming Up' Homes

On the average, a hobo can and does make up to $10 per day, "bumming up" houses, asking for handouts. They will chuckle and repeat, "It only takes four bits 20 times to make 10 bucks."

And each day's "10 bucks" goes to buy a little food and a lot of wine or whisky, all consumed in the day's times. As a rule, a town is good for "bumming up" for three days in a row, at the most, and then it's time to catch the next fast freight somewhere else.

Trouble in Cities

When the hoboes create trouble, it's usually in the cities after they leave the train rather than on board. Most of the time, they live quite peaceably.

Zarathustra claimed he and John rode the Soo Line from Sault Ste. Marie to "somewhere outside Marshfield," hitchhiked to Neenah, where they boarded a Soo Line southbound freight that turned out to be a way freight stopping in Oshkosh, and left that train near downtown Oshkosh.

According to Zarathustra, the duo "found a cabin cruiser in the harbor with a rather frail lock and lived comfortably for three days."

"When the little bit of food there ran out, we asked fishermen for fish they didn't want. This is very sad too — so many fishermen just like to kill fish, they don't want to eat them."

Chase Results In Accident; Youth Is Cited

KAUKAUNA — A 19-year old youth was cited for three violations following a chase early Saturday which resulted in a one-car accident at County Trunks Z and ZZ.

Police were attempting to stop a car driven by Michael Krueger, 159 Grant St., about 1 a.m. when the driver lost control of the car on a curve, broke off two guard posts and came to rest in a ditch 78 feet from where the car hit the second post.

Neither Krueger or his two passengers were injured, according to the report. He was cited for attempting to elude police, arterial violation and driving at speeds not reasonable or prudent.

Science Reveals the Real You

SCIENTISTS are interested in more than outer space and laser beams. They are interested in you. As a matter of fact, nothing is researched more than the human personality—with some surprising findings. Here are some of them:

The way you adjust your color television reveals your nature.

Dr. Max Leuscher of the Institute of Psycho-Diagnostic Medicine says if you like the red tones on your color tv heightened, you are self-confident and full of physical vitality. Increasing the blues indicates tranquility and impassivity. Too much yellow indicates an optimistic nature.

Your sleep habits reveal your outlook on life.

A group of behavioral scientists

says that if you sleep on your side curled up like a cat, you're probably a lonely person who needs protection. The flat-on-his-back sleeper is happy with himself and his accomplishments. The side sleeper is a very complex person who is apt to look at life negatively, and the face downward snoozer is exhibiting stubbornness and negativity. There's even an answer for the bed hog who pushes the partner so far he or she must cling to the mattress to keep from falling. They are just expressing feelings of aggression against their mates, say the researchers.

The number of times you use a seat belt is connected with your attitudes, wealth, and education.

A University of Michigan report disclosed that you are more likely to use your seat belt if you have a generally approving attitude toward modern science, if you have substantial cash savings, and if you are well-educated and have health insurance, too.

A man's preference for women is a key to his personality.

Psychologists Jerry Wiggins and his wife Nancy of the University of Illinois say men who prefer girls with large bosoms tend to be more social than those who prefer their gals with smaller ones. The guys who like long-legged girls are usually relatively passive and seldom drink. Those who lean toward shorter-legged women generally are interested in social activities.

The shape of a woman's legs gives clues to her character.

Elizabeth Coope, working at the Aston University in Birmingham, England, says if a woman has fat knees that knock, she'd better cover them up. No sense telling everyone she's addle-headed. Piano legs divulge that she is somewhat unimaginative but fabulously efficient. If, however, her legs are heavy but well-shaped, she gives away the fact that she's conceited and vastly capable, but, alas, lazy. Long legs indicate the sexy type; thin and well-shaped appendages tell people she's sure of herself and knows "what it's all about."

— and finally released to the public!

Yes, proven at Indianapolis — proven in the same test laboratories used by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler — proven by the world's largest automobile fleet owners! An exciting new scientific "breakthrough" that means... no matter what kind of gas you use... no matter what kind of car you own you can now pile up 100 miles of driving a week, month after month and fill your gas-tank as little as once a month... pile up 100 miles of driving a day all 365 days of the year... and save up to 500 gallons of gas each year!

NOW! 30 DAYS OF DRIVING ON A SINGLE TANK OF GAS!

— even more startling, now save up to $16 a month, up to 50 gallons of gas each month, without changing a single part on your car!

Laboratory reports... PLUS road tests conducted on Indianapolis proving grounds reveal you may now get as much as 37 miles of driving from each gallon of gas... save up to 50 gallons of gas each month... save up to $200 on your car each year!

Six months ago, for perhaps the first time in history, the United States Government issued patent protection to an invention that has been classified ILLEGAL! Sound strange? Not really, here's why: I'm sure you're familiar with the famous gasoline-economy tests run by all the major oil companies. Well, do you know that the remarkable new invention described on this page is actually banned from these tests because it is TOO EFFECTIVE! Do you know that because this invention saves so much gasoline... that because it gives so much economy, it is actually ILLEGAL for a test-driver to fit one on his car! And do you know that because it boosts gasoline mileage up to 11 more miles per gallon... it has actually been OUTLAWED in every recognized cross-country economy run... simply because the officials who conduct these tests were forced to rule that it gives all cars that have it AN UNFAIR ADVANTAGE!

In other words, if you are a person planning on entering one of these cross-country economy runs... then this message is not for you. YOU JUST WON'T BE ALLOWED TO USE THIS NEW INVENTION—SORRY, BUT IT'S SIMPLY ILLEGAL. BUT — if you are a person who is not interested in setting any records... who is only interested in getting more miles per gallon than you ever dreamed possible... and doing it the very same way that many of America's leading corporations are doing at this very moment — then what you are about to read is perhaps the most thrilling and exciting news in automotive history.

TEST DRIVERS REPORT UP TO 11 MORE MILES PER GALLON —
The name of this great new invention is the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER... and there is no better way to describe to you the increased performance and economy it will give you... than to tell you of the "bombshell effect" it had on research scientists and test-drivers, who simply refused to believe their own gasoline gauges when they first tried it out. Look:

CUTS GASOLINE COSTS TO AS LITTLE AS 16 A MILE
1. When the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER was first tested by the same research laboratories used by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler... results were so overwhelming, (a staggering increase of up to 68 per cent)... it actually lowered gasoline costs to as little as ONE CENT A MILE.

2. When tests were made by the world's leading auto rental system with this incredible money saving invention... and then test-run on the road and on such world famous proving grounds as the Indianapolis Speedway... the test-drivers of these vehicles were absolutely amazed to see big 8 cylinder sedans get better gas-mileage than small European economy cars!

3. When large fleet owners and some of the nation's largest taxi fleets tested this great new invention to determine just how much gas it would save them... the results were so dramatic that within 30 days they reported savings of not hundreds... but thousands of gallons of gas the very first month alone!

UP TO 500 MILES OF DRIVING FROM A SINGLE TANK OF GAS

Yes, from test after test... road tests, laboratory tests, tests by some of the world's most famous drivers... come re-

BEST PROOF OF ALL!
World's Leading Rent-A-Car Company Road-Tests Amazing New Invention For 3 Solid Months... Then Orders Fleet Of Cars IMMEDIATELY EQUIPPED!
they report "Savings of up to 54 gallons a month per car!"
Yes, from one of the nation's largest automobile fleet owners comes the most dramatic proof of all... A company that spends more money on gasoline in one weekend than the average person spends in a lifetime... they tested this incredible new invention and here is what they found. BOOSTED GASOLINE MILEAGE A WHOPPING 32% ON ALL CARS TESTED. Wouldn't you like to save up to $200 a year on your car? For full details read the rest of this page.

ports of cars that drive for hundreds and hundreds of miles ON A SINGLE TANK OF GAS! Reports of test cars from Ford, General Motors, Chrysler that get more miles per gallon today than when they were brand new! Reports of big, luxury sedans that weigh 2½ times more than small European cars... yet get better mileage, better performance and huge dollar savings thanks to this new miracle invention.

IF IT WORKS SUCH MILEAGE-MIRACLES, HOW COME THE CAR MANUFACTURERS HAVEN'T INSTALLED THIS TYPE UNIT IN THEIR CARS? — THE ANSWER IS THAT TWO ALREADY HAVE!

By now you are probably wondering just what is the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER... and how does it work? Well, to make a long story short... if you were to look under the hood of one of those $20,000 European luxury cars like the Maserati or the Aston-Martin, you would see sitting in those engines... a special gasoline unit... especially designed to extract more blazing power, more energy from each gallon of gasoline. This remarkable booster-unit is what gives these cars such magnificent performance... such TOTAL POWER... such increased engine efficiency. And this is precisely what the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER is designed to do — enable your engine to extract more piston-driving power, more raw, blazing energy and more gasoline economy...

ONLY, instead of costing $100 to $150 (like the European booster-units)... the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER costs but a mere fraction.

That's because after years of intensive research automotive experts have finally found a way to simplify these booster units... reduce the number of parts in each unit... mass produce them... slash costs to a mere fraction... and make them available at a price so low it's almost too ridiculous to mention. Why do you realize what this means to you if you are a person who is determined to save yourself up to $16 a month on your gas bills... up to 50 gallons of gas each month... yes, up to $200 a year on wasted gasoline.

INSTALLS IN MINUTES — PAYS FOR ITSELF IN AS LITTLE AS 15 DAYS!

It means that no matter what kind of car you now have... no matter how old that car may be... no matter what condition it is in... no matter how many miles you pile on each month... here at last is the automotive discovery you've long dreamed about... and has now come true. Because, from this day on you too can now save up to 500 gallons of gas each and every year. NOW you too can drive for weeks and weeks on end without ever stopping at a service station. Now you too can drive across 6 states of the union on just a single tank of gas, blaze a trail from New York to Chicago on just 2 or 3 tankfuls. In other words, perform mileage miracles that only yesterday you thought were impossible.

So if you too want to achieve the same wondrous results as America's largest automobile fleet owners, by Indianapolis test-drivers, and by research scientists at the very same testing laboratories used by Ford, Chrysler and General Motors, then take advantage of this special Free-Trial introductory offer. Remember, all you risk is the few minutes it takes to fill out the special reservation coupon below, and you have a lifetime of driving convenience and economy to gain.

THIS OFFER EXPIRES IN 15 DAYS — YOU MUST ACT NOW!
Now the price of the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER on this special introductory offer is not the 15 or 20 dollars you might expect... but only $5.95. Why, you'll save up to 10 times that amount in gasoline savings in no time at all... not to mention the hundreds of gallons of gasoline and hundreds of dollars in money you save year after year.

However, due to the enormous demands of trucking companies, car-rental companies, taxicab fleets and other large users, only a limited number of G. T. ENERGY CHAMBERS can possibly be allocated each month for consumer orders. Therefore, all orders must be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. Tipsy Driving Cases Usually Fail in Court sixth was found guilty following a lengthy jury trial.

Long said his office asked for reduced charges of reckless driving in three of the cases, following conferences with the arresting officers. He said the court reduced the charges in the three remaining cases.

Law enforcement officials have become disturbed over the large number of reductions.

Said Capt. Marvin Green, head of the Appleton Police Department's traffic bureau: "I think it's a shame." He said his men are becoming "discouraged."

Situation Is Better

Sheriff Calvin L. Spice termed intoxicated driver reductions "a mockery of the law," although he emphasized that "... the situation has improved considerably since Jan. 1."

Spice said it had been "almost standard procedure" for the prosecution to reduce charges if the defendant had refused to submit to a breathalyzer test. Police say that few drivers submit to chemical tests today.

"The number of reductions we experienced certainly was not warranted," Spice remarked. He termed the drunk driver "a killer."

Of the 71 intoxicated driver cases in court here last year, guilty or no contest pleas were entered in 26. Cases against three motorists were dismissed by the court, two drivers were found guilty following trials, three motorists were found guilty of lesser charges following trials, and one was found guilty when he failed to appear for trial. Five cases are pending.

Delays Common

It is not uncommon for final disposition to take place a year or more after the charge was brought if the motorist pleads innocent. Trial usually is delayed at least once, often at the request of the defense attorney.

And the end result is usually a move for reduction of the charge.

An Appleton man was arrested May 7, 1966. On Feb. 21, 1966, he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of reckless driving.

Although reckless driving is usually the reduced count, some motorists charged with intoxicated driving wound up paying fines for inattentive driving, failure to obey a traffic signal or imprudent driving.

Why are intoxicated driver charges reduced so freely in Outagamie County?

Looks at Each Case

Richard L. Hamilton, assistant city attorney, who handles nearly all traffic cases for Appleton, said he has no policy. He looks "at each case individually."

He admitted the case might be weakened in court if the defendant refused to submit to a breathalyzer test. Often there is little evidence, other than the officer's personal observations and judgment, Hamilton explained.

And, he feels that even if the defendant did submit to a chemical test, the case might be no stronger.

A motorist might test above .15 per cent but still "pass" the other tests, such as speech and physical actions, Hamilton said. It could result in a "skippy case," he explained.

Long admitted that without the results of a chemical test and without good witnesses, intoxicated driver cases are difficult to win in court.

"Full Prosecution"

Good witnesses can make as good a case as a breathalyzer test, Long said.

He said that if his office believes a policeman has a good intoxicated driver case, "... the defendant can expect full prosecution."

A motorist who suffers a jarring injury or a bump on the head in an accident stands a good chance of beating an intoxicated driver charge, especially if he refused to submit to a breathalyzer test.

Some "hardship" cases might qualify for a reduced charge, Hamilton indicated.

On Aug. 29, Appleton police processed seven alleged drunk drivers through Outagamie County Court Branch 2. All seven pleaded innocent.

Motorists fight intoxicated driving charges for a number of reasons.

Social Stigma

Some genuinely feel they are innocent. Others feel there is a certain social stigma connected with being convicted of being drunk at the wheel.

But most defendants fight the charge simply because they can't afford to lose their driver's licenses.

Conviction in Wisconsin carries a mandatory one-year license revocation, although the cense revocation, although the motorist can apply for an occupational permit 90 days after conviction. With it, he can operate other testing devices, Spice said.

For some persons, the loss of a driver's license would mean the loss of their jobs.

That's why, Green explains, "attorneys keep coming to my Outagamie County Sheriff Calvin L. Spice, right, and William Drootson, a jailer, demonstrate the use of a new video-tape recorder system recently purchased by the county. One of the uses of the unit will be to record the actions of intoxicated drivers when they are booked into jail. (Post-Crescent Photo) missing and police began an immediate search.

"She turned up in a neighbor's house, but I was real impressed with the way they tried to help," he recalled. "It's time the people in this community realize how good a job these guys are doing."

If no one claims the reward, DeBaal has told police to turn his $5 share over to LaCount.

trolemen on the Menasha police force.

"Our first reaction was anger, that a policeman could get jumped like that," said Menasha Police Association treasurer and reward-fund director LeRoy Blank.

But the community support shown through contributions to the reward fund has given Blank and others "more faith in this community."

"It makes you feel good that people in the community care about you," he said.

While the attack on LaCount surprised many people who thought such things rarely happen in the Fox Cities, Menasha police Capt. Tony Ashenbrenner thought differently.

"Everytime you put on a badge, you're taking a chance that something like this is going to happen," he said.

Surprised by Support

But he has been surprised by community support of the reward fund.

officers and say their client won't plead guilty to drunk driving, but will to reckless driving."

One or the Other

Green sees little similarity between the two charges. "It's either drunk driving or it's reckless driving," he said.

The usual fine for intoxicated driving in Outagamie County courts is $150. The fine for reckless driving varies from $100 to $150. But, on the latter charge, the motorist gets to keep his license. He loses six points.

Police see relief in the intoxicated driver reduction problem with the recent purchase of a video tape recorder for a county jail.

The $2,200 machine provides a "word and picture" account of the drunk driver's actions at the time of the offense, the film and recording will be used in court.

The equipment will be used in conjunction with, not instead of, after conviction. With it, he can operate other testing devices, Spice said.

Police agencies already using the video tape system report "tremendous success" in prosecuting intoxicated driving cases, "That's why, Green explains, "attorneys keep coming to my like to see the law broken," he said.

For members of Local 88 of the Lithographers and Photoengravers International Union at the Earl Litho Printing Co. plant, the reward fund has been a way to show the community they do not condone violence from anyone.

The union has been on strike at the Litho plant for eight weeks and several incidents have been reported during that time involving strikers.

Union officials recognize the union has been indirectly implicated in the attack on LaCount.

"If the culprits are part of us, we want them apprehended," a union officer stated. "We want to look the world in the face, and show them we don't condone this type of abuse of the law, from anyone."

Support for Fund

Local 88 gave $100 to the reward fund. Another $50 was given by strikers who collected contributions on their own almost immediately after the incident.

When LaCount described the attack, he kept saying, "My impression was that they didn't really want to hurt me. I just happened to be there at the wrong time."

LaCount was inspecting doorways at the Litho plant around 2:20 a.m., and as he rounded the southwest corner of the plant he was struck from behind by at least two, possibly three, men.

They hit him three times in the head, ribs and stomach, but inflicted the heaviest damage when they nearly emptied a can of chemical Mace in his face at close range.

Mace is used to temporarily incapacitate a person when sprayed at arms length for about two seconds. LaCount was sprayed for between 20 and 30 seconds.

"Their big concern was that didn't want me to see them," he said.

"He Won't See"

The only words he can recall hearing the men utter was when one of them said, "I got something here, he won't see who we are now." He was presumably talking of the Mace he found on LaCount.

LaCount is anxious to bet back on the job, although he will probably not return for at least another week.

women refuse to sign the necessary legal papers.

Blames "Laxity"

"Let's let them all know that we do sign the papers," she urged. She blamed the lack of prosecution on "laxity" among officials in charge. "One department passes the buck to another," Mrs. Seely said.

Later she exhorted the women to demonstrate "that we are not the kind of people that you read about in the paper, sitting back and accepting the welfare checks and doing nothing."

"The biggest thing we have got to overcome is public opinion," she declared. "It's time for us to show them that we are not going to take this labelling, and that's what it is, labelling. Whether we are on welfare or not, we are people."

Mrs. Seely also announced after Oct. 1 she will be unable to remain an active member of the group. Due to job training through the state-federal Work Incentive program (WIN) she has a job and will no longer be a welfare recipient, she announced.

Boat Drifts Away; Youths Swim to Shore

NEENAH — Two Fox Cities teen-agers swam over one mile to shore Saturday afternoon after their boat drifted away while they were swimming in Lake Winnebago.

Greg Griesbach, 17, 1330 Oakcrest Court, Appleton, and Lynda Sholand, 18, 336 11th St., Neenah, both swam safely to the lake's north shore in Calumet County about 4:30 p.m.

The Neenah Police Department rescue boat recovered the 14-foot sailboat just south of High Cliff State Park after a two and one-half hour search.

Outagamie County authorities sent out an alert late Saturday on a 1962 tan Ford station wagon reported stolen minutes earlier from the VanZeeland Garage, 103 W. North St., Little Chute.

New Pollution Efforts Stun State, Industries

anywhere," Klein said.

Enforcement Conference

In the past, the federal government has acted through the enforcement conference, a legal proceeding which allows federal initiative to stop pollution in interstate waters, but leaves enforcement primarily up to the states. Such an enforcement conference for Lake Michigan was held in early 1968 and Wisconsin issued orders to the pulp and paper mills to carry out requirements of the conference.

Klein said the new federal initiative allowed by the 1965 Water Pollution Control Act was taken because the interior department is not satisfied with the enforcement efforts of some states, or with the progress of some industries.

The announcement of the federal crackdown from Klein's office was published in The Post-Crescent Thursday.

"Mr. Klein's statement in The Post-Crescent leaves most of us perplexed," R. M. Billings, chairman of the technical advisory committee on waste disposal for the Wisconsin pulp and paper industry, said Thursday.

"A person reading it might be led to believe that we in the area are unaware, unconcerned and inactive. Nothing could be further from the truth," he said.

Industrial Effects

Activity in industrial pollution abatement along the Fox River is the highest in history. In actual installations made and facilities completed and operating, more progress has been made in the past five years than the preceding 35—and more are coming into operation all the time—and will continue to do so.

Billings itemized the reductions in organic wastes accomplished by various Fox Valley pulp mills in the past 12 years: Consolidated Papers Inc., Appleton, 70 per cent; Green Bay Packaging, 75 per cent; Kimberly-Clark's Kimberly mill, 75 per cent. In addition, he reported that Riverside Paper Co., Appleton, has reduced the amount of suspended solids discharged into the river by 50 per cent; Thilmany Pulp and Paper

Co., Kaukauna, 60 per cent, and efforts of the state and the pulp Kimberly-Clark Lakeview mill, and paper industry.

He said he was "a little bit since," Frangos said. The state is satisfied that pulp abatement programs for Kimberly-Clark, said Klein's announcement. The state has had "no contact with toward engineering concepts and designs" that will allow when activity is the greatest, announcement that would indicate any cause for concern," he orders, he needed. "They have added. Frangos pointed out that state standards and have given us at the orders issued to paper mills least preliminary reports to state's Division of Environment were submitted to federal officials about eight months ago do it. They are making progress with pollution, also defended the "They seemed satisfied with the gress"

Cigarette Sales Not Lagging

People Puffing Despite Tax

BY ANN GREENWALD

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The expected drop in cigarette smoking following the additional four cent per pack excise tax hasn't materialized—yet.

Wisconsin's tobacco wholesalers claim it's still too early to tell just what the effect of the tax will be, but noted that with the tax only a week old, sales haven't yet shown any change.

"We anticipated quite a letdown, but haven't gotten it," one area distributor said. "Sales aren't down one bit. They're as high as ever," he said.

Most dealers anticipate that the drop may come eventually, and estimate that it may take a full month for the changes to become apparent. One Milwaukee dealer, however, feels that few smokers will give up permanently. "When all the smoke has settled, I think it will go on as before," he said.

Stocked Up

According to Phillip Schroeder, owner of Northwestern Distributing and Wholesale, Neenah, many people stocked up before the tax went into effect. Supermarket managers reported sales of four and five cartons, he said.

When the stockpiles run out, and people find they have to pay more than 40 cents additional per carton, Schroeder said he thought people might quit. If there are several smokers in the family, the difference could amount to an extra $50 a year, he noted, and people might call a halt to their smoking.

Schroeder also reported an increase in the number of customers wanting to make their own cigarettes and buying rolling machines and their own tobacco. This happens every time the cost of cigarettes goes up, he said, but after a week or so of doing it themselves most people go back to the ready-made brands.

More Pipes

An Oshkosh distributor said he's noticed an increase in the sales of pipe tobacco, which is affected only by the four per cent sales tax. Tobacco was formerly covered by the three per cent tax, and the additional one per cent isn't as hard to take as the four cent cigarette tax. Many cigarette smokers are taking up a pipe, at least for a while, he said.

A Milwaukee distributor said he expected the drop in a month or so, but didn't think it would last long. "People will go right back to smoking," he said.

Home Break-ins Are Investigated

Police are investigating reports of three home break-ins and one unsuccessful attempt to enter a home.

George Weaver, 1124 S. Walden Ave., said Saturday morning his wife's purse, valued at over $50, was stolen from the kitchen. He later reported the purse was found by a neighbor but the $23 in cash was missing.

Nothing was reported missing at the Donald Ziener residence, 713 E. Dennison St., where a screen was removed from a window.

Mrs. Bernice Laabs, 620 E. Eldorado St., reported Friday afternoon that her home at 616 E. Eldorado was entered. Desk drawers were rifled and the kitchen cupboards and closets entered. Mrs. Laabs could not immediately determine if anything is missing.

Reuben Newlin, 1230 S. Walden Ave., said Saturday his screen door was cut but burglars were foiled when they ran into a locked door.

FIRST TIME OFFERED TO THE CONSUMER!

The Patented Formula that Cleans, Polishes and Protects with a Plastic Coat

AND WILL LAST ALMOST A YEAR!

Live the Good Life with the exclusive plastic liquid that cleans as it glistens, shines as it seals, and protects as it lasts...and it lasts almost a year with just one coat. Six different formulas by Plasticon were carefully designed to protect just about everything you love in your house, both inside and out. If you hate the monthly and sometimes weekly job of scrubbing, rubbing, polishing, waxing—and who doesn't—you'll love the Plasticon formulas that will save you work and money while restoring your furniture, your home furnishing, your car to the just-bought look that made you select that item originally. And Plasticon is guaranteed to keep it that way for unbelievably long periods of time under all sorts of conditions. .like shore living, or winter slush, or dirty air.

Plasticon, the exclusive formula, is approved by The National Testing Laboratories and has been accepted and used by Federal Agencies.

Plasticon works like nothing else you've ever tried. It cleans a surface and fills the pores with a "glass-like" coating to shut out dirt, grime and even harsh chemicals. Here are the six revolutionary formulas. You'll find a use for every one of them

1. PLASTICON FOR GLASS—Use it on windows, mirrors, crystal, and watch it smooth the surface so that it actually repels dirt and dust particles so that even a simple wiping brings it back to a perfect sparkle.

2. PLASTICON FOR FURNITURE—Cleans, restores, and protects fine wood furniture, finished wall panels and varnished, lacquered or painted wood cabinets. Protects against water and liquor stains.

3. PLASTICON FOR CARS—A car lover's delight—cleans, restores and plastic coats the entire car's paint and metal trim. Forget compounding, waxing, chrome, polishing and even tar removal. The harshest detergents won't wash it away. And even living at the shore or driving under winter road salt conditions, won't get through the Plasticon seal.

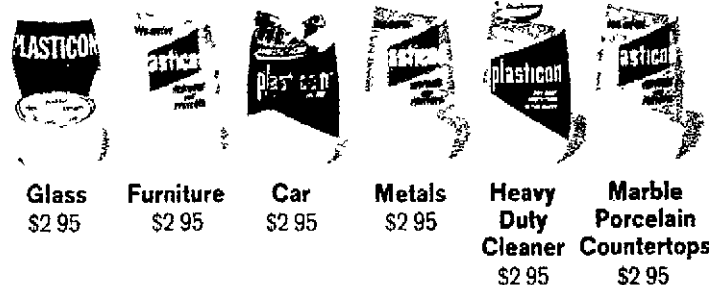

4. PLASTICON FOR METALS—This formula covers aluminum, brass, bronze, stainless and chrome. It will clean and remove tarnish oxidation, corrosion and rust. Provides that show-room shine for all these metals wherever they're used.

5. PLASTICON—HEAVY DUTY CLEANER—Formulated for hard stains and scuff marks on enamel painted surfaces, porcelain tile and even pitted aluminum. Will remove even ink markings on these surfaces and seal them against similar damage.

6. PLASTICON FOR MARBLE, PORCELAIN AND COUNTER TOPS—You'll never worry about these expensive surfaces once you've used Plasticon. And this works even in the bathroom. Like all our formulas, there is no excessive build-up, no matter how much you use, and it will not peel, crack or yellow!

All cans come in a big 7 ounce size (except car Plasticon which is 8 ounces). This is a full 7 ounces, more than enough to do the biggest job. All formulas are guaranteed not to crack, peel, chip, discolor or wash away or we'll give you your money back.

Appliances Step Up to the Space Age!

By ROSALYN ABREVAYA

WITH MEN flying to the moon and tolerating tight quarters to get there, we earthlings are experiencing similar living restrictions—not to mention less time to do all we want.

Now, it's a treat to learn, one segment of our economy is trying to solve these problems with new appliances.

What's happening with the majors and the minors—the large, usually stationary, appliances such as refrigerators, ovens, and dishwashers and the smaller, portable appliances?

Big, bold innovations are happening in both categories—in the splash of color, ingenious design, more specialized appliances for our burgeoning leisure life, and in the trend toward the do-more-than-one-chore or one-step combination appliance.

And you don't have to orbit the moon to own them. Those pictured here are available, or will soon be, at your appliance dealer or department store. ♦

A product of the space age, Dominion's electronic Toastron toasts everything from sandwiches to the thinnest waffles by simply adjusting a lever. It can even rewarm your toast without burning or darkening.

Salton's electric Hotray keeps food warm until everyone is seated. Its swivel bin can be removed to oven for defrosting. For beverages, a "hot spot" gives added heat.

GI Wives Who Wait—and Serve

ACROSS AMERICA today thousands of women watch the mail for a letter from a husband in Vietnam—and wait for him to come home.

Some of these women, however, wait with a difference—they wear Army green like their husbands and serve their country while waiting.

A number of these wives-who-wait-in-uniform are stationed at the Women's Army Corps Center, Fort McClellan, Ala., the home of the WAC near Anniston, Ala.

A waiting wife may be like 20-year-old Sp/4 Clare Nelson, who had been married only a week when her husband left for Vietnam. Or she may be a career officer like Maj. Anne H. Hudnall, whose husband Vernon, also a career officer and a major, is on his second tour, flying helicopters in the combat zones.

The waiting is no easier for these wives in uniform than for any others. Clare is a clerk in WAC Center headquarters. At the end of the day, she thinks of Edwin beginning another day halfway around the world as she watches the flag float down the staff to the notes of retreat.

Back in the barracks, she and other

WAC wives exchange news, pass around pictures, and work on hobbies. Sp/4 Natalie Laird crochets an afghan; Sp/5 Patricia Bacina of Eugene, Ore., trains a hunting dog; Capt. Veda D. Manley is troop leader of a Brownie Scout group.

Though days may be filled with duties, lonely evenings in the barracks or quarters are time for writing letters, recording taped messages, and wrapping packages. And they think of the two most important dates in their year of waiting. The first is that R&R (rest and recreation leave) meeting with their husbands in Hawaii, which Veda Manley called "the fastest six days of my life."

The second important day is when their men come back. Till then, they wait—and they serve. ♦

Sp/5 Patricia Bacina explains lesson to typing student in clerical school. Her husband, serving in Vietnam, also is a Sp/5.

Maj. Anne Hudnall has a special interest in Huey helicopters. Her husband, a major, too, whose picture stands on shelf, flies such a chopper in Vietnam.

In one way, the big earnings reported here might be called exceptional. In another way, there is nothing exceptional about them. That's because any man who will follow instructions and is willing to work at his own Duraclean business should be able to do as well under similar conditions.

Each of the men quoted here had talents and abilities different from those of all the rest. But each had one thing in common—a desire to win personal independence in a business of his own. And each man took five identical steps to reach his goal.

1. Each one read an announcement such as you are reading now. 2. He wrote for complete information. 3. He read the literature we sent him. 4. He gained new confidence in himself and the belief that he could succeed with Duraclean. 5. He accepted our offer to help him get started. Later, he wrote to tell us about his success.

In each case, remember, the first step was to write to Duraclean for information. If you would like to own a business of your own, why don't you do as these men did—right now.

When I hear from you, I will send you facts about the Duraclean Franchise that will open your eyes. You will see why a Franchise business such as ours makes success for the individual the rule rather than the exception.

The Duraclean home service business has been tried and tested. The market for Duraclean Service is tremendous—and growing. The methods that lead to success have been clearly charted. When an ambitious man follows these methods, success is the logical result.

Some Franchise businesses require investments as high as $50,000. With ours, you can get started for less than a $1000 and we finance the balance. Monthly payments are so small that the profits on less than one day's service can cover your payment for the entire month. Even with this small investment and operating as a one man business, your potential is $250.00 a week net profit. With two men working for you 35 hours a week, you should gross a profit of $420.00. Allowing 20% for advertising and incidentals, the net would amount to $336.00.

The most important part of Duraclean home service is cleaning rugs, carpets and upholstered furniture by a revolutionary modern process known as the "Absorption Method." You do the work right in the customer's premises. No harsh scrubbing with motor-driven brushes. No soaking. Instead, an aerated foam loosens the dirt and holds it in suspension until removed. A test conducted by an impartial laboratory showed that the modern Absorption Method removed twice as much dirt as

Security-Prestige- and Profits

"National Advertising and Duraclean prestige are very important. This year I will double last year's gross. For the first time in 20 years I've got security—without fear of losing my factory job. I gross about $8.50 an hour on the job."

"SO THAT YOU MAY HAVE A FAIR CHANCE TO KEEP YOUR CHILD," THE DWARF SAID TO THE QUEEN, "I WILL GIVE YOU THREE DAYS' GRACE. IF DURING THAT TIME YOU TELL ME MY NAME, YOU SHALL KEEP YOUR CHILD."

THE NEXT DAY THE LITTLE MAN CAME, AND SHE BEGAN WITH TIMOTHY, BENJAMIN, JEREMIAH AND ALL THE NAMES SHE COULD REMEMBER. BUT TO ALL OF THEM HE SAID, "THAT'S NOT MY NAME."

THE SECOND DAY SHE BEGAN WITH ALL THE COMICAL NAMES SHE HAD EVER HEARD OF, BANDY-LEGS, HUNCHBACK, CROOK SHANKS AND SO ON, BUT STILL SHE COULD NOT GUESS HIS NAME.

THE THIRD DAY, A TRUSTED MESSENGER WHOM THE QUEEN HAD SENT OUT RETURNED AND SAID, "AS I WAS AMONG THE TREES OF THE FOREST, I SAW A LITTLE HUT, AND BEFORE THE HUT BURNED A FIRE AND AROUND THE FIRE, A FUNNY LITTLE MAN DANCED AND SANG:

"TODAY I'LL BREW, TOMORROW I'LL BAKE; MERRILY I'LL DANCE AND SING, TOMORROW WILL A BABY BRING; THE LADY CANNOT STOP MY GAME, RUMPELSTILTSKIN IS MY NAME!"

WHEN THE QUEEN HEARD THIS, SHE JUMPED FOR JOY. SOON HER LITTLE VISITOR CAME IN AND ASKED, "NOW, LADY, WHAT IS MY NAME?"

"IS IT JOHN?" ASKED SHE.

"NO!"

"TOM?"

"NO!"

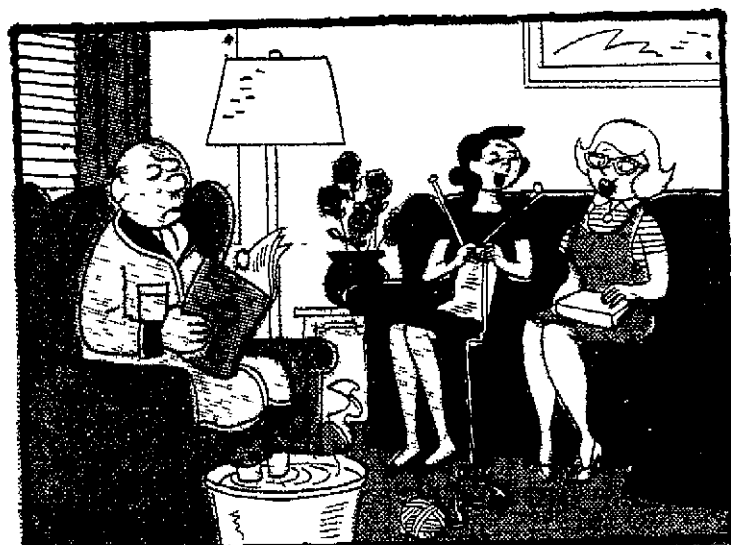

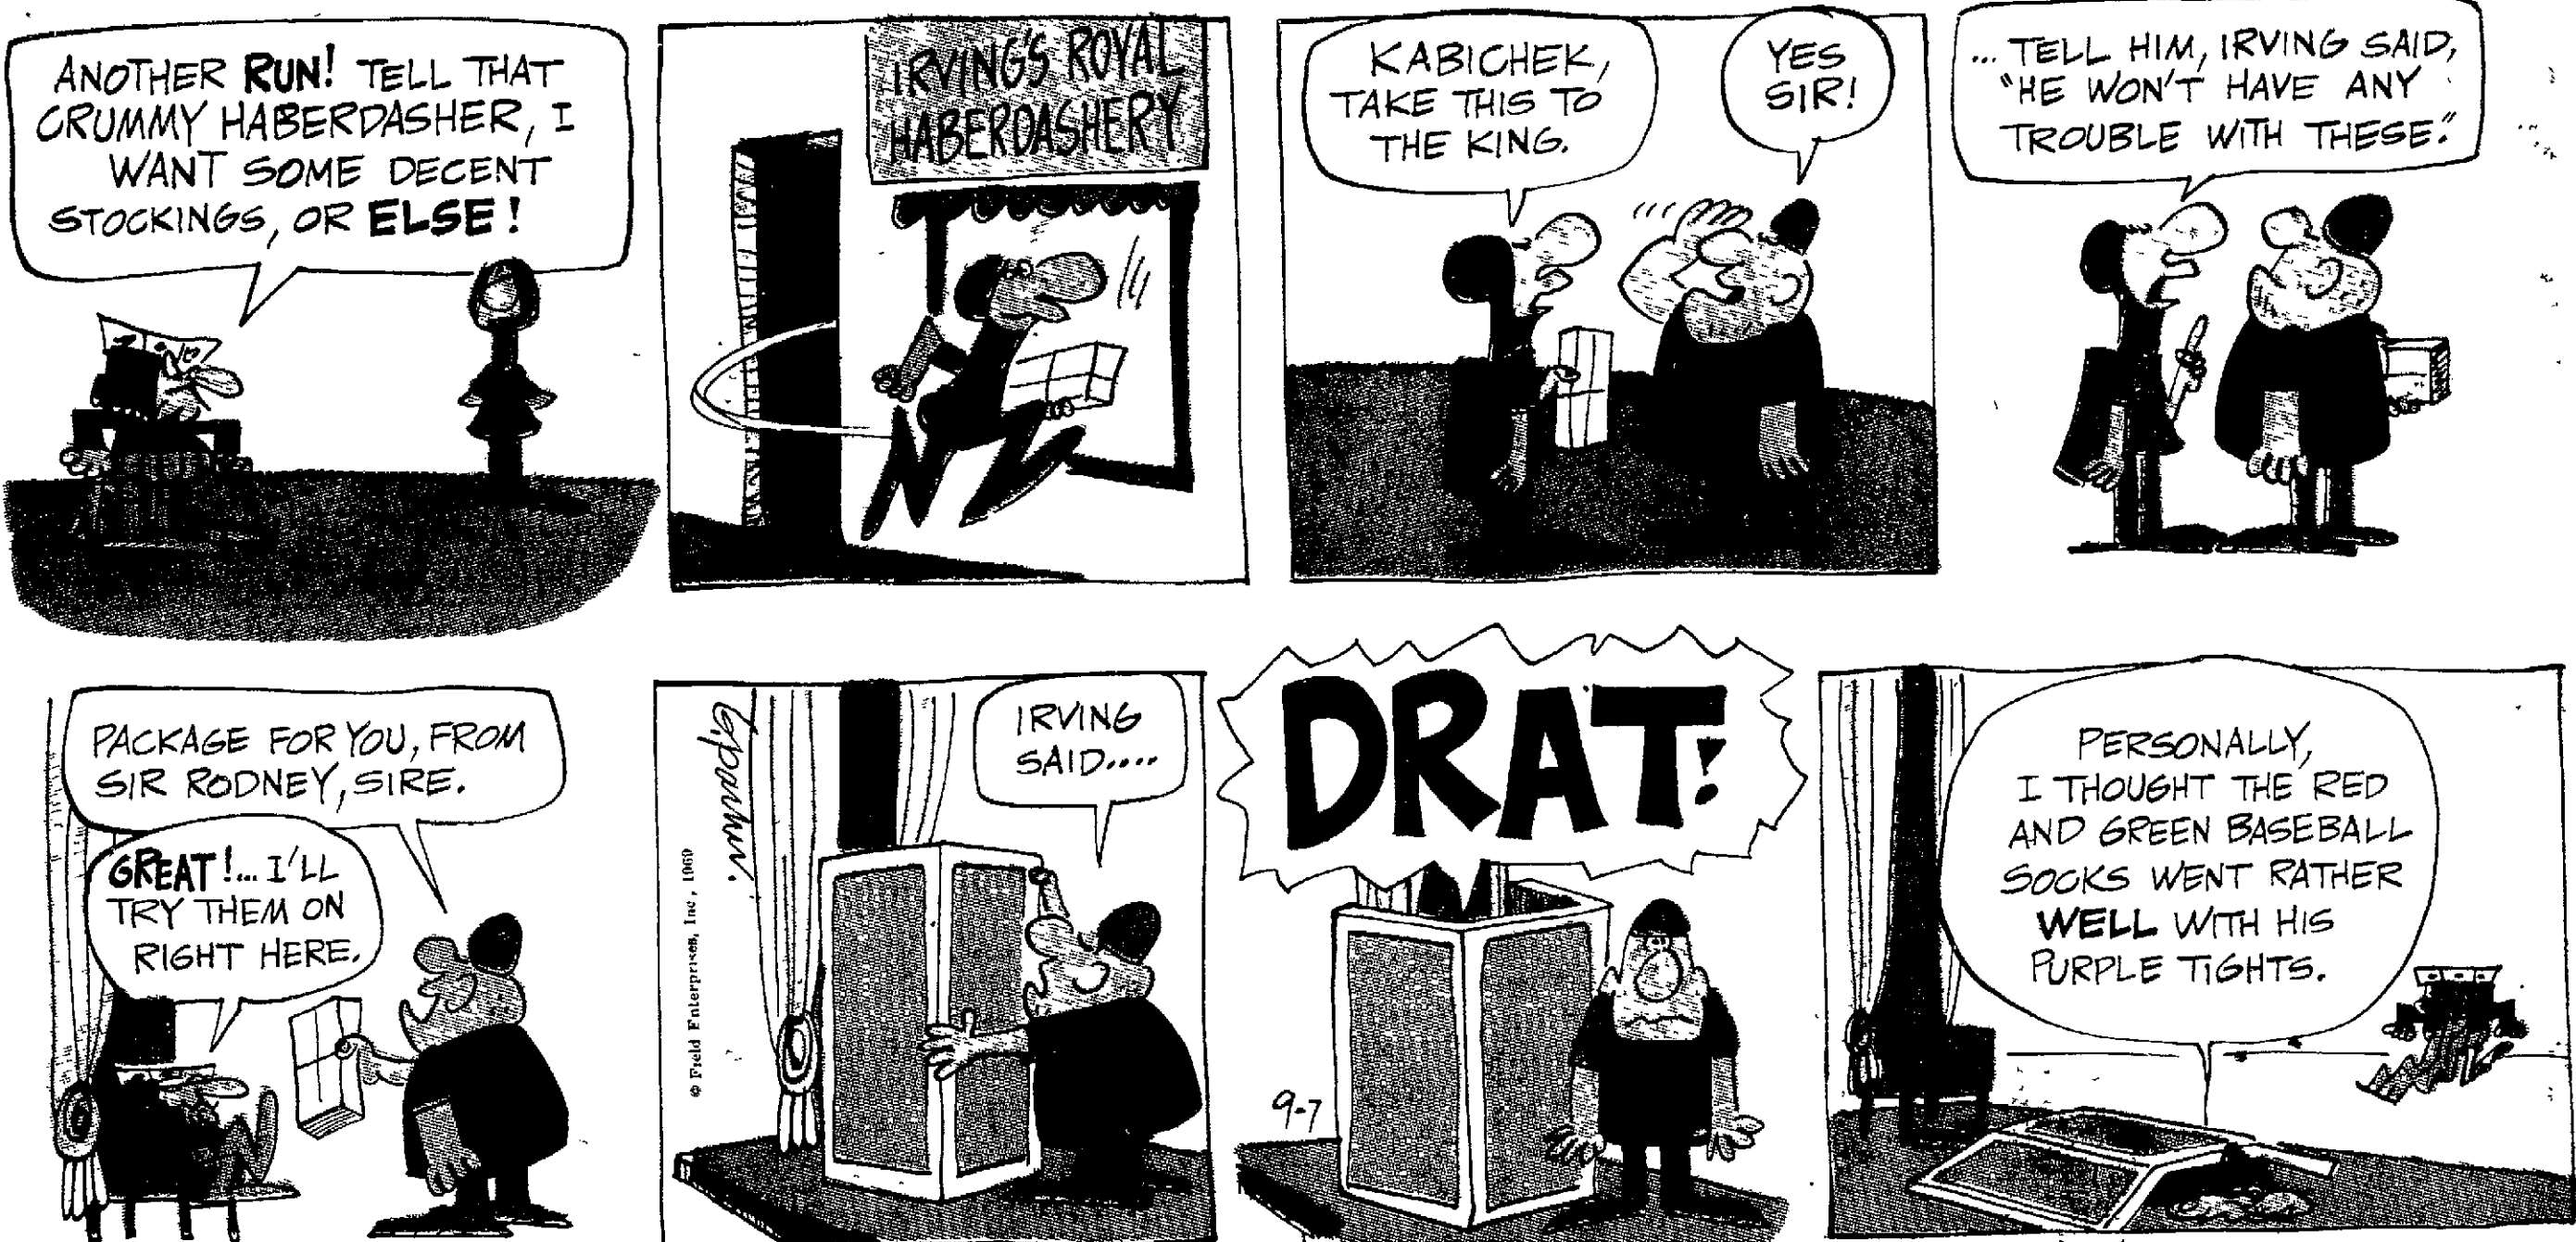

"CAN YOUR NAME BE RUMPELSTILTSKIN?"

"SOME WITCH TOLD YOU THAT!" CRIED THE LITTLE MAN IN A RAGE AND STAMPED HIS FEET ON THE FLOOR. THEN HE TWIRLED AWAY AND THE QUEEN NEVER SAW HIM AGAIN. BUT SHE ALSO LEARNED NEVER TO MAKE A PROMISE SHE COULD NOT KEEP.

SDS 'Infiltration' of Industry Brings Praise, Skepticism

NEW YORK (AP) — Some SDS officials had claimed that members of Students for a Democratic Society carried out the group's plan to infiltrate industry this summer but they caused no problems, an Associated Press survey shows.

The "work-in" by members of the radical group was designed to involve blue collar workers in organized political activity, according to SDS literature that was revealed in the press this spring.

"Our goal is not to organize the U.S. working class in one summer," the SDS literature said. "We want to learn as much as we can and to make friendships that will remain after summer with a few workers."

References in the literature to ways to make bombs, and how to use ice picks, blackjacks, slingshots, ammonia pistols and other weapons had sparked fear in some quarters that the infiltration would go beyond the avowed purpose stated in the literature.

Associated Press interviews in 16 major cities show that a few SDS members did get jobs in industry—some with the firm's knowledge—but indicate no evidence of violence or worker-student confrontations.

they had carefully screened summer employees to avoid SDS members.

International Harvester in Chicago said:

"We were concerned about it and checked our summer help very carefully, but apparently our fears were unfounded. A few people cried wolf . . . but it always turned out to be just young people expressing themselves."

Viet Hamlets Due to Elect Officials Today

Balloting Is Third In Series Across Nation This Year

SAIGON (AP) — Voters will elect officials in more than 1,150 villages and hamlets today and on the following two weekends in South Vietnam's effort to restore self-government at the local level.

When the elections are completed, officials said Saturday, nearly 95 per cent of all villages and hamlets in the country will have elected rather than appointed officials.

It marks the third major series of elections this year. A fourth series, scheduled for December, will restore local elected government—abolished in 1956—to nearly all South Vietnam's 2,130 villages and 10,755 hamlets, officials said.

The voting this month will be in all villages and hamlets now rated "relatively secure" and some listed as "contested" under the complicated and controversial hamlet evaluation survey rating system.

This system evaluates the degree of government control of the population living in South Vietnam's rural areas where villages, composed of hamlets, are by ancient tradition the basic governmental unit.

In its latest figures for July, the government claimed 87.6 per cent of the total and 81.6 per cent of the rural population lived under relative government security.

Seven per cent of the total and 10.6 per cent of the rural people lived in contested areas and 5.4 per cent of the total, 7.8 per cent of the rural, under Viet Cong control, the report said.

Most of the villages and hamlets electing officials this month are in the "C" and "D" categories of the rating system—the lowest level of government security and the most secure of those still considered to be contested.

Many of these villages and hamlets were upgraded from still lower categories in the government's accelerated pacification program within the last year.

The voters will cast ballots for village councils of six to 12 members, depending on the village population, and for chiefs in the hamlets, which are sub-units of the villages.

Each village council selects a village chief from among its members and shares power with him. Each hamlet chief functions directly under the village chief's direction.

The move toward elected self-government in all villages marks a long road back from 1956, when all elected officials were abolished because Saigon could not cope with Viet Cong terrorism that spread chaos in local government.

Intense Competition Oil Companies Ready to Submit Bids for Land Rights in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Oilmen competing for shares in a potential petroleum bonanza rush north to Alaska this week for a bidding showdown expected to make the state an estimated $1 billion richer.

The sum, given for exploration rights in the North Slope fields, would exceed the total of Alaska's budgets in its 10 years as a state.

"There are more pinstriped suits running around here than I've ever seen," an Anchorage resident said. He referred to representatives of the nation's leading banks who were brought here to provide the financing for what could be the largest oil and gas lease sale in the nation's history.

Wednesday Alaska will offer for lease 179 tracts totaling 450,858 acres of tundra-covered land and offshore plots along the Prudhoe Bay arm of the Beaufort Sea. Lease of the state-owned land gives the holder the right to explore and develop, with the state getting an agreed portion of the income from any production.

Oil in commercial quantity was discovered last year on this frigid fringe of the Arctic Ocean. Some experts say the field, with reserves estimated at from 5 billion to 500 billion barrels, will be the largest domestic field found in years.

With reserves dwindling in the "lower 48" states, oil firms big and small will be bidding to get a piece of the action in the cold, remote region on Alaska's northern shores, about 380 miles north of Fairbanks.

The great secrecy surrounding activities of the participants intensifies the excitement.

"There's nothing more competitive," said Joseph Fitzgerald, an official of Atlantic Richfield Co. "Everyone would give his eye teeth to know what the other is doing."

The oil companies use information gathered in exploration and test drilling in the area to figure their bids, and they guard it closely.

Since much of the potential oilfield was leased by a few companies before the oil discovery, some firms will be fighting hard not to be left out.

Fitzgerald said that, if the area has the potential some predict, "it would be hard for a company to explain why it's not up here."

Top oil industry executives will be closeted with their bankers Tuesday night. The 20 per cent deposit checks which must accompany bids probably won't be written until close to the deadline for submission of bids at 8 o'clock the next morning.

Thomas E. Kelly, commissioner of natural resources, and his staff will open the bids and read them. The top "bonus" bids will be announced and checked. The bonus provides the competition. It is in addition to the required rental of $1 per acre a year under the 10-year leases which grant oil and gas exploration rights.

At the end of the day, the money will be turned over to the Bank of America, which is managing investment for the state. The bank will have a chartered jet waiting to speed checks to moneythe points of origin so the money can start drawing interest immediately.

Successful bidders will have 10 days in which to come up with the 80 per cent balance of their bids. Unsuccessful bidders will get their money back.

Laird Orders Freeze In Military Building

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird temporarily froze Saturday award of $700 million in new military construction contracts for projects across the country.

Laird said his action was in compliance with orders from President Nixon that all federal agencies immediately reduce new construction contracts by 75 per cent to ease economic pressure in the construction industry.

The defense chief directed the services and Pentagon agencies to report by Sept. 10 on all projects on which construction contract awards would have been made within the next 30 days. These reports will include current working estimates to guide Laird on which projects should be dropped.

A Pentagon spokesman said the move will not affect any projects already being built, but involves some $700 million in funds appropriated by Congress last year but not yet obligated.

The contract freeze affects new military family housing units, facilities for reserve forces and other types of projects.

Daniel Z. Henkin, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, said a list of the affected projects will not be available for at least a week.

This is not the first time that military family housing has been set back by freezes dictated either by economy reasons or because of general economic factors.

New family housing was suspended for a time by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara when rising costs of the Vietnam war forced budget trimming.

A lack of comfortable and modern family housing has been cited by armed service personnel experts over the years as one factor contributing to the loss of career enlisted men.

Nixon Appoints New Ambassador to Greece

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Henry J. Tasca, a career diplomat from Upper Darby, Pa., has been named by President Nixon as ambassador to Greece.

Tasca, 57, was picked recently to succeed Phillips Talbot, who is retiring.

Nixon named Joseph S. Farland of Washington, D.C., as ambassador to Pakistan, succeeding Benjamin H. Oehlert, who is retiring.

Lucy Claims State Should Operate Same As Other Units

KIMBERLY — The new Republican state budget with its call for some $253 million in additional sales taxes demonstrates the need in Wisconsin for an annual budget, former Lieutenant Governor Patrick J. Lucey said here Saturday.

Speaking at the Annual Corn Roast of the Outagamie County Democrats at Sunset Point, Lucey stated, "If all other levels of government, including Federal, county and city, as well as all business enterprises operate on an annual budget, why should our state government continue the outdated practice of two-year budgeting?"

"The experience under the Knowles - Olson Administration clearly shows the inadequacy of a biennial budget. Preparation of such a budget commences more than six months prior to the start of the fiscal period. It is impossible to anticipate accurately the needs of the state more than 30 months in advance," Lucey said. "Consequently, Republicans have given Wisconsin enormous tax increases at the beginning of a two-year budget and huge deficits at the end."

Lucey asserted that the citizens of Outagamie County will pay $8 million in new taxes as a result of the biennial budget-tax bill passed by Republicans in the legislature.

"The people of Wisconsin overwhelmingly supported a Constitutional Amendment in April, 1968, to allow the Legislature to meet annually, but the Republicans have ignored that mandate and enacted another two-year budget with the largest tax increase in history."

"There is a national trend toward annual budgeting of state government," he continued. "All but 14 states have either adopted the annual budget or have taken initial steps in that direction. The more complicated state government becomes, and the more varied state services, the more difficult it is to project costs over an extended period of time," he said.

"Changing consumer habits, economic cycles and population trends make difficult the task of anticipating school enrollment and tax collections."

"An annual budget would mean more accurate estimates, a simplified budget procedure and greater efficiency in the administration of state services," he concluded.

Optimism, Exuberance Audience Is Thrilled By 'Up With People'

BY LILLIAN MACKESY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

They told it all in song just how they feel about life and the future. It was the song of youth, optimistic, exuberant and full of promise.

And the crowd loved it all to the point of rising on its feet at the end and singing "Up with People" right from the heart along with the international cast that was as bouncy at the end of its two-hour program as when it started. And they'll be just as bright, just as exuberant Sunday night when they do it all over again at 8 p.m. in Lawrence Memorial Chapel.

The audience was full of applause, praise and credibility. The young people on stage, and on the crews ended up applauding the audience. It was a fun evening all around.

Tremendous Talent

The remarkable thing about the program that zipped right along was that these were all young people doing the job, the cast with its tremendous talent, the sound people on the crew of Craig Richards, who hails from Cucamonga, Calif., and came to Up with People from an area cast one and a half years ago. There were the girls, Chris Wabindato, from Michigan, on the lights and Lynn Barnhart, of Jacksonville, Fla., mixing the sound.

"Dawning has just begun, I see the sun for everyone, it is the dawn of the morning of time," sang Jerry Converse, of Oklahoma, in her warm, full voice. The cast ended on this theme after a rousing program full of their ideas and their pure musical talents.

"I'll never give up, I'll give all I have and more, but I won't look back until I'm through," were the words of the song of Mike Hayes, of Kingman, Ariz., who was soundly applauded.

A foursome called "The Countrymen" took the lead for the show, backed up by the drumming of Kevin Simon. The quartet was tremendous — guitarists Don Masten, Paul Scaglione and Phil Sagona with Texan vocalist and spokesman Carl Clay. It was an excellent choice because these young men have poise, noise and a real musical talent besides the "Up with People" spirit.

Father Role

Clay sang several songs, one the new song in story about the baby born John David Sebastian Jones or Smith "who can make what he wants to make it because nothing can hold him down." The old world is out, sang Clay in the father role, as he crooned to his son. Perhaps his greatest number was his plea, "Can you build a new world on the ashes of the old when there's trouble everywhere? Can you build a new world with the red hot fire of hate?"

There were so many ideas expressed in song, good ideas of a youth full of hope, sung by Cindy Whetstone, Brian Anderson, and Dirk Laund, whose "Children" was touching. Ann Buffington, of San Diego, sang a tremendous solo

Youth From Seymour Will Be Honored

Dairy Fieldmen Give Scholarship to William Buchmann

MADISON — A Seymour youth will be honored Sept. 11 in Appleton for his academic, agricultural and community leadership.

He is William J. Buchmann, a 1968 graduate of Seymour High School, who will be given a $300 scholarship which he intends to use at the University of Wisconsin.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Buchmann, of route 3, Seymour.

The award will be given by the Wisconsin Dairy Plant Fieldman's Association, which will cite Buchmann for his work in agriculture, community and school leadership.

Buchmann intends to use the scholarship to aid him in attending the UW, where he has enrolled this fall to major in dairy science.

Buchmann was president of the Seymour Junior Dairyman's Association, and now serves as state FFA treasurer and is a member of the national FFA chorus. He has earned the Wisconsin Farmer degree, earned five letters in football and baseball in high school, and has been active in community and church activities.

Ranking in the top one-third of his class in academic standing, Buchmann has been active in school vocational agriculture programs and in 4-H club activities. He has developed a herd of 24 dairy animals, including 18 cows.

with excellent voice.

But the song that got them all was the all-time favorite of all Up with People audiences and the cast themselves. It was and is "What Color Is God's Skin?", with the answering "It's black, yellow, brown, and red and white... every man's the same in God's sight."

That was the meaning of it all and somehow the young people made it all seem true that there is a new dawning ahead for everyone. At least the audience felt it to be true. They came across.

Pollution Crackdown Stuns State, Industry

Probe of Fox River Is Surprise

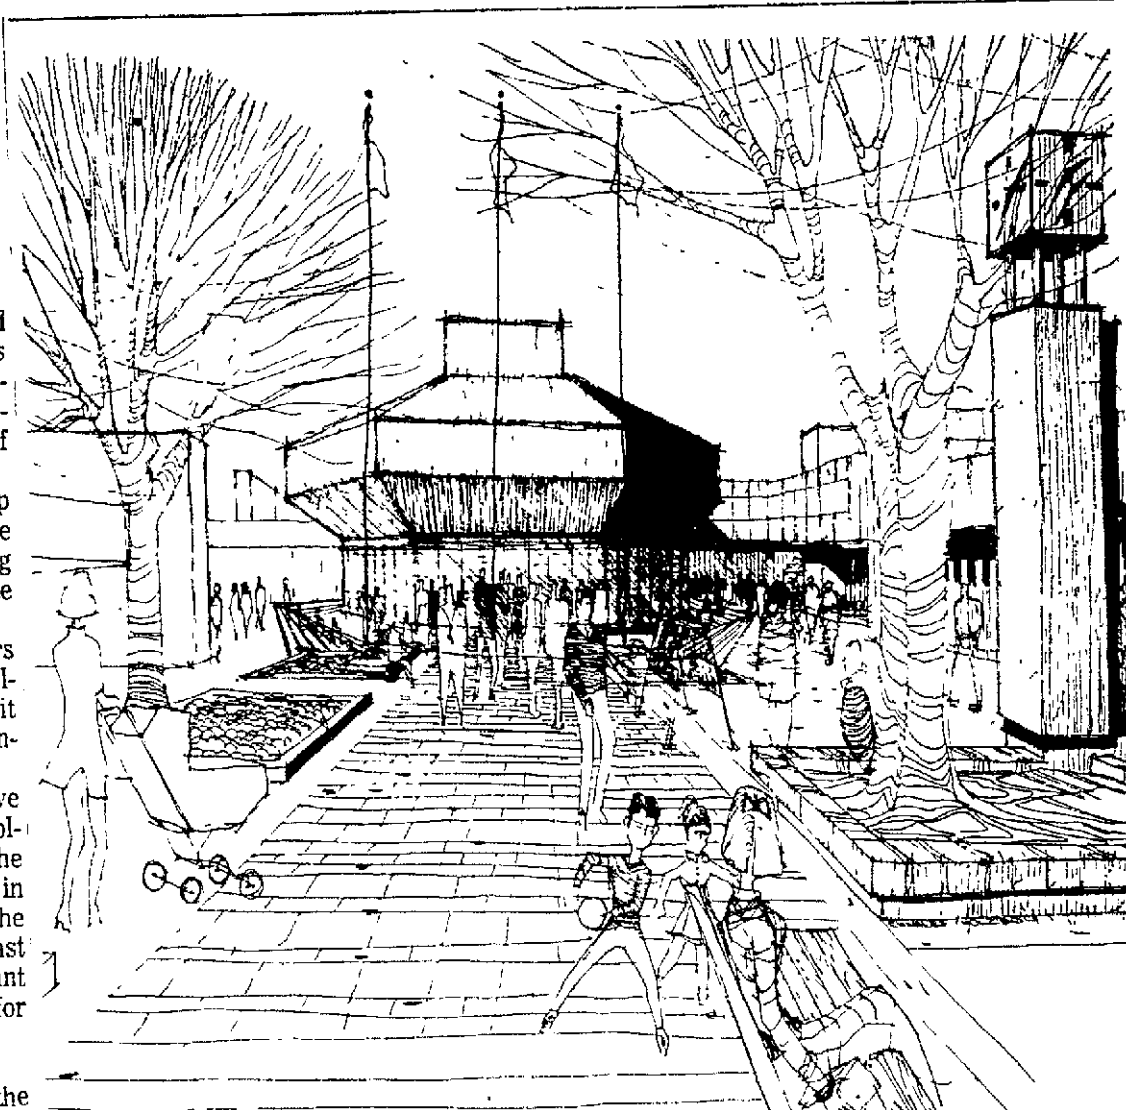

BY TOM TORINUS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

State officials and pulp and paper industry representatives are left "surprised" and "perplexed" by the federal government's new investigation of pollution in the Fox River.

Both groups claim the pulp and paper mills have made significant progress in abating pollution and will fulfill state orders by the 1972 deadline.

The state pollution orders pending against most Fox Valley mills have received the tacit approval of the federal government, state officials point out.

The new federal initiative directly against individual polluters on the Fox River, in the entire Great Lakes basin and in major river basins across the country was announced last week by Carl L. Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality.

Shopping District of the Future?

Step-by-Step Planning

New London Development Looks Ahead to Year 2000

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON — Implementation of the city's new downtown development plan will be a long and difficult task.

However, a pressing need and the firm recommendation of the planner could give it impetus by carrying through two of the key proposals.

New London is faced with a Jan. 1, 1971, state deadline for constructing a new fire station.

Max Anderson, Madison planner, said the location of a city complex in an area north of the main business district is second in importance only to developing Shiocton Street as a main pedestrian and shopping district traffic loop to carry US 45 is attractive to the shopper, traffic around the central business district.

There are proposals, however, which are the basis of the entire development and do tend to give a general picture of the city's appearance 30 years hence.

A multi-level motel is proposed for construction along the Wolf River at the east end of N. Water Street. (Anderson said this is just a general proposal, state order, it would mean that certainly if the area was desired for some other building it would be completed within 18 months. A temporary delay in completing the loop might be accomplished by an extended entrance to the fire station of Waupaca Street.

Anderson's proposal will involve an extensive urban renewal program using federal money to supplement and west ends because of appearance and aesthetic conformance to the overall plan.

One mall is definitely proposed and a second is included in the planning. The mall main-ly suggested would be on Wisconsin Street and would be tied into the Municipal Plaza (an area around which municipal buildings would be constructed) which would be at the north end of the mall.

The mall would be between State Street and St. John's Place, with semi-malls, serving the remainder of North Water Street.

Construction of two parking decks is proposed for later stages of plan implementation. The decks would be constructed over the Wolf River and would provide two more access routes across the river, by extending Wyman and Smith streets.

Tipsy Driving Cases Usually Fail in Court

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Last April, an Appleton man was involved in an auto accident.

Police charged him with four traffic violations, including driving while under the influence of intoxicants. Police said he tested .18 per cent on a breathalyzer. A reading of .15 per cent is considered prima facie evidence of intoxication in Wisconsin.

Most police agencies will make an arrest if the reading is .15 or higher.

The Appleton man pleaded innocent. This month, the city attorney's office moved to dismiss all but one count. The man pleaded guilty of driving after revocation and was sentenced to 10 days in jail.

The court action was not unusual. Appleton police had 71 intoxicated driving cases in court last year. In 31 cases (44 per cent) the charges were reduced — usually to reckless driving.

Records show that through July of this year Appleton police have brought 23 motorists to court for intoxicated driving. In six of those cases, the motorists paid fines on reduced charges. Nine of the 23 cases are scheduled for trials. Five of the motorists pleaded guilty or no contest, and one was found guilty when he failed to appear for trial.

Asks For Reductions

One case was dismissed by the court because the arresting officer issued a faulty ticket. Prosecution in nearly all of the city traffic cases is handled by the city attorney's office. It was that office that asked for most of the reductions in the intoxicated driver cases.

Records kept by Outagamie County police indicated they made 12 intoxicated driver arrests last year. At that time, many of the traffic cases were prosecuted by the corporation counsel's office.

That office asked for and obtained reduced charges of reckless driving in six of the 12 cases. Four motorists pleaded guilty, one was found guilty by a jury and another was found guilty when he failed to appear for trial.

Lengthy Trial

The district attorney's office now prosecutes state and county traffic cases.

Dist. Atty. James R. Long said that six motorists were convicted of intoxicated driving this year. Five of those pleaded guilty or no contest and the sixth was found guilty when he failed to appear for trial.

Not Singled Out

Klein said Friday that the Fox Valley pulp and paper mills were not being singled out by the federal government, but would be investigated along with every other major source of pollution on the Great Lakes. He said there is at this point no evidence that their progress is too slow.

A team of federal investigators either already have visited the Fox River Valley or will visit here in the near future, Klein said.

If the investigators find that industries or municipalities are making unsatisfactory progress toward stopping their pollution, the secretary of the interior will order them to produce accelerated abatement plans at a public hearing within six months.

If the industry's plans are still unsatisfactory, or if it fails to produce plans, court action will be taken by the federal government.

FBI Joins Search For Semi-Trailer

Missing Unit Contained $40,000 Worth of Tractors, Mowers

FBI investigators have joined Outagamie County sheriff's department in investigating the hijacking of a semi-trailer containing $40,000 worth of garden tractors, lawn mowers and accessories.

The theft was discovered Saturday morning by Gordon Graham, dispatcher for Diamond Transportation Co., whose terminal is located at the intersection of U.S. 10 and State 76, west of Appleton.

The trailer unit, destined for Islington, Ontario, arrived at the truck terminal Thursday night. However, because many trailers are constantly arriving and departing, company officials did not discover the loss of the unit until Saturday.

Lt. Jack Zuelzke of the Outagamie County sheriff's department, said the missing 40-foot long trailer is aluminum-colored, and has a large green diamond decal in front. The trailer has garden tractors, lawn mowers and accessories.

FBI and county investigators think the thieves used a semi-trailer rig to haul the trailer.

The trailer contained 35 garden tractors, 26 lawn mowers, 10 grader blades, five cartons of hitches and five cartons of hydraulic lifts. All equipment in the trailer was manufactured by the J. I. Case Co.

Authorities said a substantial reward has been offered for information leading to arrest of the hijackers.

Mrs. DeBraal's case, it was $5. "When we ask for help from the police, we get it right away," he said. "There's no reason why we shouldn't give them a little help when they could use it."

Welfare Recipients to Tell Their Story Froehlich to be Target of Pickets

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Welfare recipients from Outagamie County plan to picket the courthouse and the home of Assemblyman Harold V. Froehlich (R-Appleton) on Sept. 18.

Meeting at the Outagamie County Bank Saturday afternoon, a dozen women in the loosely organized welfare recipients' rights group agreed to make their first attempt at publicly demonstrating their feelings since formally organizing a month ago.

At the courthouse, they hope to express their view that county authorities have been lax in hunting down and prosecuting ex-husbands charged with nonsupport.

New State Budget

Froehlich is the target of protests over cutbacks in welfare payments as a result of the new state budget he guided to passage in the Assembly as the Republican majority's speaker.

According to Mrs. Kathleen Groat, basic services supervisor for the Outagamie County Welfare Department, it is expected that the new budget will require welfare payments to families on Aid to Families of Dependent Children (AFDC) programs to be cut back by about $6 per person per month. A family of four, for instance, might experience a reduction of $24 per month in income.

Mrs. Groat was present at Saturday's meeting as a guest. "How do they expect us to get along?" she was asked by one welfare mother, referring to the state legislators.

"I don't know. I don't know how they ever came up with this idea that they could make these cuts and you wouldn't suffer for it," she replied.

Force People to Work

Mrs. Groat added, "Not only are you so opposed to it, but social workers also disapprove of the budget. We are very upset about it," she said.

Apparently, she stated, the lawmakers believed cutting welfare payments would force recipients to work.

"What about those who can't?" asked another woman. "I don't know. I don't think that the legislators took you into account," replied the welfare supervisor.

The women agreed another goal would be to meet with Alfred R. Eggert, county welfare director, and discuss his interpretation that state administrative regulations prevent welfare recipients from receiving work incentive credits for doing work in their homes. Some women said they would like to take in ironing or babysitting, but according to Mrs. Groat the director has ruled out such earnings.

Mrs. DeBraal has been the local group's leader and its representative at meetings of Wisconsin Welfare United Recipients (WWUR).

She suggested the public protest march at the courthouse, and later added the demonstration at Froehlich's home. Mrs. Seely objected strenuously to published statements quoting officials as saying nonsupport cases go unprosecuted because the

'We Hate to See a Policeman Get Struck'

BY FRANK CHURCH

MENASHA — "We hate to see a policeman get struck."

A Manitowoc policeman summed up the feelings of many law enforcement personnel and citizens in the aftermath of the attack on a Menasha policeman last weekend.

"We felt, if nothing else, policemen ought to be respected for what they're doing," said officer Robert Schmidt, Manitowoc policeman and president of the Manitowoc Professional Policemen's Association, Local 19.

"When they're abused, other policemen resent it," he said. "They really worked him (the Menasha policeman) over pretty good, and we want to letisha, Green Bay and Oshkosh, everyone in the state know that we're against this, and we want to see those guys caught."

James La Count, a 27-year-old patrolman with seven years on the force, was assaulted by two or three men at about 2:30 a.m. last Saturday while inspecting doorways at the Earl Litho Printing Co., 1486 Earl St.

Thus Spake Zarathustra

Bum Finds Oshkosh 'Very Edible'

BY MARK E. OLIVA
Sunday Times Staff Writer

Oshkosh, Appleton and Menasha are very edible towns, in the sense one can eat there, but to a young man choosing his profession, I would say beware of Neenah. Terror reigns there for him who is unemployed.

Such is the hospitality rating of Fox Valley cities from a self-proclaimed "Duncan Hines of the Road" who chose to identify himself simply as Zarathustra.

When quizzed on the origin of his name, he replied:

"I baptized myself Zarathustra the moment you asked my name. After all putting my name in a newspaper would only help my wife to find me, wouldn't it. Besides, I've always been somewhat of a fan of Nietzsche. And now, after one of my quotes, you can write 'Thus Spake Zarathustra.'"

Thus spake Zarathustra. He apparently had no desire to explain the "terrors" of Neenah. "I have no need to tell of the evils of the people of Neenah, Wisconsin."

Air of Professor

Zarathustra and his companion-of-the-moment, John, were found in the North Fond du Lac switchyards of the Chicago and North Western Railway Wednesday afternoon. They had arrived that day via a Soo Line boxcar, after spending what they described as a relatively pleasant Labor Day weekend in Oshkosh.

Appearing more like a college professor than a hobo in his fairly clean and neat brown suit, trousers and sport shirt, with a goatee gracing his chin and a thin mustache tickling his upper lip, Zarathustra described himself as a "professional hobo with about 10 years' experience."

"I was formerly a professor of psychology at Vanderbilt University — until 1959. I have my Ph.D.," he continued.

"I was an individual who invested his life in the profitless trials of marriage, television, and five days weekly of teaching a rather uninteresting group of people things none of them certainly cared to learn or remember beyond test dates."

High-School Dropout

His friend, John, a wino suffering from a severe hang-over, had little to say. He claimed he is 42 years old and a native of East Dubuque, Ill., who has been "on the road"

since being booted out of the Army in 1955.

"I quit in my last year in high school and joined the Army in '44. The Army said I drank too much and was busted from sergeant to private too many times. I was discharged as an undesirable in '55 after sitting a stretch in the stockade for being AWOL about a month."

"I been on the road since then. There's no work. The Army didn't give me no trade. I was just in the infantry," was the word, according to John.

In contrast, Zarathustra, who maintains himself as and believes himself to be a man of culture and taste, said, "I don't drink; I think."

Yet drink appeared to be among Zarathustra's desires. Before he, the apparent leader of the duo for the day, would consent to either party being interviewed, he insisted they be treated to beer and hot beef sandwiches.

Once the beer was down, Zarathustra agreed to open his "heart, mind and mouth."

'Been in Trouble'

However, he refused to do so for a photograph, again citing his wife's search for her husband as grounds. "My wife, I believe, has been trying diligently to find me for 10 years now. A photo in the newspaper certainly will help her, won't it?"

John was equally camera-shy: "I been in trouble. Maybe I'm still in trouble. No pictures."

At the same time he explained his social drop-out, Zarathustra began philosophizing:

"I've discovered there is only one good thing in life man can do — only one — that is to be nice to others. I'm like Johnny Appleseed. I go around here and around there planting little seeds that say, 'Be nice, children. Be nice.'"

"Perhaps I taught men how one another's minds work. But don't you see it doesn't change how they work. We still have nothing better to do than, hurt and kill one another."

'Just be Nice'

"No matter what one learns, the only real contribution he can make in the end is to be nice to everyone, rather than killing."

"I have no need now to engage in competition for the dollar, ranch homes, color TV, two cars, diet dinners and two pots in every chicken. It's all worthless now. I just see, smile and say, 'Be nice, little children.'"

"There really is nothing else you can do, you know — nothing else at all."

When asked how he reconciled "being nice" with his desertion of his wife, Zarathustra answered:

"I have no regrets about my wife. She is a fully capable human being with no sense of compassion for her fellow man. Not even she could say I was not nice to her before I left her."

"But I am very sad that I brought three little babies into this world. It's terrible to make babies to face the human race."

'Bomb Is Solution'

In answer to a query concerning Zarathustra's solution to world problems, he said:

"I won't try to solve the world's problems. Besides, the human race has found a solution, I believe, the bomb. Exterminating the human race is the most painless, peaceful solution."

The writer's own experiences "riding the rails" in the past have taught him that if Zarathustra did represent himself correctly as a hobo, he is an exception in the "profession." John is more typical.

The filled box cars departing from the Dust Bowl and heading into the Depression are a thing of the past. The hobo trade's ranks are diminished. On the usual through freight train, you might find one or two, but probably none.

The drifters travel from town to town, via rail, partly from wanderlust, partly from shiftlessness, but mainly for "economic" reasons. They roam the North and East during the summer and South and West in winter.

'Bumming Up' Homes

On the average, a hobo can and does make up to $10 per day, "bumming up" houses, asking for handouts. They will chuckle and repeat, "It only takes four bits 20 times to make 10 bucks."

And each day's "10 bucks" goes to buy a little food and a lot of wine or whisky, all consumed in the day's times. As a rule, a town is good for "bumming up" for three days in a row, at the most, and then it's time to catch the next fast freight somewhere else.

Some of the riders passing through this area are trapped by the liquor and "glamour" of Chicago's skid row when passing through that area. Skid row can be an addiction. If they don't make the break soon enough, they may be numbered among the bodies found frozen to death in the cabs or trucks parked on the city's streets in winter, where they found a "drop" (bed) for the night.

Most of the traffic over rails bypassing Lake Winnebago is "diverted." The Fox Valley is off the regular hobo routes, but eastbound travelers may switch to the Green Bay Western at Winona, Minn., for a night or two at the Green Bay "Salvy," the Salvation Army, a hostelry rated high in the "profession."

Cities along the Fox River and Lake Winnebago catch this traffic as it heads south for Chicago, where a "transfer" will be made to a railroad going in the desired direction.

Crews on the North Western and Soo Line railroads said there is some hobo traffic on their trains, but unless the traveler makes trouble, he usually is "just not seen" by the crew.

Railroad companies have strict rules against allowing boxcar riders, because of complaints from municipalities where hoboes leave the trains and because the railroad could be sued for injuries to the rider, should any mishaps occur during his travels.

'Yard Bulls' Gone

Even though the rules remain, the legendary "yard bulls" and "railroad dicks" of the past, with their pistols and clubs, are a thing of the past for most railways outside the big cities.

Some roads, notably the Burlington and the Southern Pacific, do enforce no-rider rules strictly. One railroad has a policy of putting noticed riders off in the desert. But most let the traveler continue in peace, if he does the same for the railroad.

When riding boxcars, the writer has found train crews to be both considerate and generous on most occasions. Usually, should the rider select a dirty boxcar, he will be referred to one that is cleaner, if possible, by the crew. In one instance, members of a crew even shared sandwiches with the writer and a companion riding the train.

Oshkosh police say they very seldom encounter boxcar-riding hoboes these days, even less frequently have trouble with them.

A crew member for the C & NW said he usually finds one or two riders on every other through freight, but in his time with the railroad, none have given any trouble. He said the train crews do discourage riders from leaving the train at Neenah because the city sends complaints on to the railroads.

Trouble in Cities

When the hoboes create trouble, it's usually in the cities after they leave the train rather than on board. Most of the time, they live quite peaceably.

Zarathustra claimed he and John rode the Soo Line from Sault Ste. Marie to "somewhere outside Marshfield," hitchhiked to Neenah, where they boarded a Soo Line southbound freight that turned out to be a way freight stopping in Oshkosh, and left that train near downtown Oshkosh.

According to Zarathustra, the duo "found a cabin cruiser in the harbor with a rather frail lock and lived comfortably for three days."

"When the little bit of food there ran out, we asked fishermen for fish they didn't want. This is very sad too — so many fishermen just like to kill fish, they don't want to eat them."

'Be Nice Children'

The interview ended the way all hobo journeys begin. A loud crash progressed

sixth was found guilty following a lengthy jury trial.

Long said his office asked for reduced charges of reckless driving in three of the cases, following conferences with the arresting officers. He said the court reduced the charges in the three remaining cases.

Law enforcement officials have become disturbed over the large number of reductions.

Said Capt. Marvin Green, head of the Appleton Police Department's traffic bureau: "I think it's a shame." He said his men are becoming "discouraged."

Situation Is Better

Sheriff Calvin L. Spice termed intoxicated driver reductions "a mockery of the law," although he emphasized that "... the situation has improved considerably since Jan. 1."

Spice said it had been "almost standard procedure" for the prosecution to reduce charges if the defendant had refused to submit to a breathalyzer test. Police say that few drivers submit to chemical tests today.

"The number of reductions we experienced certainly was not warranted," Spice remarked. He termed the drunk driver "a killer."

Of the 71 intoxicated driver cases in court here last year, guilty or no contest pleas were entered in 26. Cases against three motorists were dismissed by the court, two drivers were found guilty following trials.

Three motorists were found guilty of lesser charges following trials, and one was found guilty when he failed to appear for trial. Five cases are pending.

Delays Common

It is not uncommon for final disposition to take place a year or more after the charge was brought if the motorist pleads innocent. Trial usually is delayed at least once, often at the request of the defense attorney. And the end result is usually a move for reduction of the charge.

An Appleton man was arrested May 7, 1968. On Feb. 21, 1968, he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of reckless driving.

Although reckless driving is usually the reduced count, some motorists charged with intoxicated driving wound up paying fines for inattentive driving, failure to obey a traffic signal or imprudent driving.

Why are intoxicated driver charges reduced so freely in Outagamie County?

Looks at Each Case

Richard L. Hamilton, assistant city attorney, who handles nearly all traffic cases for Appleton, said he has no policy. He looks "at each case individually."

He admitted the case might be weakened in court if the defendant refused to submit to a breathalyzer test. Often there is little evidence, other than the officer's personal observations and judgment, Hamilton explained.

And, he feels that even if the defendant did submit to a chemical test, the case might be no stronger.

A motorist might test above .15 per cent but still "pass" the other tests, such as speech and physical actions, Hamilton said. It could result in a "skippy case," he explained.

Long admitted that without the results of a chemical test and without good witnesses, intoxicated driver cases are difficult to win in court.

"Full Prosecution"

Good witnesses can make as good a case as a breathalyzer test, Long said.

He said that if his office believes a policeman has a good intoxicated driver case, "the defendant can expect full prosecution."

A motorist who suffers a jarring injury or a bump on the head in an accident stands a good chance of beating an intoxicated driver charge, especially if he refused to submit to a breathalyzer test.

Some "hardship" cases might qualify for a reduced charge, Hamilton indicated.

On Aug. 29, Appleton police processed seven alleged drunk drivers through Outagamie County Court Branch 2. All seven pleaded innocent.

Motorists fight intoxicated driving charges for a number of reasons.

Social Stigma

Some genuinely feel they are innocent. Others feel there is a certain social stigma connected with being convicted of being drunk at the wheel.

But most defendants fight the charge simply because they can't afford to lose their driver's licenses.

Conviction in Wisconsin carries a mandatory one-year license revocation, although the motorist can apply for an occupational permit 90 days after conviction. With it, he can drive only to and from work.

For some persons, the loss of a driver's license would mean the loss of their jobs.

That's why, Green explains, "attorneys keep coming to my missing and police began an immediate search.

trolmen on the Menasha police force.

"Our first reaction was anger, that a policeman could get jumped like that," said Menasha Police Association treasurer and reward-fund director LeRoy Blank.

But the community support shown through contributions to the reward fund has given Blank and others "more faith in this community."

"It makes you feel good that people in the community care about you," he said.

While the attack on LaCount surprised many people who thought such things rarely happen in the Fox Cities, Menasha police Capt. Tony Ashenbrenner thought differently.

"Everytime you put on a badge, you're taking a chance that something like this is going to happen," he said.

Surprised by Support

But he has been surprised by community support of the reward fund.

Officers and say their client won't plead guilty to drunk driving, but will to reckless driving.

One or the Other

Green sees little similarity between the two charges. "It's either drunk driving or it's reckless driving," he said.

The usual fine for intoxicated driving in Outagamie County courts is $150. The fine for reckless driving varies from $100 to $150. But, on the latter charge, the motorist gets to keep his license. He loses six points.

Police see relief in the intoxicated driver reduction problem with the recent purchase of a video tape recorder for the county jail.

The $3,200 machine provides a "word and picture" account of the drunk driver's actions at the jail. If necessary, the film and recording will be used in court.

The equipment will be used in conjunction with, not instead of, occupational testing devices, Spice said.

Police agencies already using the video tape system report "tremendous success" in prosecuting intoxicated driving cases.

That's why, Green explains, "attorneys keep coming to my

federal government anytime or anywhere," Klein said.

Enforcement Conference

In the past, the federal government has acted through the enforcement conference, a legal proceeding which allows federal initiative to stop pollution in interstate waters, but leaves enforcement primarily up to the states. Such an enforcement conference for Lake Michigan was held in early 1968 and Wisconsin issued orders to the pulp and paper mills to carry out requirements of the conference.

Klein said the new federal initiative allowed by the 1965 Water Pollution Control Act was taken because the interior department is not satisfied with the enforcement efforts of some states, or with the progress of some industries.

The announcement of the federal crackdown from Klein's office was published in The Post-Crescent Thursday.

"Mr. Klein's statement in The Post-Crescent leaves most of us perplexed," R. M. Billings, chairman of the technical advisory committee on waste disposal for the Wisconsin pulp and paper industry, said Thursday.

"A person reading it might be led to believe that we in the area are unaware, unconcerned and inactive. Nothing could be further from the truth," he said.

Industrial Effects

"Activity in industrial pollution abatement along the Fox River is the highest in history. In actual installations made and facilities completed and operating, more progress has been made in the past five years than the preceding 35—and more are coming into operation all the time—and will continue to do so."

Billings itemized the reductions in organic wastes accomplished by various Fox Valley pulp mills in the past 12 years: Consolidated Papers Inc., Appleton, 70 per cent; Green Bay Packaging, 75 per cent; Kimberly-Clark's Kimberly mill, 75 per cent. In addition, he reported that Riverside Paper Co., Appleton, has reduced the amount of suspended solids discharged into the river by 50 per cent; Thilmany Pulp and Paper

Co., Kaukauna, 60 per cent, and efforts of the state and the pulp and paper industry.

He said he was "a little bit confused and surprised" by the federal announcement. The state has had "no contact with federal officials concerning the and designs" that will allow them to meet state abatement orders, he needed. "They have said they are going to meet the state standards and have given us at least preliminary reports to show us how they are going to do it. They are making progress with the gress."

Defense from State

Thomas Frangos, head of the state's Division of Environmental Protection which deals with pollution, also defended the

Cigarette Sales Not Lagging

People Puffing Despite Tax

BY ANN GREENWALD

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The expected drop in cigarette smoking following the additional four cent per pack excise tax hasn't materialized—yet.

Wisconsin's tobacco wholesalers claim it's still too early to tell just what the effect of the tax will be, but noted that with the tax only a week old, sales haven't yet shown any change.

"We anticipated quite a letdown, but haven't gotten it," one area distributor said. "Sales aren't down one bit. They're as high as ever," he said.

Most dealers anticipate that the drop may come eventually, and estimate that it may take a full month for the changes to become apparent. One Milwaukee dealer, however, feels that few smokers will give up permanently.

"When all the smoke has settled, I think it will go on as before," he said.

Stocked Up

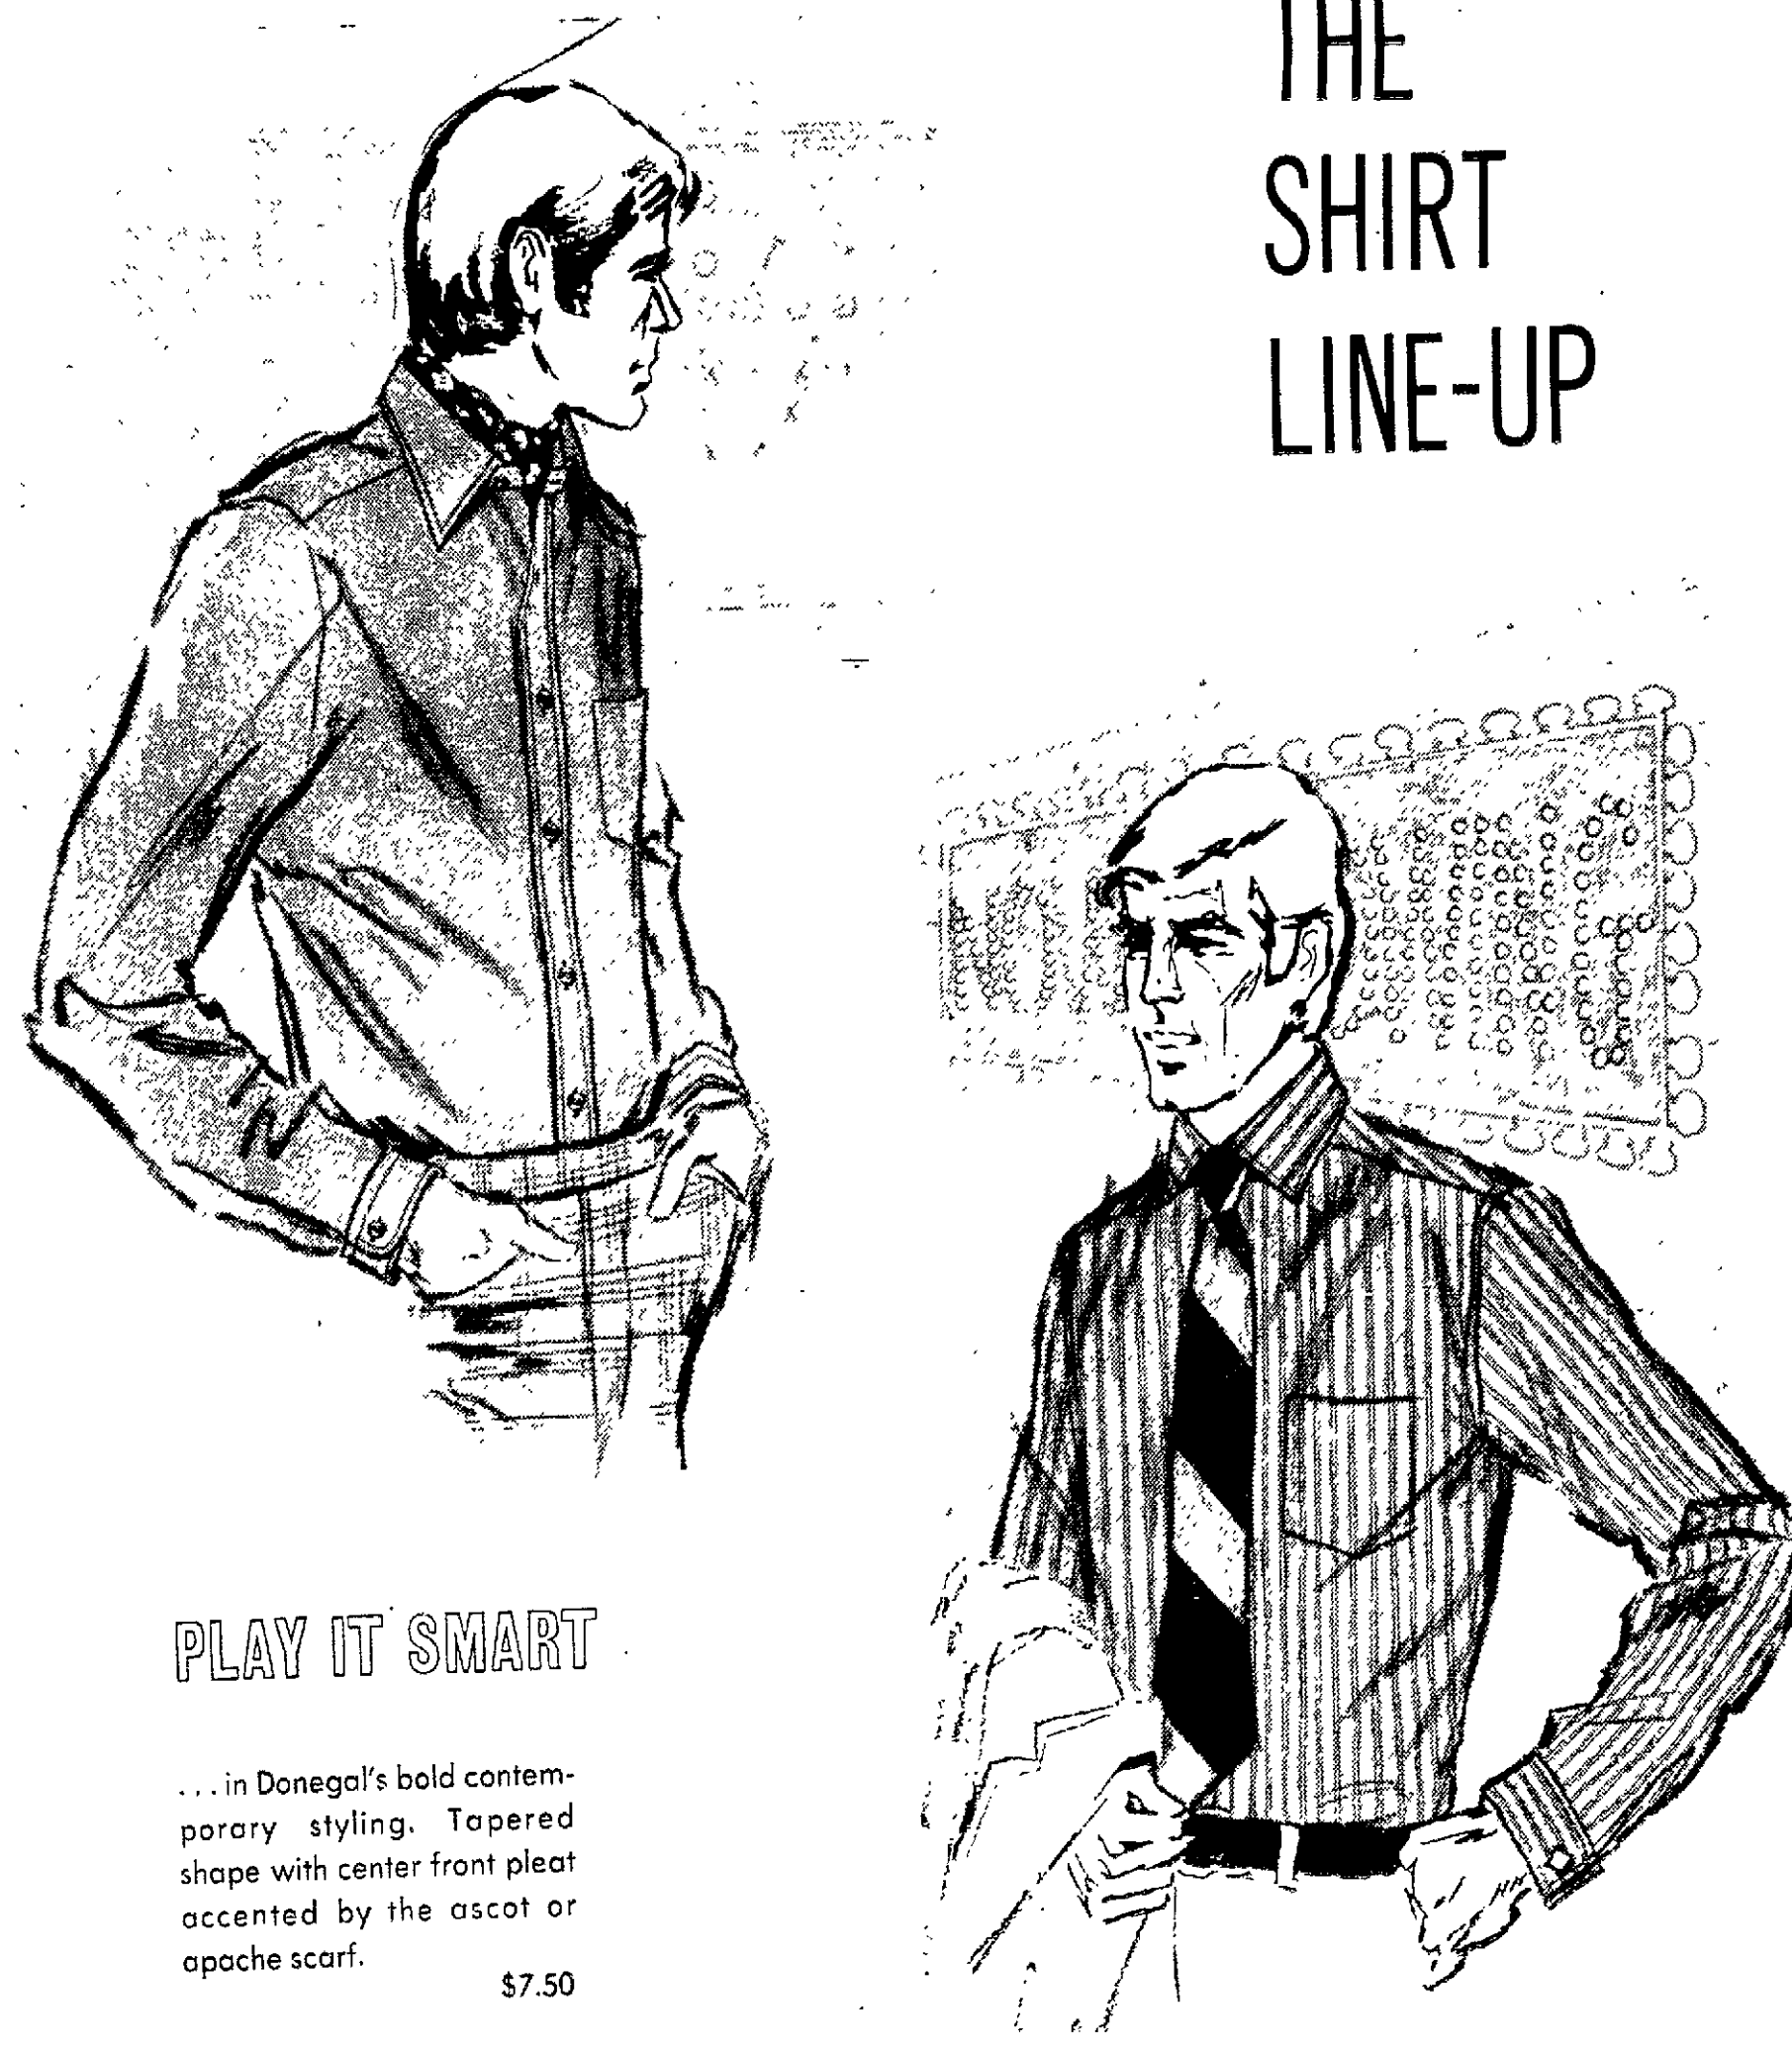

According to Phillip Schroeder, owner of Northwestern Distributing and Wholesale, Neenah, many people stocked up before the tax went into effect. Supermarket managers reported sales of four and five cartons, he said.

When the stockpiles run out, and people find they have to pay more than 40 cents additional per carton, Schroeder said he thought people might quit. If there are several smokers in the family, the difference could amount to an extra $50 a year, he noted, and people might call a halt to their smoking.

Schroeder also reported an increase in the number of customers wanting to make their own cigarettes and buying rolling machines and their own tobacco. This happens every time the cost of cigarettes goes up, he said, but after a week or so of doing it themselves most people go back to the ready-made brands.

Nixon Gets Plea To Extend Truce

Miss America 1970

Michigan Beauty Wins

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) — Pamela Anne Eldred, a beautiful ballet dancer from Michigan, was named Miss America 1970 Saturday night in a pageant marked by feminist protests.

Pamela, a striking blonde with flashing green eyes, has been the lead dancer for the Detroit City Ballet since she was 13. The 21-year-old new Miss America started dancing when she was 6.

A senior at Mercy College of Detroit, Pamela aspires for a career in the Broadway musical theater after graduation. She says her singing voice is loud enough to project throughout a theater.

For her talent presentation she performed a classical ballet.

"The body is an instrument and I use it to express myself through dance," she said, adding that she has a problem: "I like to eat too much, especially sweet foods."

But it's not that much of a problem. She has an hourglass figure, 34-21-34, weighs 110 and is 5-feet-5½.

The new Miss America clasped her hand to her mouth and started crying. Then she received her royal red cape and golden crown from the outgoing queen, Judi Anne Ford of Illinois.

Before her selection, she was asked by the judges that since she has a 14-year-old sister what would she tell her if she entered the "now generation?"

"Unfortunately, Melanie is brain damaged and I couldn't give her any advice...but I would tell another girl 'just be yourself and enjoy,'" she replied.

The runners-up in order were:

Miss Ohio, Kathy Lynn Baumann, 19, of Independence.

Tied for third were Miss New Jersey, Cheryl Carter, 18, of Matawan, and Miss California, Susan Anton, 18, of Yucaipa.

Initiative Sought by Mansfield

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield urged President Nixon Saturday to propose an unlimited Vietnam cease-fire and couple it with new troop withdrawals in a new initiative to end the war.

The Montana Democrat noted in a statement that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have announced a three-day cease-fire in memory of President Ho Chi Minh and said this "should, in my opinion, be matched by a similar announcement on our part."

"Following this prelude, an initiative on our part would be possible which would propose an unlimited cease-fire and stand-down applicable to both sides."

Then, noting press reports Nixon may announce further withdrawals after he returns to Washington this week, Mansfield said "that announcement might then be tied in with the offer of an unlimited cease-fire and stand-down."

Further Reductions
"This sequence would present the possibility of a further diminution in the fighting and, consequently, a further reduction in costs, damage and, most important, casualties."

Mansfield conceded such an offer might not be accepted either openly or tacitly but "it is worth a try as a step towards resolution of the Vietnamese war."

Mansfield said "it may offer an alternative to a continuation of the status quo, with casualties accumulating at the present rate. It may offer an alternative to a step-up of the war which is a course that seems to be inadvisable in any event."

Mansfield gave the statement to reporters who asked his views on the Communists' announcement of a cease-fire in memory of President Ho.

Nelson Too

Earlier, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., had also called on Nixon to take advantage of the situation by urging a cease-fire and to follow it up with province-by-province free elections, coupled with troop withdrawals by both sides.

Meanwhile, Sen. Allen Ellender said "the North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris seem to be moving toward a compromise position on the terms of any peace settlement" but cautioned "this hope may turn out to be an illusion."

"I remain convinced," the Louisiana Democrat said, "that our forces must remain in the field until satisfactory terms can be reached with the enemy."

Terms Change

He said "the news from Paris states that the North Vietnamese government has dropped its insistence on a full-scale and immediate withdrawal of our forces."

But Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., asserted in a weekly newsletter that North Vietnamese refusal to abide by a U.S. request for humane treatment of prisoners plus its release of three prisoners "seems more like a slap in the face than a gesture towards peace."

"It should be patently clear to all Americans that North Vietnam simply does not want peace," Tower said.

Elbrick 'Safe'

Kidnapers Promise To Release Envoy

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — U.S. Ambassador C. Burke Elbrick's kidnapers left a note Saturday night saying he was safe and would be freed as soon as the 15 political prisoners whose release they had demanded arrive safely in Mexico.

The kidnapers' note, accompanied by a letter from the ambassador, was found in front of a Rio magazine office as 13 of the 15 prisoners were en route to Mexico aboard a slow flying Brazilian air force C130 transport plane.

The plane was to stop in Recife and Belem to pick up the two other prisoners, and was expected to arrive in Mexico City man at the embassy.

Elbrick's letter, addressed to by the air force and the Foreign Minister, said he was all right and hoped to be freed announcement said.

The kidnapers had threatened to kill the veteran 61-year-old diplomat, who was abducted Thursday, if the country's military junta refused to carry out the swap.

They had first promised to free him within 12 hours after word was received from Mexico of the prisoners' safe arrival, but the latest note said he would be freed as soon as word was received.

"We are very happy," said a U.S. Embassy spokesman. He added that Foreign Minister Jose de Magalhães Pinto had personally conveyed the news to Minister William Belmont, No. 2 man at the embassy.

"Everything is taken care of by the air force and the Foreign Minister," Magalhães Pinto's Silva met for three hours to discuss how they would carry out their side of the agreement.

The minister said the four-engined plane with yellow and green Brazilian markings on its tail had left from Rio's Galeão International Airport.

Tension had mounted in U.S. circles here as word of the prisoners' departure was awaited.

Shortly before the passing of the deadline, Magalhães Pinto announced "what we can say is that all measures aimed at carrying out the government's decision are under way."

The government agreed Friday to fly 14 men and one woman to an sanctuary in Mexico.

Earlier in the day, the three military ministers who are acting as a caretaker junta for all-ing President Arthur da Costa e Silva met for three hours to discuss how they would carry out their side of the agreement.

The minister said the four-en-

U.S. Formally Recognizes Faceless Leaders of Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States announced formal recognition Saturday of Libya's new revolutionary junta and the new Revolutionary Command Council's control over the ties with the oil-rich Arab land country. The 79-year-old king was in Greece and indicated he would not fight the coup.

President Nixon's decision to establish diplomatic relations with the anonymous leaders who overthrew King Idris' more conservative regime Sept. 1 came almost as a foregone conclusion, despite some U.S. qualms about what the future may hold.

Britain, France and Italy also announced recognition during the day. And earlier in the week Egypt and other Arab states and communist countries including the Soviet Union which is expanding its influence in the area, had been quick to set up diplomatic links.

Washington officials stressed that the revolutionary regime had promised to respect all international agreements and oil company rights. They reported no harm to the approximately 9,000 Americans in Libya. They had no word of bloody fighting. They said oil tankers are plying in and out.

The revolutionary regime's pledge presumably includes continuing the agreement on Wheelus, the officials said. The base has been operated since 1954 for rocketry, gunnery and bombing practice over uninhabited desert stretches in the clear weather there not easily found in Europe.

The existing U.S.-Libyan agreement on Wheelus expires in 1970 and the Idris government had earlier indicated a reluctance to renew the pact. U.S. training flights have been suspended since the coup.

Washington officials said U.S. relations had been good with officers of the new regime and they hoped past warm relations would continue.

America's two moonmen were given boisterous welcomes back to their hometowns Saturday while their Apollo 1 teammate was joyously received at his adopted hometown.

Neil A. Armstrong, the first man on the moon, returned to his birthplace, Wapakoneta, in the rolling farm land of western Ohio, and made a plea for his countrymen to make this planet "a better place for all mankind."

Fellow moonwalker Col. Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. went back to Montclair, N.J., a comfortable suburb 15 miles from New York City, and told his greeters the Earth viewed from the moon has a "beauty of its own we have yet to see anywhere else in the universe."

Col. Michael Collins, who stayed in moon orbit with the Apollo command ship told crowds in his adopted hometown of New Orleans, "I feel like I belong."

Back from the moon, back from the tumult and ticker tape of official welcomes in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, it was a day for the neighbors to honor the hometown boys.

Armstrong, the 39-year-old astronaut who stepped into history when he set foot on the moon at 10:56 p.m. EDT, July 22, came home to a town of only 7,500 that was once the principal village and council house of the Shawnees.

"I find it difficult to believe," Armstrong told newsmen, "anyone could see the sights I was privileged to see and the views I was shown on my travel and not be most aware of the power of the Supreme Being and His art work."

Then Armstrong spoke to more than 2,000 cheering teenagers, and told them that a constellation named Aquarius—the name of a song popular with the young people—was used in the lunar flight navigation.

"Some of you have a fan song that has become a fan song of mine," he said.

Down from Ohio, at the other end of the great American river, Mike Collins, sun-long an airport fence shaking hands with some of the hundreds who turned out.

"I don't feel like I'm really adopted," he said. "I feel like I belong in New Orleans."

Collins was born in Europe, but his father, the late Maj. Gen. James Lawton Collins, was a native of New Orleans and the astronaut received his appointment to the Military Academy through a Louisiana congressman.

Back East, Buzz Aldrin came home to the one and two-family homes of the quiet Newark suburb of Montclair, where he was given a hero's welcome in 1966 after a Gemini spaceflight. Mayor

Mat Carter described Saturday's homecoming as "the greatest day we've ever had."

Aldrin a star athlete voted "most likely to succeed" at Montclair High School in 1947, said his father was the one man who did the most to make him able to fly the Apollo 1 mission.

"I can only express hope," he continued, "that the apparent unifying effect that this flight has had for mankind will be reflected as we carry good will around the world on the tour."

"We look at the moon from the Earth, we look at it from a very secure vantage point, one that is rather comfortable... When we looked at the moon from the space module... it was a panorama of beauty being unfolded to us."

At Armstrong's gathering of his Wapakoneta high school classmates, Mrs. Weber recalled that she used to sit across a desk from the astronaut.

"When I needed him on the mathematics," she said, "he was always there."

Comedian Bob Hope and Gov. James A. Rhodes headed a parade for Armstrong as thousands of visitors 8 and 10 deep lined much of the 2½-mile route, despite heavy humidity.

Soviet Education Selective, Oriented Toward the Sciences

education," Bogomolov says. "He gets that, too."

University-bound Soviet youth is continually reminded through the press, television and radio, and by massive public billboards, that the future belongs to science.

Stress Natural Science

The stress on natural sciences is going to be intensified by recent U.S. triumphs in space, which demonstrated a spectacular success for highly sophisticated American technology.

In fact, the whole Soviet trend toward a more selective educational process reflects Russia's overwhelming mission to become more competitive—and eventually superior—to advanced technological societies in the West.

Bogomolov explains that the worldwide "technical revolution" of the past two decades has created a deep need in the Soviet Union for a wide base of technically proficient people.

"It has been essential here to develop a base of technically trained people who could be distributed through all branches of the national economy," Bogomolov states.

"Everything that has happened in science has meant that we have had to train highly qualified workers and specialists to adapt the new skills and knowledge to each area of our national economy."

In the Soviet Union, Bogomolov says the aim in higher education is not just to produce a specialist with knowledge in a specific field.

"An engineer has to know physics, chemistry, mechanics, and electronics—not just engineering," he points out. "That is the way he is trained in the university."

Institutes of higher education, Bogomolov says, also offer broad training in the liberal arts. But these are studied from a particular point of view.

"Engineers, for example, will study liberal arts from the point of view of an engineer," Bogomolov says.

Psychology of Science

"This means he will not just study psychology, but he will study the psychology of engineering; he won't just study aesthetics, he will study the aesthetics of growing industrialization or of an individual industry," Bogomolov states.

"The main idea is to unify the educational and scientific processes. We're not interested in turning out just another professional in a particular field. What we are trying to do is turn out a truly creative professional."

"We consider this is the essential: That scientific research in the Soviet Union has to increase; it has to develop ever more—further and further."

Bogomolov is a large, friendly man who is accessible to callers in his office in the Ministry of Education in Moscow.

Above his desk is the ever-present photograph of Nikolai Lenin, and he speaks warmly of the collective idea which Lenin promulgated.

"We apply the principle of collectivism to the entire process of higher education," he explains. "To put it simply: it is the collective which must decide what problem—educational or involving student affairs—should come first. Then it can apply its full resources to the problem. Thus, we have much more than just one man working on one problem."

The obvious conclusion to be drawn is that the students, working as a collective, are given a great deal to say in the conduct of their affairs.

Bogomolov and the 38-year-old pro-rector of Moscow State University, chemist Vladimir Fedoseev, avow that this is the case.

Close Contacts

"We always want to support close contacts between students and professors," Bogomolov says. "We are convinced that the professor has to know everything about his students, including their wishes and desires so that he can be a counsellor and not just an instructor."

At Moscow State University, officials say, students have gained a decisive voice in administration.

Says Fedoseev: "This university is run by a council made up of faculty members, the rector and pro-rector of the institutions, and the students."

"Students have the right of decision in the council. They have frequently reported on ways to improve the curriculum, and their suggestions have been adopted."

Fedoseev, who could pass for an American college football coach, thinks this kind of student involvement would help solve some of the student uprisings which have occurred in the United States.

"Maybe you Americans could use this method more widely to help solve the problem," he says with a smile.

Fedoseev points out that all Soviet university students are members of their own trade union.

In addition, he says, "90 per cent of the 20,000 students at Moscow State University are members of the huge, 24-million-member Komsomol, or Communist Youth League."

Through its tight reins on most phases of Soviet life affecting youth, the Komsomol has managed to prevent any large-scale student outbreaks such as those which have disrupted campuses in the United States and in other Western nations.

At least, there is no public evidence of any wide-scale student unrest in the USSR.

In Student Hands

Student affairs at Russian institutions of higher education appear to be in the hands of the students themselves.

For example, at Moscow State University, the Student Educational Commission distributes the cost-of-living stipends.

"The student commission has the last word," Fedoseev says. "It determines which students should get the lower payments and which students deserve more because of superior work."

The commission also determines who will be awarded such prizes as the Lenin Stipend—$100 monthly for brilliant work.

If a student is to be suspended—for academic reasons or otherwise—the student commission decides whether he will go or get another chance.

"The commission absolutely has the final word," Fedoseev says.

In studies of the humanities, Soviet university students continue to receive the political and social indoctrination which no education official attempts to conceal.

An official government pamphlet on Soviet education states: "Social studies are closely linked to history... They deepen our understanding of the basic significance of our epoch, the essence of the general crisis that has gripped the capitalist world, the problems of international movements, the victories of socialism in our country and elsewhere..."

The revolutionary motif is repeated in huge murals at Moscow State University designed to portray victories of the masses over oppressors.

Aside from its enormous size, the university impresses through the continuous activity in its corridors, vestibules and student areas—even in midsummer.

Students have their own auditorium, a spacious chamber for the production of student theatrical and musical shows, as well as for rallies and meetings.

At every turn, visitors to the university are reminded of the importance of science in the Soviet educational system.

"Sixty per cent of the students here study natural sciences as a major," says pro-rector Fedoseev.

The regular undergraduate course of studies requires five years to complete in all Russian universities.

Moscow State University is coeducational, as are all Russian institutions of higher education. In many cases male and female students are housed on alternate floors of the same dormitory.

Married students are housed either in special dormitories or in off-campus apartments.

Except for the larger percentage of students from Asiatic Soviet republics, the students at Moscow State University resemble their counterparts elsewhere.

They tend to gather in knots in the corridors to chat, to laugh or to read periodicals sold at kiosks set up in student areas.

Young coeds are plainly dressed, go without makeup for the most part and seem to be loaded down with books. The miniskirt has not made the Moscow State scene.

There is an over-all air of serious purpose evident at Moscow State University and at other educational institutions in the capital.

Looking to the future of Soviet education, Bogomolov speaks with great feeling about the ideal sought in the new elitist educational system: "We want to develop students with self-reliance. We want students who are—and who will continue to be—self-starters, without any need for a professor to be standing over their shoulders to show them what to do."

It will be interesting, indeed, to see how this new breed of Soviet intellectual develops and how he will react to the hypersensitive, suspicious and secretive social and political system he will be called upon to serve.

Limit Bills — No One Has Many New Ideas

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — A Jackson lawmaker wants to limit the number of bills legislators can introduce because, he says, "I frankly haven't met anyone who has more than seven new ideas in any given year."

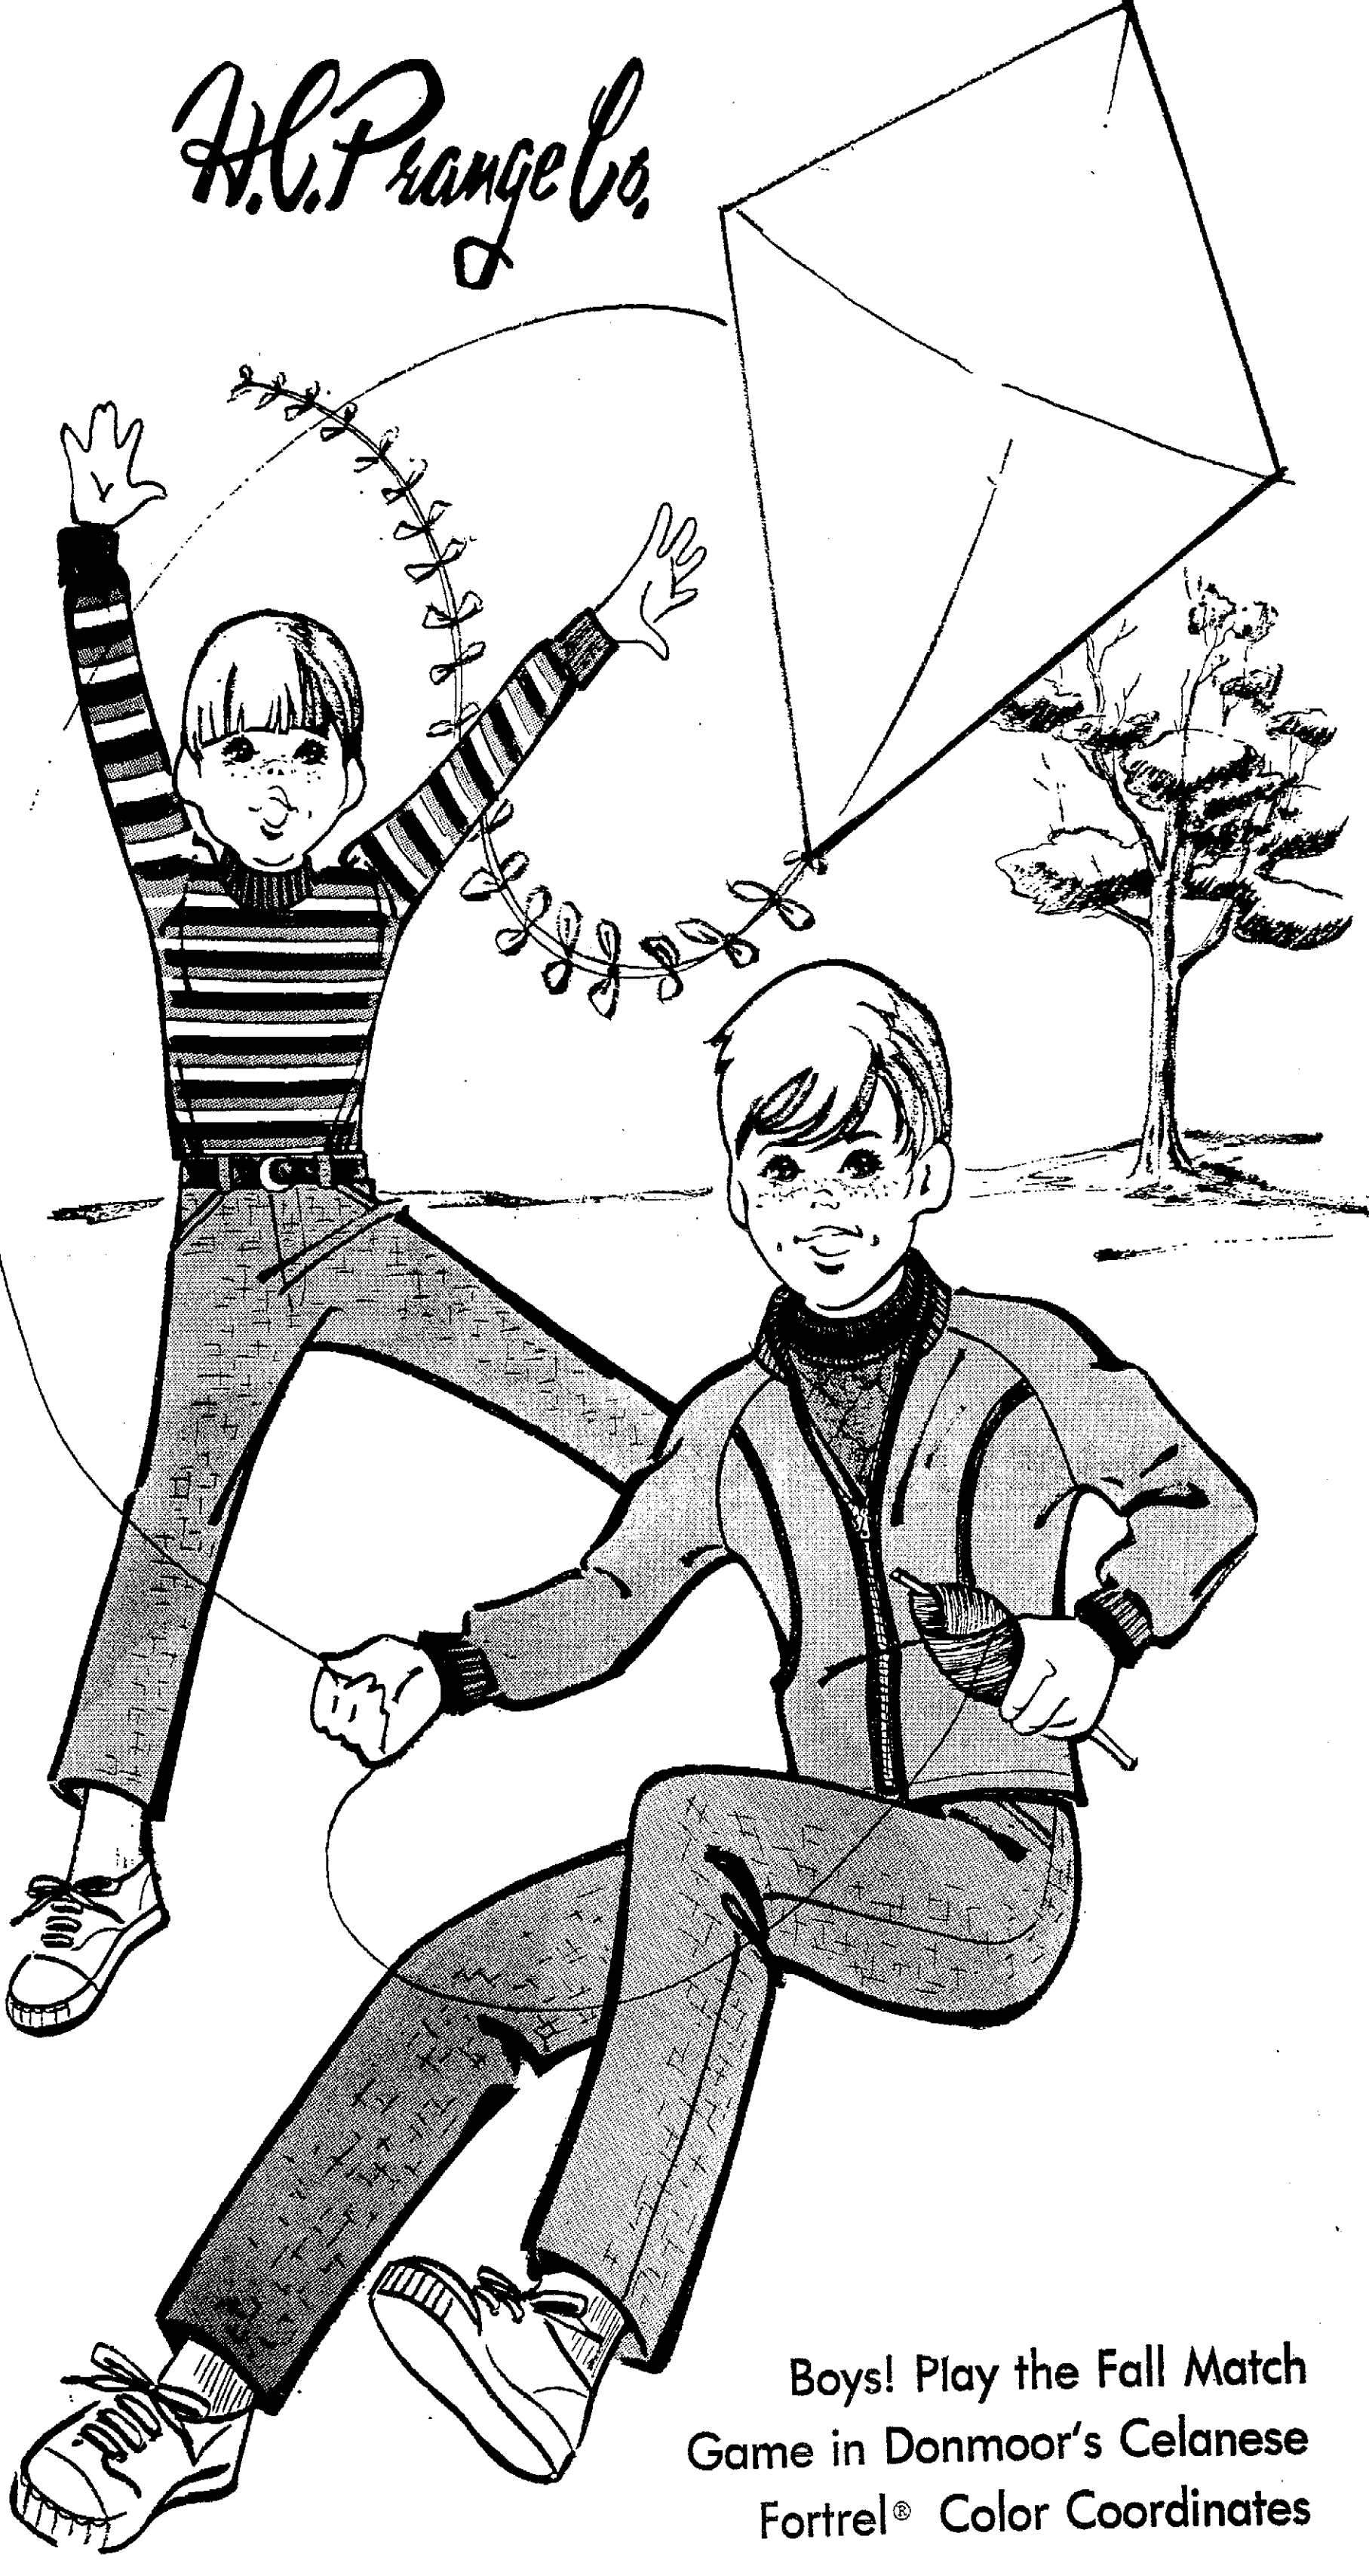

State Rep. Hal Ziegler, a Republican, tried unsuccessfully this year to limit legislators to introduction of 21 bills.

Undaunted, he says he intends to try again because "the legislative process is in danger of grinding to a halt."

Mrs. Theodore Osenroth, leads a thoroughly exciting if rather a hectic life as he alternates his residence and school years between the two homes.

A native of the Fox Cities area, he left Appleton originally in 1966 when his father became Bruce, the son of Mr. and assistant warehouse supervisor for the Liberia Mining Company at Bomi Hills, Liberia.

Year-Round School
Bruce finished the third grade here at Franklin Elementary School before moving to Africa. only to discover school there is year-around so he "finished" third grade again during the summer.

The following year was spent in Liberia, but, after beginning fifth grade there, Bruce returned to Appleton in November of 1967 and again enrolled at Franklin where he was greeted by many delighted old friends. This was an especially thrilling experience for the already seasoned world traveler as he flew home alone "because I wanted to see some Packer games." His mother and sister Lynn, now 10, followed a few weeks later after a trip to Europe.

Bruce's family lived with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Al Rosenroth, 500 W. Seymour, and one week off between each. Since the Liberian Mining Corp., is an American firm, it is an English-speaking school. The nation also is English-speaking, which prompted the government to insist the school faculty be segregated with at least half native teachers.

Neenah Youth Learns The Facts of Political Life in Washington

BY DAVE JENKINS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — To a restless college student, anxious for action to solve racial inequalities, poverty, slums, housing, and especially the war in Vietnam, an inside look at a slow-moving Congress may not serve to brighten his viewpoint.

Joe Sensenbrenner Jr., who is starting his senior year this fall at Williams College, Williams-town, Mass., got an inside peek this summer as a staffer in the Capitol Hill office of 6th Dist. Rep. William A. Steiger, R-Oshkosh.

But unlike many of the 1,500 college student interns working for senators and congressmen, Sensenbrenner did not find the legislative operation discouraging.

"Many interns went away disillusioned, saying the system can't work," the Neenah student reported.

No Sympathy
"But what right do you have to go in with illusions, anyway?" he remarked. "You don't have much sympathy for someone who just throws up his arms and says there's no hope."

After a summer of solving constituent problems, doing legislative research, and even attending several strategy sessions with Steiger, Sensenbrenner maintains his belief in the congressional process.

Under any system, influence is a question of who you know and "how much you're listened to," the political science major says.

Directly Involved
Although he was part of an eight-man staff, Sensenbrenner found in Steiger a congressman directly involved in several issues in which his feelings as a student played a part.

One was a bill before the House education committee, of which Steiger is a member, to cut off federal funds to college campuses disrupted by student protests.

Steiger first offered a compromise amendment to only require the campuses to submit plans for dealing with disorders to the federal government.

At the end, after a tour of college campuses, he opposed the amendment as well because he thought it was undue federal intervention.

While Sensenbrenner is cool to campus protests, he did not like the fund cutoff bill either. "My influence on the issue of student disorders was mainly to cement what Steiger already felt," Sensenbrenner thinks. On any issue, "Steiger and his staff were quite open," he said.

Strategy Sessions
When the fund cutoff bill went to the floor of the House, Sensenbrenner watched the debate from the galleries, something his job did not allow him to do too often. He also attended several strategy sessions with Steiger and other congressmen of similar viewpoint prior to the debate.

Much more of Sensenbrenner's responsibility as a legislative assistant involved research and work on case files, one of which was the controversy early in July over the opening of the Neenah dam sluice gates to beat the system, but you can relieve high water levels on Lake Winnebago.

Steiger eventually exerted some pressure from Washington Sensenbrenner said. "But you to get the gates open. Before he just don't stand, outside and did so, however, he sent Sensen-

He was able to contact Steiger in January when he was in Washington working on a college economics research project, with the Joint Economics Committee.

On Payroll
Steiger put Sensenbrenner on his payroll. Some interns this summer worked for nothing, Sensenbrenner said.

The son of F. Joseph Sensenbrenner, a well-known Neenah attorney, would like to go to law school after graduation next spring, depending on his draft status.

Other than that, he is unsure of how he'll make use of an already large amount of political experience. A member of the campus Young Republicans, he believes one must be a party man to have any influence, but that it is "hard for our generation because you've got to compromise."

Sensenbrenner was one of 10 summer interns sponsored by his college where he is an honors student. Besides a 9 to 5:30 workday, the program included a heavy schedule of seminars with senators, congressmen, agency heads, ambassadors, newsmen and other government officials.

Reserve Works at Army Hospital

Swallow Your Tears for the Casualties

BY HENRY SIMON

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"You'd like to ball but you don't — smile and say, 'It's nice to have you back.'"

Nurse Julia Gruetzmacher smiled faintly as she recalled two weeks of working with wounded Vietnam veterans at Fitzsimons Army Hospital near Denver, Colo.

"Now I know what it means when I read in the paper about casualties," she continued. "It means legs off, arms off, eyes out."

The director of nursing at Kaukauna Community Hospital said morale is good at the hospital, where she spent two weeks of summer camp as a major in Section 1, 44th General Hospital, U.S. Army Reserve.

Vietnam veterans evacuated to the hospital "feel badly that they've been injured and have to come home," she said.

A Sorry Picture

The nurse recalled seeing a young soldier in the rehabilitation section during her first day of the recent stay.

He had no legs, one arm and a baby in his lap as his 20-year-old wife pushed him in a wheelchair.

"I don't think we realize the number of young people who have these disabilities," says

Robert Benson, a physical therapist at Appleton Memorial Hospital who also is a major in the Menasha-based Reserve section.

Determination of the young soldiers to get better so they could leave the hospital impressed Benson, as did the personnel at the 1,000-bed installation.

Do Not Tire

"They were untiring," he explained. "They see men and they're so wrapped up in the fact that they need help that they're willing to put in a lot of time."

The "pride" of the patients had a similar effect on the Fox Valley residents comprising the section, according to Dr. Edward Loftus, chief of medical services at Winnebago State Hospital. He is commanding officer of the section with the rank of colonel.

"It instilled in our people a desire to perform better," he explained.

Seeing so many injuries "of this type and on this scale" at first was "somewhat of a startling experience" for the Valley citizen soldiers, Loftus said.

Marvelous Response

Most of the injuries either require amputation or neurosurgery. The response of the wounded who begin the road at recovery at Fitzsimons causes one to marvel, Loftus said.

"When a man falls out of a wheelchair, you pick up the wheelchair and set it up but you don't pick him up," the colonel explained, adding that the patient will get back in the chair by himself.

The unit was rated excellent to superior in surgical and nursing area, the commanding officer said.

"The weekend warriors" were more than willing to do their job," he noted proudly.

Differing Views

Though their devotion to their unit was evident in interviews, different viewpoints were expressed by members about what working with Vietnam wounded did to their feelings on the war.

"Just tell me why we're there?" questioned Miss Gruetzmacher.

"I wish I could be convinced that the war wasn't because we have to save our dollar," she said.

"Don't tell me we're there because our government thinks we have the best way of living," she added. "Maybe we don't. It's the only way of life I know."

Her viewpoints as a civilian do not mean she doesn't feel serving in the Army Reserve isn't a valuable and worthwhile experience, Miss Gruetzmacher is quick to point out.

"I think it's wonderful," she said. "I've tried to talk other women nurses into joining. There's a togetherness in our unit that I really enjoy."

Toby Roth, an Appleton real estate salesman who is a first lieutenant and special aid to Loftus, said he compared the wounded in the hospital with "slovenly dressed, unwashed young people who seemed to have lost their self-respect and have no respect for anything else."

Roth added, "It was like seeing both sides of America," going on to praise the soldiers he had worked with in comparison to other youth he had seen.

He talked about a young double amputee he had met.

"He talked like few young men do today," Roth recalled, "about his great faith and hope for America. He had no bitterness, no regrets. His attitude was just superb."

Loftus made it plain he feels "when you put on that uniform, you leave such discussion (of the Vietnam war) to civilians."

"I don't think a soldier has the right to discuss political issues," the commanding officer added.

Regents Drop Charge Against Black Youth

Student Accused Of Damaging UW Property in Riot

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The University of Wisconsin Board of Regents voted unanimously Saturday to dismiss charges against Kenneth Williamson of Milwaukee, who had been accused of criminally damaging UW property during the black student strike in February.

In the 9-0 vote, the regents slapped the campus administration's handling of the case and agreed that they were dismissing the charges brought Aug. 4 because of the extended delay in bringing them against the 21-year-old black student.

The action overrode a recommendation by UW hearing agent J. Ward Rector, who proposed that the proceedings be delayed until October so that three witnesses for Williamson could be given the opportunity to be heard if they returned to campus for the fall semester.

Free To Enroll

Williamson, a junior with a scholarship, is free to enroll and continue his education without penalty under the decision. He had been accused of hurling a chair into a light fixture in a campus building during the strike, according to testimony of a Dane County deputy sheriff who identified him about April 1 from photographs.

A witness at the hearing held nally damaging UW property by Rector denied the deputy's testimony and said Williamson had not thrown the chair.

The action of the regents came with a motion from Regent F. J. Pelisek of Whitefish Bay, who said that the testimony given did not prove guilt and that there had been "unreasonable delay" by the university in bringing the charges against Williamson.

Unanimous Support

He won the support of all board members present in his second contention, although regent president Dr. James Nellen of De Pere said that his vote represented only his feelings about the delay.

The action followed an emotional appeal by Williamson's attorney, Percy Julian of Madison, who told the regents that his client is a poor black youth from Milwaukee's ghetto who managed to climb to the university.

The regents also discussed, but took no action, on means to remove the image of the Daily Cardinal, the campus student newspaper, as an "official" publication of the UW.

Chuck Writes Handbook For Publicity Chairman

BY CHUCK DILDAY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Newspapers, radio and television stations and practically every other media of public information are constant recipients of requests for assistance from organizations, individuals, "worthy causes," community projects and even business establishments.

A constant flow of press releases comes with each day's mail and editors' telephones buzz with calls requesting news stories, editorials, pictures and, on occasion, free advertising space. And this is a good thing.

Many of these projects and causes deal with activities that are newsworthy in themselves. Others suggest avenues of approach that can result in the development of news material by the newspaper staff. Some suggest picture possibilities with real human interest.

Aren't News

But many of the so-called "news" stories are not news at all. They consume editors' time and fill their wastebaskets and, most serious, they impart a stigma to all of the unsolicited material that comes into the office.

This isn't necessary. Professional public relations people know the difference between news and propaganda. At least, they should. But it is part of their job, of course, to present their clients in the most favorable light they can and too often editorializing and opinion creep into their copy, usually in the form of lengthy and irrelevant quotes from some officer or other official with the client organization.

But I am not so much concerned with the professional PR people as I am with the sincere and conscientious amateurs who strive to get publicity for the projects they are associated with. Instead of writing news they try to preach a gospel.

Naturally, the person who is appointed publicity chairman out of the clear and with no experience, wants to do a good job for the cause he represents but he just doesn't know how to go about the job. Naturally, he isn't an accomplished news writer. If he was, he would probably be in the business.

But even so, even the most inexperienced can learn the information needed to make a news story and can organize his material to ease the job of the re-write man the editor assigns to work the material over and make it a news story.

Stick to facts. Make sure names and addresses are correct and identify individuals with their responsibility in the project that is the subject of the story. Give full details with dates and places and what is going to happen. You can't be too explicit. The newspaper staff will weed out the irrelevant material as long as the story is an honest story that gives timely facts that attract public interest.

Localize Stories

Localize stories with the names of local people and places, and activities that are happening in the local area. Keep it simple. Give your name and phone number so it is easy for a reporter to check with you on details if checking is necessary.

And remember, news media want local material. In addition to its newsworthy qualities the media feel a keen responsibility to be part of and take part in community affairs as long as they are worthy and of concern to a sizable portion of their readers and listeners.

That is my sermon for today, with one more admonition: Don't send publicity material unless you honestly believe that the fellow who lives on the other side of town and knows nothing about you or the project you are trying to help will be interested in learning about it and will want to read the message you are trying to convey.

But don't give up. Keep trying — a little harder to do a little better. Here at the P-C we want to know what is happening with the projects and causes and organizations and programs that you believe are worth while.

If we possibly can, we want to help.

Eberhardt's Furniture

Clintonville Business Sold

CLINTONVILLE — Eberhardt's Furniture has been acquired by Russell J. La Rock Jr., president of Furnitureland Inc., Pulaski, La Rock and Roy Eberhardt and Oscar, owners of the Clintonville operation, announced jointly last week.

Eberhardt and Hoh said the furniture business and store property are being sold to enable their firm to devote full time to their funeral business.

They said that in selling the furniture store portion of their business to Furnitureland, Inc., they are providing their customers and the Clintonville area with a "reputable, experienced furniture operation to carry on and expand the fine reputation and association with the entire area that Eberhardt's have enjoyed for over 50 years."

La Rock said that Furnitureland operates just one store, located in Pulaski, but has been interested in expanding in this area for some time.

"Immediate plans call for a going out-of-the-furniture-business sale for Eberhardt's, La Rock said. This will enable Furnitureland to adjust inventories, eliminate brands that are duplicated in both stores and introduce many new brand names to the Clintonville area," he added.

In an extensive survey of possible locations to start a new store, Clintonville rated high on the list of prospective communities, La Rock reported.

La Rock announced also that his son, James, will manage the Clintonville store and eventually be assisted by his wife, La Verne.

Young La Rock is a trained furniture, carpet and draperies counselor and has attended many schools and seminars in the furniture industry.

Keith Beggs, a resident of Clintonville and in recent years associated with Eberhardt's Furniture, will continue his present position with the new owners.

Face Amount Certificates Hit

Investors are losing over $4 million a year through the purchase of face amount certificates, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said last week, in calling for federal legislation to stop the losses.

He said the losses were revealed in a special study by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

Proxmire said the SEC study "clearly demonstrates the need for congressional action to protect the investor from losing more of his hard-earned money on face amount certificates."

Proxmire, who requested the study during the Senate debate on the mutual fund reform bill, issued the following statement on the SEC study:

"The SEC staff and its chairman, Hamer Budge, are to be congratulated for a timely and well documented study of face amount certificates. The main conclusion of the study is that investors are suffering substantial losses on face amount certificates because the sales commission can be deducted in advance. I agree 100 per cent with the SEC's conclusion that this practice is 'contrary to the public interest and the interest of investors' and that it should be discontinued."

Guaranteed Yield

A face amount certificate is a debt security offering a guaranteed yield well below the rates paid by financial institutions and U.S. savings bonds. For example, a 15-year certificate offers a yield of only 2.52 per cent. Many of these certificates are sold on the installment plan with the investor required to make periodic payments over a 15 or 20 year period. If all payments are completed the certificate matures to its face amount. Unlike a mutual fund, face amount certificates do not appreciate and thus offer no hedge against inflation.

"The most serious hazard to investors is the sales commission," Proxmire said. "Most face amount certificate companies deduct a sizeable commission during the early years of the certificate. This commission is commonly referred to as the 'front end load.' If the certificate is redeemed early the investor can suffer a substantial capital loss."

According to the SEC study, the average investor must continue his payments for eight years before he breaks even. A majority of savers — 55 per cent according to the SEC — cash their certificates in during the first eight years and thus lose money, Proxmire said.

Young Married

"According to figures provided by the SEC investors in 1968 suffered capital losses of $2,311,000 because of early redemption. An additional $1,780,000 was lost by the same people if

Appleton Coated Develops Tag for Meat Processors

A color-coated, nontoxic stock tag, believed to be the first of its kind, has been developed by Appleton Coated Paper Company, Robert A. Knapp, commercial products general sales manager, has announced.

Designed with the meat processing industry primarily in mind, it has been approved by the United States Department of Agriculture for direct contact with meat and poultry food products which are marked or packaged.

A private survey, conducted by Appleton Coated, revealed interest in this type of nontoxic stock tag by leading meat and poultry processors, Knapp said. The new food tag is available, on special order, in five colors: Light Blue, Light Green, Orange, Red and Yellow.

Tags made from Appleton's color-coated, USDA-approved stock could identify carcasses, heads, chunk meat and sausages, plus be used for general process applications.

Most colored tags presently used by processors are colored by a printed ink surface.

Appleton's tag stock is color-coated on the coating machine. Tag manufacturers convert the stock into various types of tags desired by processors.

we count the interest they could have earned by putting their funds in a savings account or in U.S. savings bonds. Thus the total losses in 1968 amounted to $4,091,000.

"Most of the people who buy face amount certificates are young married couples with an average income of under $9,700. Considering today's high cost of living, they are the ones who can least afford to lose their money on face amount certificates," Proxmire stated.

"In view of the low yield and high risk, one wonders why any one would ever buy a face amount certificate. The answer seems to be salesmanship. The SEC study documents the cleverly calculated sales techniques used by IDA, the largest company in the field," he said.

"According to the SEC study, IDA has developed a 'canned interview' complete with 'Power Phrases That Sell.' One 'power phrase' its salesmen are urged to use is 'You can have silver for your golden years.'"

"Using the 'silver for your golden years' approach, IDA managed to sell $200 million in face amount certificates in 1968, a truly astonishing testimonial to the powers of American salesmanship," Proxmire said.

SINGLE SHOT

by Jim Harp

Wisconsin's early season on black bear opened Saturday and if the efforts of the Wisconsin Buck and Bear Club of Mequon prove successful, the world record may be brought back to this state.

Wisconsin held the world's record for black bear until just recently when a Colorado trophy scored 22 by the Boone and Crockett method of adding the width and length of the skull. The current Wisconsin record stands at 21 and 15-16s.

The Buck and Bear Club has issued an appeal to early season hunters and those out during the regular deer season to avoid shooting bear in the head, if possible. On several occasions in the past, bear which would have qualified for Boone and Crockett records, or for even possible world recognition, had to be disqualified because skulls were split or shattered.

In December of 1970, when the present Boone and Crockett competition closes, a bear bagged during the 1968 season by Richard Ruthven, of Neenah, is expected to be a "top contender."

Ruthven shot a 415-pound bruin which was very lean and possessed an enormous head. Skull measurements presently total 21 and 10-16s and only four blacks exceeding this score have ever been measured in North America.

However, Ruthven's bear skull is expected to undergo some shrinkage before it is finally measured again in 1970.

After Ruthven bagged his bear in Forest County, it was a local taxidermist, Charles Killishek, who noticed the size of the skull and contacted the Buck and Bear Club.

Chuck Loberg, Appleton, Fox Valley representative for the Buck and Bear Club, took over and saw to the follow-up work on cleaning and measuring of the skull.

Many hunters have questioned the fairness of the skull measuring system for determining record bear. The Buck and Bear Club points out that:

1. The weight of a large bear can fluctuate over 100 pounds depending on feed, time of year, health, age and a number of other factors.
2. A competition using weight would be impossible to conduct because less than one-half of all the bear killed in North America are brought whole. Usually the head and hide is saved and the carcass left behind.

The Buck and Bear Club is just as interested in record state deer as it is with bear. During the 1968 bow and arrow hunting season, Lee Dix of Marshfield qualified for the Pope and Young (bowhunters) record book with a buck that scored 143. The state record for bow and arrow is 160.

Boone and Crockett separates deer into two classes for the sake of competition — typical and non-typical. It would be difficult to compare an evenly matched 10 or 12-pointer with a freakish rack with many unusual points. Non-typical always have a larger score.

In 1968 Harold Christianson of Viroqua shot a 10-point buck in Vernon County that scored 185 to top the previous state record of 183 6-8ths. In addition, Christianson's buck will vie with other Boone and Crockett entries in 1970 and may well prove to be the best typical rack in North America last year.

Another record book qualifier from last season was bagged in Marinette County by Len Schartner of Sturgeon Bay. This deer score 170½ and minimum for Boone and Crockett competition is 170. To qualify for state records a head must score 160.

In the non-typical class, the most unusual set of antlers ever measured by the Buck and Bear Club was a product of the 1968 season. The head had 22 points, double beams and grew with no continuity. The head scored 213 and the current state record is 228 from a 33-pointer taken in Bayfield County in 1934.

An old head taken in Ashland County in 1911, and just recently called to the attention of the Buck and Bear Club, had 47 points over one inch long each. Only one other whitetail, the world record from a Texas deer, had more with 49 points.

Outdoorsmen might be wise to note that old historic antlers are eligible for entry in the records. The Buck and Bear Club feels it is quite possible for the world record whitetail rack to be hanging in some Wisconsin attic, woodshed, basement or bar room.

It won't be long before the state bow season gets underway to be followed shortly by the gun season for deer. In line with the current bear season and the deer seasons in the near future, hunters might be well advised to be on the watch for record-type animals.

Trolling Trip Results in Catch of Three Coho

Lake Michigan Keeps Secret of Lunker Fish

BY JIM HARP
P-C Outdoor Editor
TWO RIVERS — The tip of the rod jerked slightly and then bowed back under heavy pressure.

I grabbed the heavy trolling rig out of the rod holder and set the hook. The next 15 seconds are only a memory as something heavy, solid, strong and powerful in the 85-foot depths of Lake Michigan gave way for about three turns of the reel handle and then shot the opposite way, snapping the 25-pound test monofilament as if it was a thin thread.

With frustration I reeled in the limp hanging line.

What could the fish have been?

"It might have been one of those big lakers we occasionally run into," said Ed Hamilton as he piloted the boat through the huge lake swells.

"Maybe it was one of those 15 or 20-pound chinooks like the one that guy caught a couple of weeks ago," offered Lloyd Bot-toni, operator of a Manitowoc sporting goods store.

"Hey, maybe it was a new state record rainbow. I heard a b o u t commercial fishermen coming up with a 26-pounder in their nets," added John Lee, outdoor writer from Green Bay.

What was it? What was it? That's all that kept going through my mind as I stared off across the rolling waves at the fog-shrouded shoreline. There's no way to tell. It's a secret the big lake will keep, but it's something that will probably haunt this writer for the rest of his life.

All I know is that it was something heavy, solid, strong and powerful like I have never tangled with before.

We were trolling on Hamilton's sleek 23-foot boat in the deep, cold waters of Lake Michigan between Two Rivers and Manitowoc. The ice chest already held three coho, including a 3-pounder bagged about mid-afternoon by Lee.

Sport Fishing Inc. of Manitowoc County had arranged for the outing in order to show press, radio and television representatives some of the lake-shore facilities that have been developed since the trout fishing "boom" along the lake.

Hamilton brought his boat down from Two Rivers and picked up our group at Manitowoc.

"It's no place for anyone with a weak stomach," warned John Buchholz, of Manitowoc, as we prepared to go out. The Coast Guard was reporting the lake swells as eight to 10 feet high and some of the anglers decided to stay in and fish the breakwater.

Hamilton took us about two miles out and Bottoni checked the water temperature. The indicator read about 58 degrees and Hamilton headed another two miles out. Another temperature check revealed only a 2-degree drop so we went farther until hitting the 52-degree mark.

"This is coho country," Bot-toni said as he rigged up the trolling rods. For lures he hooked on Daredevil-lmps and Little Cleos. Our estimated trolling depth was to be 27 to 35 feet down in 60 feet of water. As we trolled, the water became deeper and Bottoni added or took off weight depending on the depth of the water.

The three coho we took hit hard, fought hard and gave a good account of themselves before being scooped up in the net. We had four other fish on including one big brown which Bob Irish, Manitowoc radio man, lost just as Bottoni was about to slide the net under it.

Hamilton rated the fishing as "slow" compared to some days. He blamed most of it on a southeast wind which keeps the warm water close in to shore.

"The best time for fishing here is when we get a west wind. That blows all the warm shoreline water across the lake and it is replaced by cool water and the trout follow it right in.

The fishing's much better off the breakwaters then, too," the skipper of the Tally Ho said.

There's action a-plenty in the Two Rivers, Manitowoc and county-wide area. New docking facilities are being built, launching ramps are being added and large areas are being set aside for parking.

Downtown all the talk is salmon and trout. Radios give hourly reports on catches, wind direction and one station even sends a plane out each morning to take an aerial look. The pilot broadcasts right over the air and last Tuesday reported spotting two schools of coho about two miles off-shore.

The trout "boom" has been a real shot-in-the-arm for shoreline cities. Anglers come from near and far to fish for what they hope will be a record fish. And who knows, the next one that hits may be a record, or could it have been the one that snapped the line?

Deadline Set Saturday for Goose Permits

General Season Will Open Oct. 4; At Horicon Oct. 18

MADISON — Wisconsin goose hunters will again need a special permit before they can legally bag a Canada goose anywhere in the state this fall, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) said again today.

The general season for Canada geese opens at noon Oct. 4, along with other species of geese and ducks, while hunting, in the Horicon zone opens at noon on Oct. 18. In the Horicon zone, the bag and season limit is one goose, while elsewhere it is one per day and two in possession. Closing dates are Nov. 2 in the zone, Dec. 12 outside. Wisconsin's C a n a d a goose quota is 25,000 birds, the same as Illinois will be allowed.

Federal applications for obtaining permits are now available from DNR offices, field stations and county clerks. They must be postmarked by midnight on Sept. 13, but DNR urges sportsmen to apply as soon as possible. Those interested in hunting outside the Horicon zone, beginning Oct. 4, are especially requested to apply promptly.

License Number

Goose permit applicants must have a 1969-70 Wisconsin hunting license, and must enter the license number on the application form. They may request a Horicon zone permit and tag, or a permit for hunting outside the zone. It is expected that requests for Horicon zone permits will exceed the supply, in which case a machine drawing will be held by a data processing firm under contract to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Minneapolis.

A total of 21,000 Horicon zone permits will be issued, half of them for the period Oct. 18-31

Claims Get Higher Problem of Damage By Deer Still Exists

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — State game management officials continue to wrestle inconclusively with the problem of increasing deer damage in the agricultural areas of the state where the white-tails have become more numerous and have learned to feed on farmers' crops rather than wild vegetation.

A month ago the board of the natural resources department appeared agreed that a selective program of providing fencing materials to those owners of high value crops threatened by deer might be a contribution to a solution of the problem.

But at the last meeting of the board, that position, was abandoned, in spite of warnings by game officials that the threat of deer marauding is growing that more of the high value crops of individual producers, such as orchards and nurseries, are in jeopardy.

Herbert Behnke of Shawano claimed that it is the responsibility of the owners to provide fences for the protection of their property in deer country, and that providing the fencing materials at state expense would be a dangerous precedent.

He evidently referred to the potentially high cost of such a program, although J. R. Smith, of the state game division said that some of the damage claims are currently so high that a fencing program would probably save the state money in the long range.

Under present law, owners of crops damaged by deer are entitled to file claims by the state, which are then audited by field men of the department. But the claims have so far outdistanced the money available to pay them that they are prorated, meaning that each claimant gets only a portion of the indemnity to which he feels he is entitled. The legislature has been asked to provide more money — from conservation funds — but it has not yet responded. Conservation officials, moreover, are cool to the idea of such division of their operating revenues to what they regard as non-productive purposes.

One problem for the private crop producer in deer areas is that deer-proof fences must be relatively high, because the animals can leap over the standard fence with ease when they find attractive forage inside an enclosure.

Our success depends on how well we help people ...

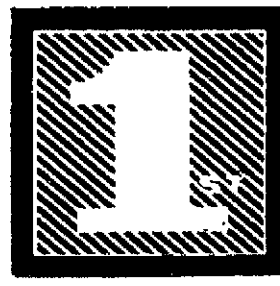

that's why nobody's ever too busy to talk to a customer here.

Compact Style Uses Breezeway

BY ANDY LANG
Despite rising interest rates and higher taxes, the trend toward larger and more expensive homes continues unabated. But here's a house that is less than 1000 square feet and likely to fit into almost any budget.

Dimensions of the basic structure are only 41' 10" by 24' 8", but compact designing by architect Fenick A. Vogel has produced a floor layout with three bedrooms, two bathrooms, a sizable kitchen-dining area and a living room featuring a handsome stone fireplace.

The boxy look that sometimes goes hand in glove with the economical rectangular shape has been eliminated by the placement of a breezeway between the house and the one-car garage, stretching the frontage to '65. The over-all effect thus is one of a long, low, large ranch.

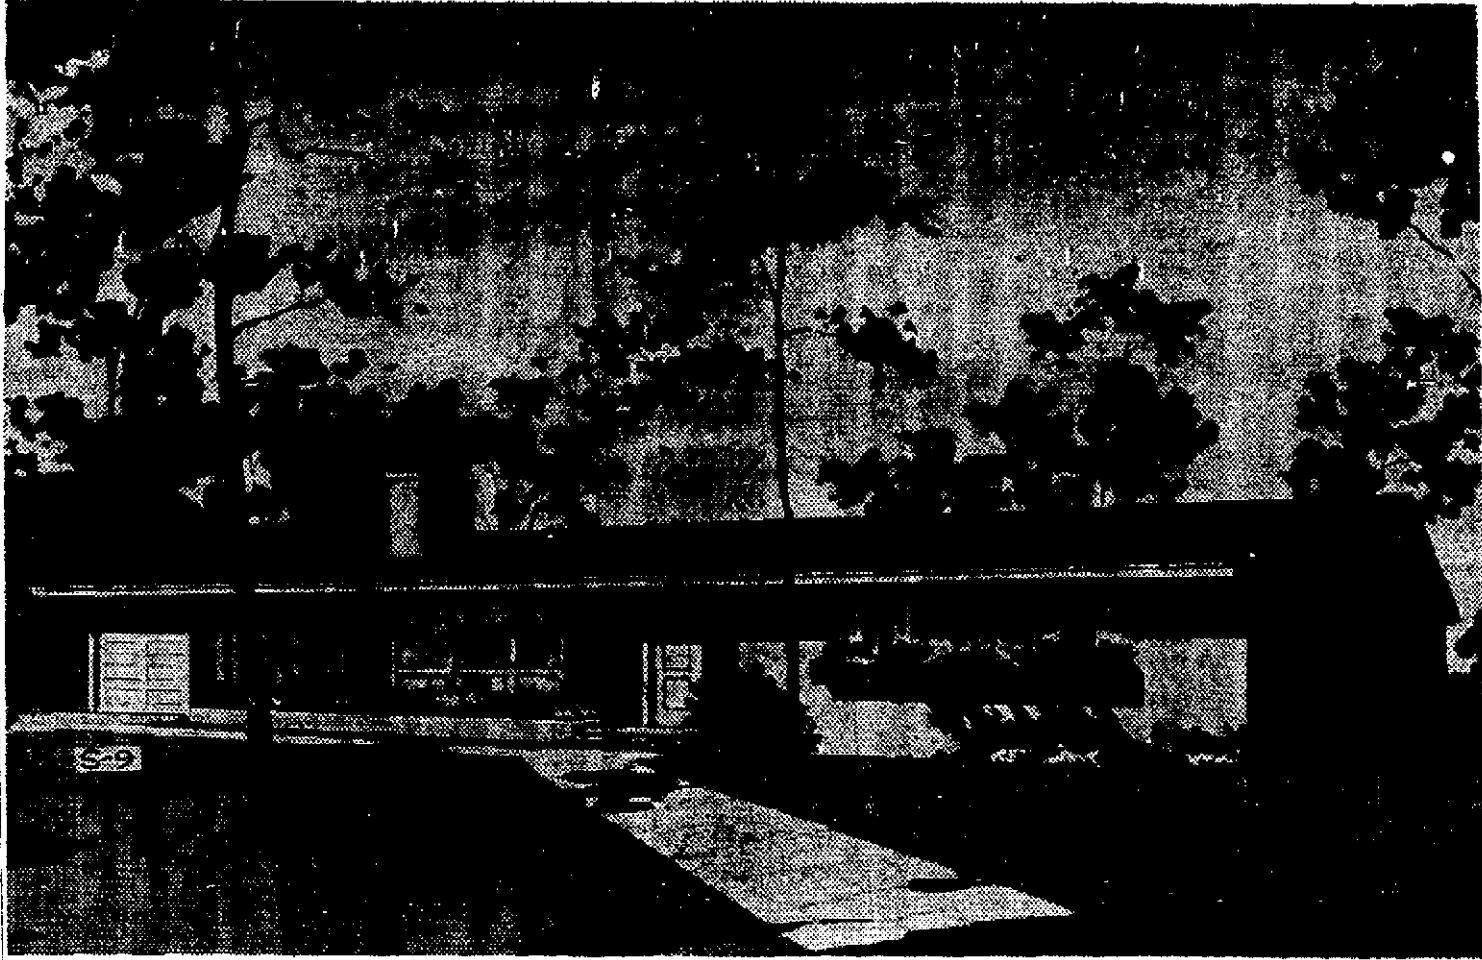

At the front of the house, brightened by a big window expanse, is the living room. The fireplace wall includes built-in bookshelves, and the wide arch that offers a glimpse of the dining area seems to widen the room. It's an attractive room, 19' long, which is big enough for formal needs and small enough for cozy family use.

The kitchen arrangement benefits from its location. The back door opens into a protective vestibule, with the basement stairs right there. The L-shaped work area is in the inner angle, leaving a windowed space for a dinette or coffee area. A box bay distinguishes the dining space, which can be separated from the kitchen section, if desired, by folding doors or a divider. A sliding glass wall at the side opens the dining room out to the breezeway, making an outdoor area available during good weather. Louvers at the front give the breezeway privacy without interfering with the flow of air, providing what amounts to an outdoor room.

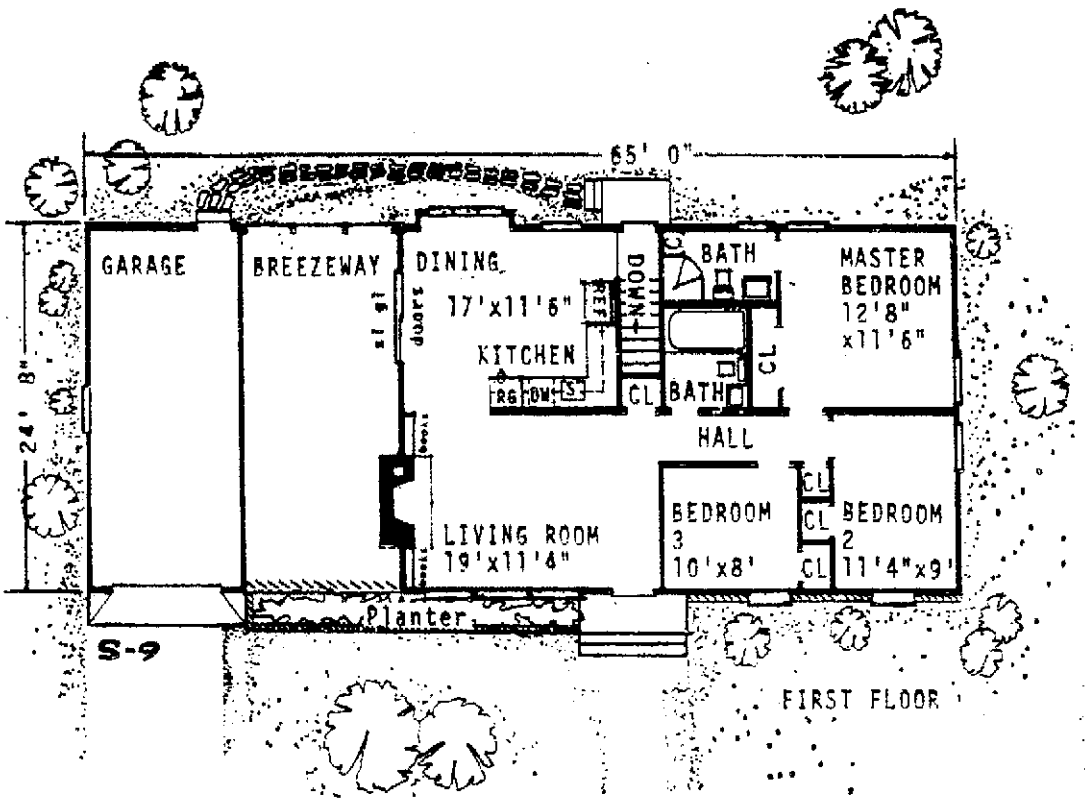

Access Hall
An access hall leads to the bedroom wing, with the master bedroom at the back part of the house. It has a large closet and separate bath with a stall shower. A second bath, at the start of the hall, serves the living area as well as the two other bedrooms. Bedroom No. 3, while small, is suitable for a youngster or, because of its location, practical as a bedroom-study. If not required as a bedroom, it could be used as a den.

The architect has included floor plan showing how the basement area can be divided, with one portion set aside as a recreation room. This could be finished when the house is constructed or done later as a do-it-yourself project.

A long planter stretching from the front entrance to the garage and a window box along the two front bedroom windows enhance the pleasant exterior. Brick and vertical siding are combined under a long unbroken roofline, giving the appearance of a house larger and more costly than it actually is.

Long Low Lines make this ranch design appear larger than it actually is. A breezeway set between the house and garage and a continuous roofline produce the illusion of size. The house actually has about 943 square feet of living area.

An Efficient Floor Plan utilizes all available space to make room for three bedrooms. The kitchen and dining area are provided with easy access to a breezeway. A fireplace provides a relaxing atmosphere for the living room.

S-9 STATISTICS
Design S-9 has a living room, kitchen-dining room, three bedrooms and two bathrooms, with a total habitable area of 943 square feet. There is a breezeway nearly 25 feet long between the house and the one-car garage. A basement is reached via a stairway next to the kitchen. Dimensions for the house are 41 feet 10 inches by 24 feet 8 inches. Over-all dimensions, which include the garage and the breezeway, are 65 feet by 24 feet 8 inches.

Your Life Insurance

QUESTION: Is there anything I can do to make certain my life insurance will be paid immediately in case of my death? I've known two cases where people had considerable delay in payment, resulting in considerable hardship. I don't want my family to be faced with any such possibility.

ANSWER: First, without knowing any details of the two cases you mention, it would seem safe to say that the considerable delay must have been due to: (1) Long delay in clearing the proof of death; (2) some question involved in the beneficiary clause or settlement option provision; (3) a flaw in the policy title which the companies had to clear before they could make payment; (4) long absence of the beneficiary, so that payment could not be made. Today, practically all life insurance companies make death payments within 24 or 48 hours of receipt of proof of death — unless there is an involvement of one of the four items just mentioned which calls for either investigation, legal action or a temporary withholding of payment. If you want to make certain of immediate payment in case of your death, you might well call in your insurance agent and, with his aid, make certain: (1) The beneficiary clause is clear, accurate and kept up to date by frequent check-up; (2) be certain there is positively no question as to title of the policy (who owns it), and that it has no assignments of indebtedness to involve delay; (3) make sure someone will be on the job to clear proof of death papers and file them promptly (applicable birth, marriage, and divorce certificates filed with your policies can often expedite handling); (4) be certain the form of payment is in the clear, for instance, if monthly income is to be paid and beneficiary age is involved, be sure to have evidence of beneficiary age on file. With these details taken care, the only cause for delay that should remain would be absence of the beneficiary — and there is nothing you can do to forestall that.

QUESTION: I have just received the shocking news from my doctor that I have a serious heart murmur. Will this affect the life insurance policy I just purchased a few months ago?

ANSWER: If you paid for your new policy and were accepted by the insurance company, nothing discovered since then could affect it, unless you and your doctor knew about the condition and did not inform the insurance company—which certainly does not appear to be the case, if this is "shocking news" to you. Once a life insurance policy is in force, nothing can invalidate it except fraud or non-payment of premium. The purchase of any new life insurance will be affected or prevented by a "serious" heart murmur. Certain types of heart murmur, when mild, and especially at younger ages, may not affect even the purchase of new insurance. But your existing policies are not affected in any way, however serious the murmur may be, either as to cost or their remaining in force.

YOU CAN'T SEE IT

YOU CAN'T HEAR IT

BUT YOU CAN FEEL ITS WARMTH!

that's ELECTRIC COMFORT HEAT

Electric ceiling cable (one of many different kinds of electric heat) radiates heat downward to provide even and steady heat. You can't see it (no radiators or grills to spoil the decor.) You can't hear it (no noise from pipes, burners, etc.). But, you can feel it. You can feel the no-draft warmth that surrounds you.

Best of all, modern electric heat is clean — Electric Clean. It's healthy, too — doesn't dry out your home — this is important to your comfort and well-being. Electric heat gives you room-by-room temperature control.

You owe it to yourself to investigate electric heat. Call WMPCO's electric heating specialist. His consultation services are free. You're under no obligation. Electric Heat is great and the cost is much less than you think.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — "I don't believe it. I don't believe it. What is it? Do we have a good location or something?"

Jack Deeble lamented Wednesday after the branch he manages for Southland Savings & Loan Co. was robbed for the fourth time in two years. It also was the fourth time a Southland branch in the San Diego area has been held up in 30 days.

Baubles, Bangles and Beads Sparkle, Sprinkle, On Paris Gowns

BY MARY WITT Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Once upon a time not so very long ago, little girls played princess, gypsy or movie star when they dressed in mother's grown-up clothes, their long skirts rustling, their bodices laden with discarded jewelry bearing diamonds, sapphires and rubies, so designated by the imagination.

Nothing was beyond the power of daydreams: gingham became silk; a raggedy scarf was transformed into a mink stole and floppy, old high heels? Glass slippers with a perfect fit, of course.

As the years flew by, the time to dream nearly vanished in the face of ever expanding reality, but always there remained the desire to stop the world in something romantic, something opulent, something thoroughly feminine.

Those same little girls, now adults with children of their own and community responsibilities, are seeing their visions come true with the wealth of evening gowns designed by Paris couturiers for the coming season.

Baubles, bangles, bright shiny beads join silken sashes, airy feathers, embroidered fabrics, plush velvets, floating chiffons, regal brocades and magnificent furs.

From Yves St. Laurent come flowing printed panne velvets done in gray and cream roses against a shimmery pale background in the style of Gustave Klimt, an artist of the Twenties noted for his intricate fabric patterns. Belting the dress is gray passementerie, the rich braid that originated in the Orient, peaked in popularity in Europe during the 1880's, and returned in profusion to adorn many of St.

Feathers and more feathers cover the sleeves of the bright red velvet evening gown above from the fall and winter collection of Pierre Balmain. A diamond, golf pearl and jet necklace accompanies the scene stealer.

Brilliant shades of violet, orange, green and gold are combined in printed silk evening culottes designed by Guy LaRoche. Sashed at the waist with a luxuriously fringed floor length scarf, the culottes are topped with a vest of the same fabric and a full sleeved crepe blouse.

Back interest is provided by Molyneux, who created the elegant faille gown above. Bows embellish the neck and sleeves, while black cock feathers peep out from the belled cuffs.

Cut A Swath Through Fall

September 7, 1969

Sunday Post-Crescent C 2

Dramatic use of fabric is the theme of fall fashion excitement for the woman who sews. In a new collection of woolsens, J.P. Stevens & Co., Inc. has cut a wide swath through the most turned-on ideas, teaming his and her styling, maxi with mini, tweeds with twills, plaids with plains.

The collection combines past with present in a wonderful potpourri of themes: the Forties look, gypsy whimsy, the Space Age, a tribute to Coco Chanel, and Sherlock Holmes fantasies.

With pure inspirational spirit, Butterick, McCall's, Simplicity and Vogue patterns are boldly mixed and matched for a trend-setting collection of one-of-a-kind fashions destined to inspire the home sewer to be her own couture designer.

Queenly Greatcoat with maxi-mum grandeur tops pants in the same burgundy plaid. Pattern by McCall's.

A His-or-Hers Costume from the romantic past. The swashbuckling cape and trouser suit takes the purist approach to the unisex look. Cape pattern, Simplicity; jumpsuit pattern, Butterick.

Mix, Match and multiply gray flannel with coordinated burgundy, gray and gold plaid. The suit jacket goes almost all the way over a bias cut slip of a skirt, while a classic little single breasted gray flannel jacket tops slightly flared pants. Coat pattern, Butterick; skirt, pants and jacket patterns, Simplicity.

Smooth as pale coffee is the pantsuit at right in one long line of total oneness. The coat can lead a separate life with coordinated plaids and plains. Together, the costume is destined to take front center on the fall fashion scene. Coat and pants pattern by Simplicity.

A Slim Green Stalk of a Coat, warm, but not cumbersome, flaunts a notched collar and smart little flap pockets. Underneath is a silk shirtdress by Butterick. Skirt pattern, Vogue; coat pattern, Simplicity.

The Forties Look With 1969 Alchemy . . . spare, bare and clingy. The pink, crop top is teamed with pearly gray wool knit pants with flaring bottom. Bolero pattern, Simplicity; pants pattern, McCall's.

Do Your Own Thing Subtly With Lingerie

Choosing lingerie for fall is a matter of picking your own thing, for looks and fabrics vary in both daywear and sleepwear. But one thing is sure: soft is the key word to all the collections.

Start with daywear. The bra-slip still reigns supreme — in tricot and stabilized tricot; with cups lightly padded or plain; in colors from white and nude to flaming red and forest green.

Some bra-slips end now in panties — slim, boxer style or romper-like — to wear under pantsuits. There also are pantliners, usually starting low on the hips and ending in cuffs banded with lace.

Pantliners, like pantie briefs, may be topped with a camisole, either of nylon banded with ribbon and lace, or disguised as the top of a tanksuit.

Soft outer clothes have brought these soft underclothes, and the duo-theme of freedom and ease carries through into sleepwear.

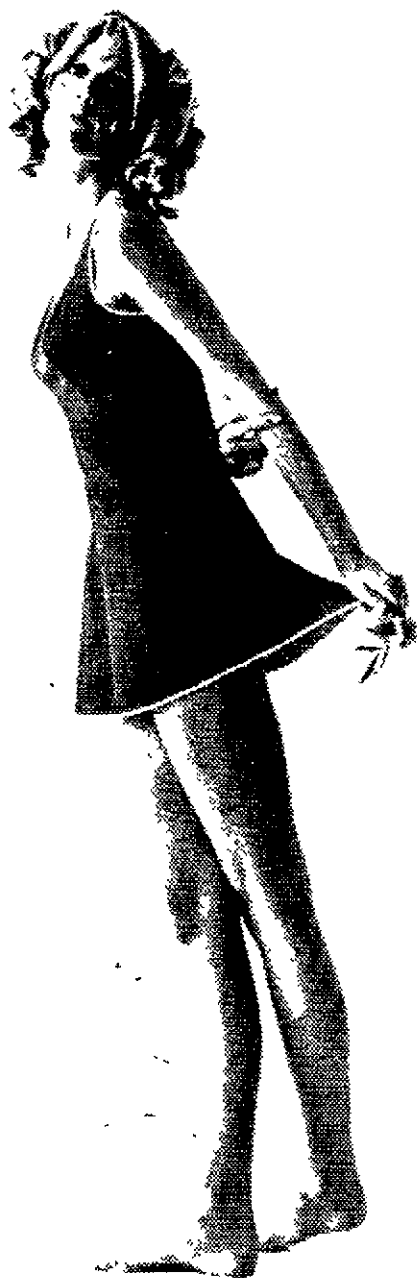

There are no set rules now for what you wear to lounge, play, putter or sleep in. It's one for all, all for one — and the reason for a wardrobe is that it's so difficult to take home one delectable bit of lounge-or-sleepwear and pass another by!

Almost every piece has a double use or an extra way to wear it. For example, a romper-sleeper goes grocery shopping when wrapped with its matching short skirt and becomes a hostess costume when its color-coordinated long skirt covers up.

Besides opaque under-outers, this season brings some of the sexiest, sleepwear in years. Some of it is traditional, in the category of sheer gown plus pretty peignoir.

More of it is "now" fashion: frankly see-through voile or chiffon; peek-a-boo lace draped as a gown or tailored into pajamas.

For the Comfort-plus fashion seeker this shirt-waist shaper strikes a note of graceful elegance. The softly fluid, floor length gown has dolman-type sleeves, two skirt pockets and a tie belt.

Created as a Short, short coverup, the Flip-slip in nylon tricot with piping in contrasting colors features a smoothly fitting bodice that conforms to the body's curves.

A Dream of Diversity, this softly feminine pajama set can be worn in three ways. The elegantly designed tunic top combines with its bell-bottom pants partner for chic lounging or super sleeping. And when the mood changes, the tunic turns into a mini-gown. Fashions shown are by Olga and are available in Appleton.

Fur Unlimited Latest Accent

Fur trims fur and fur trims fabric in fall coat and suit collections.

When fur wears another fur, fluffy and flat surfaces usually combine — for instance, a coat of seal or broadtail trimmed in fox or muskrat.

There are no limitations on fur trims for fabrics. Just about every kind of fur is used as a trimming.

News here is in the ways fur accents fashions.

In addition to collars, cuffs, tuxedo fronts and hemline borders, touches of fur appear unexpectedly as closings, scarves, pockets and other adornments.

Use Shadow to Emphasize Eyes

Emphasize the eyes with shadow, but be subtle, especially in the daytime. A powdered type of shadow is most easily applied to achieve just the right tone. Condition the area first with pads soaked in good quality witch hazel. Let the lotion dry by itself. Shadow will go on smoother, last longer.

Hues to Quench Fashion's Thirst

Sweet wine colors are this season's quenchers to that great fashion thirst for new hues. Purple shades in mellow burgundy and aubergine are tastes of what is in store.

Violet sheds its shyness to become a bolder, contrasting hue, as opposed to the heathery haves that are just touches of the vine.

Reds toss away the olive but keep the pimiento. There are brick reds, browned reds — and some red-reds, too.

Nature's bounty gives autumn fashion the appeal of dusky greens, in moss and forest tones. Or, fashionables may gobble up this vegetable — spinach. Spinach green becomes a fashion appetizer that even Popeye might rave about.

For people who love having the blues, there are true blues, grayed blues, marine blue and fall's new navy blue.

Bittersweet, clear yellows, taupe, bois de rose, cornsilk, orange — these are just a few of the colors in fashion's generous spread.

And what will become of these wild, subtle, cool, hot, zany, sophisticated fall colors? They will go from solids into all kinds of prints: florals, paisleys, art deco, border prints, pictorials, gypsies.

Heavy Sunglasses May Irritate Skin

Lowered Hemline Gets Thumbs Down Sign Locally

BY MARY WITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Ever since early 1968, when French and American designers introduced the lowered hemline, there's been a dark cloud of gloom and doom on the fashion horizon.

Even though the midi eventually fizzled, most women began to regard it as if it were the plague. It would be back and the next time it would deal a fatal blow to a wardrobe too short to lengthen.

Now that Paris has once again chosen to headline its fall and winter collection with midis and maxis and now that floor length coats are making themselves seen on the streets of the big city and in the pages of popular fashion magazines, what will the effect be on what we wear in the Fox Valley?

That was the question posed Thursday afternoon during a series of sidewalk interviews with Appleton retailers and shoppers.

Disapproval, shock, bewilderment, amusement — the reactions to St. Laurent's midi and Junior Gallery's maxi could have been mistaken for responses to pictures of high fashion's passe teeny, weeny bikinis, transparent blouses or miniscule minis.

In general, the verdict was thumbs down on covering up the leg, or in other words, underexposure is no improvement on overexposure.

There were exceptions, of course.

A young college graduate who just returned from New

St. Laurent's Midi

York City, where she plans to take up a career this fall voiced her desire for a maxi length coat for life in the city. "I wouldn't consider wearing one here, however," she commented, adding that the midi length was out of the question regardless of geography, as far as she was concerned. "It just looks too dowdy."

"I kind of look forward to the lowered hemline," was the response of Chuck Ketner, who attends Platteville State University. "It will be something new for me. After all, these are the lengths my mother and grandmother wore when they were young. And I think they'll come back because fashion runs in cycles."

But would he want to see his companion, Diane Schroeder, Waupaca, in a midi or maxi?

The answer was no. "Personally, I like the short lengths just above the knee. A woman has to be tall to carry off the lowered hemline," he explained when confronted with a practical situation.

Although Miss Schroeder agreed, she admitted she will probably be taking a second look at maxi fashions when they appear in stores.

Mrs. Tom Latimer was adamant in her refusal to consider lowering her hemlines. "My husband just hates them," she explained. "But then everyone was aghast at mini skirts a few years ago and now everyone's wearing them. It could happen again."

If hemlines do go down, the impact won't be felt in the Fox Valley for at least two years, according to the Appleton retailers interviewed.

"I foresee no change in hemlines in the immediate future," stated one buyer of sportswear for a local women's apparel store. "Hemlines in the upcoming holiday and spring sportswear lines will remain the same and we are not stocking the longer lengths as of the present time."

The manager of a store that caters principally to high school students and young career girls concurred. "The short skirt has just hit full swing here. The Midwest — especially this area — is conservative. Anything that far out might go over on the East or West coast, but it will probably be at least two years until the new lengths are accepted here."

"Right now the response to the two maxi raincoats we have in stock has been one of amazement," she continued. "The maxi is for someone who wants to be an eye-catcher. Of course, extremes are always shocking and eventually we may pick up a modified version, but at the moment the lowered hemline is not for general wearing."

"Women will accept any lowering of the hemline with great reluctance," emphasized another manager of a College Avenue apparel shop. "It's possible high fashion will force hems down, but not in the foreseeable future. Maxis are for the woman who can afford two wardrobes and she's not the average shopper."

Quoting from national apparel statistics only one week old, the manager stated that the overall reception of the maxi length has been "poor."

"Last spring, I ordered a maxi and the only way I could sell it was to cut seven inches off and hem it up to the comfortable length women prefer," he added.

"Try and sell 'em" was the challenge put forth by a saleswoman. "Girls come in and try them on. They think they look cute, but they won't buy."

"It's an unflattering, uncomfortable look," commented another manager of a store selling high fashion garments. "At this point, we're not going to stock them. It's an extra fashion for the woman who has every look and right now it's strictly a coat fashion. National figures show that only in the junior lines has there been some acceptance."

"We can begin to feel that we can't sell what women don't want to wear," remarked a fashion consultant for a College Avenue department's store's junior floor. "I think designers are finally designing for the individual. They're listening to women more than women are listening to them."

Noting that one maxi coat sold within 15 minutes of the time it was placed on the rack, she explained that teenage girls are expressing some interest in the new length because it's something new.

"If the new lengths are heavily promoted, it may be that everyone will be wearing them," she added. "But no matter what happens, every woman should take a good look at herself before following what might be an unbecoming trend."

Separates Showing Fresh Personalities

As separates get together for fall, both skirts and sweaters show fresh personalities.

A rash of happy, swinging pleats gives skirts a new look. Knife pleats and trumpet-flare pleats sewn down from waist to hipline accommodate long, skinny belted sweaters.

With textured, tweedy, ribbed or flat knit surfaces, sweaters have a long, skinny French-girl look. They're to be worn in and out, with a bold leather or dangling chain belt.

Underworld of Fashion Keeps Pace With Change

Foundations for fall are deceptive. They appear to do nothing but cover the body, whereas in reality they do a great deal. They play a big fashion role, smoothing and shaping the figure for shirt-dresses and long-jacket suit costumes, for see-throughs, for jumpsuits and citypantes for slim 'Twenties cardigans. The leading styles are sleek bodysuits, natural-shaped brassieres and briefs, bras-slips, form-persuasive girdles and pantie girdles with hose-holding legbands. All of these foundations are smoother and softer than ever before, even in large and extra-large sizes. For example, there are pull-on brassieres, their bands all elastic, for C and D cups; persuasive girdles and pantie girdles, that slim with seaming rather than overlay or elastic. Fashion Dictates The underworld of fashion has truly experienced a revolution in recent seasons, and it is not entirely due to the youth surge. With more revealing outer fashions for all figure types, foundations have simply kept pace.

See-throughs inspired nude-look foundations. Citypantes dictated a smooth legline and a natural seat. Knits and clinging tops brought bras with horizontally seamed or seamless cups. Deep-plunge necklines brought new deep-plunge bras. Pantie hose prompted pantie girdles with grippers instead of garters. The genera trend to less-in-more made bra-slips best-sellers, and introduced bodysuits. With so much accent on the body, it had better be good. So it's fortunate that while there are bras without any inner shaping at all, there also are brassieres with cups lightly contoured to improve upon nature. Fewer Sizes While there are body suits that are all stretch, there also are body suits with true control. And while sizing tends more to the letter than to the precise numerical measure, it is now possible — with improved elastics — to fit more figures with fewer sizes. The foundation color range is extensive, and this fall there is new interest in browns, blacks and deep greens. Prints abound.

One other trend developing in recent seasons has grown from a junior to an all-figure-fashion idea: The styling of foundations as inner + outer wear. Manufacturers are now producing in volume foundations in fresh prints that look like and are outerwear. They function as lounge or sports as well as shape clothes.

Air Conditioned for Your Comfort

Suited for Fall

Come what may in the fashion world, the suit remains an integral part of the scene. This season, though, the spirit of this long-time favorite roams free with suits showing as much diversity as the whole world of fashion.

A suit can be a long sweater jacket with a mobile skirt, a safari jacket over a dress or a battle jacket over a jumpsuit. Jackets choices range from the blouson to the reefer, chesterfield and blazer. Skirts are flirty with pleats and flares.

A significant note this season are suits keyed to the layered look. Everything is interchangeable for a complete wardrobe — dress over pants which may also be mated with a blouse or tunic with a coat or longer jacket as the finishing touch.

Fabrics are updated classics with a new softness. Twills, houndstooth checks, tweeds, plaids and worsted are joined by the new argyles and tweedy checks.

Soft, raised-surface textures can be found in fleeces, mohairs, velours and cashmere. Other plushy looks include corduroys and piles. The supple fabrics — wool crepes, jerseys and knits have made the scene, too, along with the crisp gabardine and men's wear textures.

Paul Blumenstein uses stark white melton to form a slick autumn suit. He matches it with a cognac double-knit blouse beneath the slightly shaped double-buttoned jacket.

The Skirt, sleeveless shell and scarf-tied jacket, above, are of wool double knit. The jacket zips up the front and has button detailing that is repeated on the sleeves. Designer was Gianni Ferri for Baniff Knitwear.

Paris Evening Gowns Concocted From Dreams

Laurent's ensembles.

Recalling the 1890's, St Laurent revives the rounded hip and nipped-in waistline with a full skirted patchwork gown in smoky shades of pink, brown, taupe and black. A long beige ostrich boa completes the mood of the era.

Mark Bohan's white crepe evening tunic worn over pants provides a sleekly modern contrast to his peasant inspired gown of sheer silk mousseline in black, bois de rose, gold and sea green, all wrapped in a black velvet fringed shawl.

Meanwhile, Coco Chanel takes the romantic tack with a white crepe gown, softly bloused over a flat pleated skirt to create an air of simplistic elegance.

And so, with imagination unlimited, Paris' couturiers endorse a multitude of looks for evening . . . dashing, daring, demure; bright, bold, beautiful; lush, lavish, lyrical . . . all of them drawn from the fantasies of little girls grown o'der, wiser and more feminine with time.

Trim Figure Is Important Fashion Asset

Bold colors, form-following fabrics and peak-a-boo styling are the keynotes of the fall fashion season.

The fashion trend to reveal or accent the figure makes a figure control exercise program more necessary than ever.

It takes more than calorie-counting to sparkle in the fall fashions, observes the Family Fitness Council.

Authorities point out that a regular, daily personal exercise program is just as important as dieting to get your figure where you want it and to keep it there.

Exercise doesn't have to be a big production. A 15-minute program in the privacy of your home, suitable to your schedule, can work wonders.

The council notes that regularity is a key to the success of personal exercise programs and that the growing trend to use equipment styled for the home is the answer for many.

Now available in such large department stores, figure control equipment such as exercise bicycles, indoor joggers, belt massagers and versatile family exercisers are popular favorites.

Here's a happy thought to get you started.

If you can't control weight through dieting, you can develop a fashion-flattering figure with proper exercise. Why? Because when you exercise regularly some flabby tissue is changed to muscle tissue. Muscle tissue takes less space and the result can be a much trimmer figure — even without a weight loss.

There are other dividends.

Besides a trimmer, firmer body, regular exercise generates feelings of alertness and energy instead of fatigue and listlessness. You actually feel and act vibrant. You build endurance, escape tension, and acquire grace and poise.

Starting your own program of exercise for fitness and figure control may be the most fashionable thing you can do.

Wife Discovers Husband Is Transvestite

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In 1955 I married a man I thought I knew very well. Six months ago I discovered a side of him that has left me dazed and shocked. About two years ago he became involved in a theater group. Every Monday night he has to attend rehearsals. I became suspicious when, after two years of "rehearsals," it occurred to me that this group had never put on a performance.

One morning while he was at work I jimmied the lock on his wardrobe suitcase and discovered a fancy assortment of women's clothes. I realized then that my husband was a transvestite.

When I faced him with the evidence, he admitted everything — said it has been going on since his teens. He insists it is a harmless form of recreation, swears he is not a homosexual and even named two prominent men in town who are members of the "rehearsal group." Eight men (or whatever you want to call them), rent a hotel suite once a week. They sit around in their dresses and high heels, have a few drinks and play cards.

We have a good sex life and two sons. No one would guess my husband has these tendencies. He is normal in every other way. My questions are as follows: (A) Would psychiatric help cure him? He insists he is not sick and that this quirk is no worse than being hooked on skiing or golf. (B) Should I contact the wives of the other men in the group and ask them how they live with the problem? (C) How can I be sure our two sons will not inherit their father's tendency? — Mrs. Oddball

Dear Mrs.: (A) Psychiatric help will not help a person who does not believe he needs help. (B) Leave the other wives alone. Knowing what you know won't help them. (C) Encourage your husband to spend time with his sons, to take them bowling, skating, swimming. Have him play ball with them and participate in male-type activities which they can imitate.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son, Charles, is 21. He has been going with a nice girl for three years. She is two years older than Charles and has a well-paying job. He is still in school and won't be able to support a wife for several years.

Three months ago the girl surprised Charles by having her grandmother's ring reset in a ladies mounting so he could give it to her as a symbol of their engagement. She also carried her photograph to the newspaper and wrote up the engagement announcement.

Yesterday Charles told me he is not sure he wants to get married. He says the girl is pressuring him to set the wedding date and it is making him nervous. Would it be all right if Charles wrote her a letter breaking off the engagement? He says if he tries to tell her in person she is sure to cry all over him and he can't stand tears. Your opinion is needed. — Riverside

Dear Riv: It's obvious the girl is pressuring your son and he would be wise to extricate himself promptly. But, please, mom, advise the kid to put on a raincoat and hip boots and face the flood like a man. A fellow who takes up three years of a girl's time owes her the courtesy of a farewell visit.

Give in or lose him . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the super sex salesman, check Ann Landers. Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Individuality Keys Fall Sportswear

Evolution follows revolution and so it is that fall '69 sees a new breed of pants keying the total sportswear picture.

Now that pants have gained their place in the world of fashion, they are more reserved and it is for them that shirts, sweaters, vests, tunics, toppers, jumpers, skirts — all the put-togethers — are being made.

Because pants have become so basic, they aren't as off-beat as they have been. Ultra-wide floppy legs are passe. Legs are straighter, narrower and often boast cuffs.

Pants fabrics depart from the wild side to favor old favorites instead. Solid wools, plaids, corduroy — both waled and the new no-wale — are part of the scene.

Skirts are for many moods from the soft, soft to hard edge. Breezy, flip pleated skirts vie with culotte skirts. Wraparounds contrast to soft dirndls. Each has its time and its place. It's all the look of fall sportswear and the preference is purely a personal choice.

To go over skirts, pants, shirts and other components are casual coats and jackets that come in a variety of styles and length. Choices also include the swingy topper, the cape, the safari jacket, the blazer, the blouson, the double-breasted classic and the Napoleon-collared jacket. Tunics, too, double as jackets.

Not since the '40s have sweaters enjoyed such a revival. The cardigan is big, important and has many looks. It can pass as a sweater, a tunic, a jacket, a short coat, a vest. There is even a special category known as "below-the-knee."

The word on sweaters is they should be stretched long, yet clingy.

Blouses and shirts have the leaner look for fall. Along with skinny sleeves on some comes the complete opposite of full sleeves, controlled by tight cuffs, on others.

Individuality and ingenuity are the secret of the fall sportswear picture.

The New Layed Look comes to life in this outfit. A JacCoat and matching pants of giant glen plaid are teamed with a long sporty vest of bonded wool jersey. Completing the outfit is a classic washable crepe shirt. These designs by Tracy Mills for Tudor Square.

Perfect for City or country is this bonded wool jersey tunic with classic pants of bold plaid, above. Warm and woodsy, the tunic is beautifully shaped by artful seaming. The turtleneck blouse is the perfect companion piece in washable crepe. At left is a long glen plaid tunic jacket with a matching skirt made for movement by a sunburst of pleats. A soft Dacron blouse with a low V-neck collar and billowy sleeves completes the ensemble.

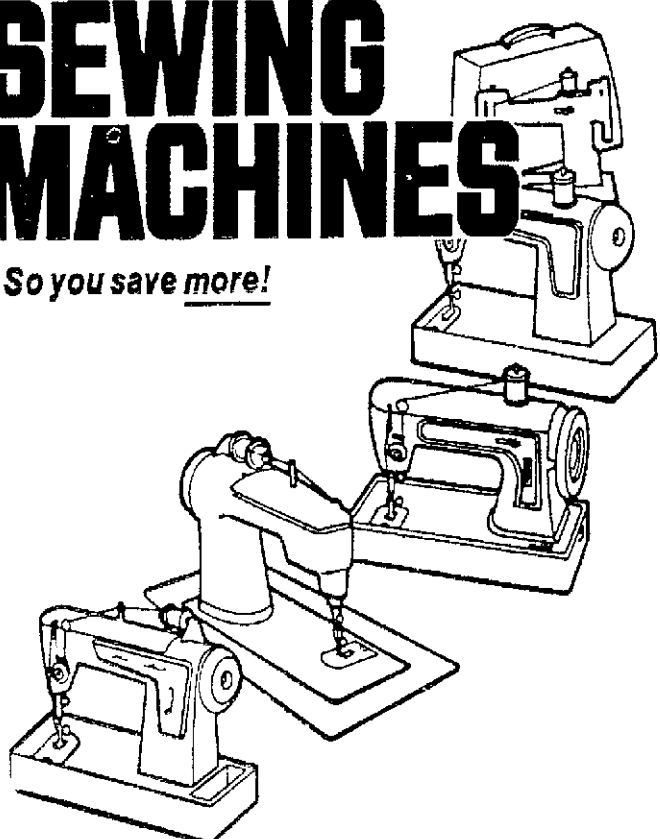

After a Brisk and Breezy Autumn Day, come home and snuggle up by the fire in this cozy wool boucle jumper. Pockets, collar and front are punctuated with stitching detail. The turtleneck shirt is of washable crepe.

A Long, Slim Vest of bonded wool jersey, jeans with detailed waist and fly stitching and a geometric print shirt are great for strolling through the woods.

Bridal Gowns Change Within Traditional Look

The traditional full-length white gown donned by brides for their journey down the aisle to life happily ever after is as predictable as the sun, moon and stars, even for the mini-clad hopefuls of the now generation.

The changes take place within the scope of the traditional prerequisite — the long white gown.

The season-to-season fashion determinant in traditional bridal gowns may be an inspiration from past or present.

Thus guests at autumn weddings may rise to honor brides drifting down the aisle in yards of billowing lace, topped by a bolero effect — the inspiration, today's gypsy fashions.

Inspiration From Past
Again, the center of attention may be a modern medieval bride whose gown displays a low scooped neckline, long snug sleeves and high close bodice releasing into fluid folds of floor-length crepe, or a neo-Renaissance bride whose richly embroidered or brocaded gown has bell or bishop sleeves and a stand-away collar — inspiration, the past.

Another way of achieving the now touch for her traditional wedding gown might be as simple as the use of this-season detailing or her own accessorizing ideas — her diamond wedding jewelry, for instance.

A look at this-season details indicates that bridal necklines may be either the low scoop or the high-rise collar — the mandarin, the circlet and the standaway.

Accessories Feature Variety
Important sleeves include the bishop, the bell and a hint of the leg o' mutton. Long, snug sleeves often have Edwardian or bracelet cuffs.

Embroidery trims many gowns fashionably. It is lavish on lace, and sometimes in pink or blue thread as well as white.

Among bridal accessories, too, changes may be noted. Autumn's bride is less likely to dance in a plain white silk pump. Instead, her choice might be low-heeled slippers decorated with buckles or bows and perhaps brocaded, beaded or embroidered.

Headpieces show great variety. Some are hat-like in the form of the cloche, pillbox, fez or baby cap.

Making Your Child's Hospital Stay a More Pleasant One

The problems of hospitalized pre-school children, whether they stay is short for surgery, such as a tonsillectomy, or longer for a variety of ailments, have not received the attention they deserve. Many hospitals do not seem sensitive to the shock suffered by small children due to sudden separation from home and mother.

A detailed 1959 British study, based on the work of Dr. John Bowlby, showed that many, if not most, small children suffer severely from such separation. And a survey re

A detailed 1959 British study, based on the work of Dr. John Bowlby, showed that many, if not most, small children suffer severely from such separation. And a survey reported in the May, 1969, issue of the "American Journal of Diseases of Children" indicates the desirability of pre-hospitalization preparation, consideration of the child's home life, and opportunities for mothers to sleep in the same room with a young child who requires hospitalization.

Some pediatric hospitals now have unlimited visiting hours for parents. Others allow mothers to stay overnight with a sick child. But in too many instances, such enlightened practices are only available to private patients, and the mother often must sleep in a chair. Some hospitals offer mother and child counseling on what to expect, and take an inventory of the child's home life and habits, before his admission. Most do not. And often these services and practices are only available to those knowledgeable enough to ask for or demand them.

It has been found conclusively that such practices alleviate the natural fears of the child and help speed his recovery. The mother's presence can also reduce the workload of nurses, who are in short supply. One study shows that a "motel" type of hospital for children has substantially reduced the demands of the nursing staff. Needless to say, opportunities to help look after their small children can only be granted mothers who do not panic or become overwrought when their babies suffer pain, and those who are willing to observe hospital and medical rules.

Some doctors and nurses object to such "coddling" of children. They claim that children left in hospitals without their mothers soon settle down and accept the hospital routine without evident fear. But the research indicates that this supposed acceptance is only a fatalistic despair to which children eventually surrender. This frequently causes severe psychological problems that only surface after the child's return to his home.

You should acquaint yourself with local hospitals' practices in regard to child care. If they fail to incorporate most of those outlined above, you can petition the hospital board, doctors and nurses to adapt to what is known to benefit children, parents and our hospitals.

If you are interested in and wish to know more about this subject, I recommend the book, "Hospitals and Children," by James Robertson (International Universities Press, N.Y., $4.00. It makes fascinating reading for parents, as well as for professionals.

Muskie and Nelson Suggested for 1972 By State Democrats

BY JOHN AND TIM WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Staff Writers
MADISON — Wisconsin Democrats are playing slate-making games that extend far beyond the statehouse.

They are looking forward to the 1970 elections in the state, of course, but they are looking to the presidential sweepstakes of 1972 as well.

And with increasing frequency, they are starting to suggest that a very possible Democratic vice presidential nominee in that year may be Wisconsin's Sen. Gaylord Nelson.

They aren't so sure that Nelson doesn't realize it as well.

They point to the fact that his staff is being increased with the addition of assistants drawn from a broader background than just Wisconsin politics.

They point to the fact that his speaking schedule has picked up considerably, and is taking him to appearances before audiences throughout the country.

And looking at a map of the nation, they have the hunch that the geography may be right for Nelson in 1972.

If the current front runner, Sen. Edmund Muskie, cops the Democratic nod in 1972, the party and the candidate will look westward for a running mate, the state Democrats suggest.

Nelson is youthful, energetic, well-schooled in government through two decades of service that led him through the governor's chair to the U. S. Senate — and linked with popular issues such as auto safety, drug prices and conservation, they point out.

If Nelson makes it to the ticket, he would be the first state representative of a major political group on the presidential ballot since Robert M. LaFollette, Sr. ran for president almost a half century ago.

State Secretary of Administration Wayne McGown has notified officials of the state of New York that he won't be available to take a new position being created.

McGown had been offered a chance to head a new legislative budget control agency in the eastern state, as was reported here recently.

But within the past few days he notified New York officials that he will not be available for the $35,000-a-year job — a post that could have raised his salary by about $10,000.

McGown is sticking out the on-going battle between the legislature and Gov. Warren P. Knowles over proposed spending programs for welfare and Milwaukee's Inner Core.

New York had wanted an answer by October, and McGown is unlikely to be finished up by then.

The State Higher Educational Aids Board has been troubled throughout its fairly short history with a seemingly high rate of default on the state and federal loan programs it administers for college students.

Its staff has drawn more than its share of criticism from members of the state board, and from lawmakers, for this rate of non-payment of the low-cost loan programs which total into the millions of dollars.

But recently the staff took a very direct approach to solving the problem.

The addition of two professional bill collectors to the expanding staff of the HEAB has been approved, and soon they will be pursuing non-paying recipients of the loans — with an added boost in funds available for relending, it is hoped.

Some University of Wisconsin Regents will be watching carefully this month to see whether The Daily Cardinal, the controversial campus daily in Madison, makes its first payment of rent to the school.

Last January, in a fit over the use of four-letter words in the student-run newspaper which claims to be independent of the school, the Regents approved the charging of rent, effective with the start of the fall semester.

That comes within the next few days — and the state has established the worth of the Cardinal quarters in the UW building as totaling $3,000 per year.

That works out to be a $250-a-month rental charge for one use of the offices.

The Cardinal in that Regent decision was given the choice of paying the rent or moving off the campus. Given the probable Regent reaction to the disputed "unorientation" edition of the student newspaper prepared for all new UW students, some of the Regents can be expected to be watching for the arrival of that rent check quite carefully.

The recent appointment of David Adamany as dean of Wesleyan University in Connecticut is not expected to keep him out of state politics.

The former member of the Public Service Commission, and youthful advisor to Gov. John Reynolds and Lt. Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, can be expected to be back in Wisconsin for Lucey's planned 1970 campaign for the governorship.

Until the promotion at Wesleyan came up, Adamany, a Green Bay native, holder of a Harvard law degree and University of Wisconsin doctorate, had planned on joining the UW staff in Milwaukee to teach political science.

Instead, he will maintain his ties with the private eastern school, yet manage to be in the state on an almost fulltime basis next year for the campaign.

When former Secretary of State Dean Rusk spoke last month at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, state reporters got an object lesson in how open Wisconsin government is — in comparison to conditions elsewhere.

Rusk sent an official to ask reporters to agree to reporting the former Secretary's speech, but not answers to questions put to him by the audience at a banking seminar.

The reporters, used to working under Wisconsin's anti-secrecy law, would not agree.

During the course of the answers, however, Rusk attempted to go "off the record" several times.

"I don't want to read this in tomorrow's newspapers," he announced from the lectern.

The inference was that there was something he could say to 800 banking officials that he couldn't say to the American public.

His comments were fully reported, despite his preface.

You will have to pardon Sen. Robert P. Knowles if he wonders aloud a bit these days.

To coincide with his appointment by President Nixon to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, the Republican state senator from New Richmond received a handsome, a sizable, hand-written certificate to hang on his office wall.

Signed by the President, it proclaims that Knowles has Moscow University is an immense, almost overwhelming building, in a "sort of nightmare gothic," constructed between 1949 and 1953. It stands on a sprawling, flat site near the Lenin Hills which overlook Moscow. Standing before it is a statue of Mikhail Lomonosov (1711-1765), the founder of the university, which is regarded as Russia's showplace of higher education. (APN Photo) been appointed to the prestigious post, and proclaims that he may serve "at the pleasure of the President of the United States for the time being."

Visitors to his office have questioned whether the final qualifying phrase in the sentence refers to Knowles' appointment — or the tenure of the President.

Traditional Image Fades

Soviet Education Selective, Oriented Toward the Sciences

BY GARVEN HUDGINS

AP Education Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The traditional image of educational egalitarianism in Russia is beginning to fade as the Soviets concentrate on producing a select academic elite.

The shift is reflected in stiff entrance exams for Russia's showplace of higher education, on to the academic heights and Moscow State University, and to other institutes of higher learning around the country.

For example, applicants to Moscow State University this past summer underwent a grueling, 20-day oral and written examination period. Most of the 20 days were spent in intensive preparation at the university for four exams in the natural sciences and four in the humanities.

It's a weeding-out process which naturally leaves casualties behind and is a far cry from the days when applicants with good jobs in factories or on the farms got automatic preference in the universities.

Prof. Anatoli Ivanovich Bogomolov, chief of the Methods Department for Higher Institutions in the Ministry of Education, them to try again later at some comments: "There is heavy competition today for the best levels of education and if you take an average, you will see that there are three applications for every opening in institutions of higher learning across the country.

"We can't just depend on the average student in the future. In a group, even if there is only one talented student, he must get the training his abilities deserve."

To Top of Pile

The new emphasis on academic excellence in Soviet higher education draws to the top of the pile the nation's best students. Incentives for them to go to the academic heights and to achieve are numerous and attractive.

The state, for example, pays the total cost of a higher education for students who are

University students also get free medical and dental care. Dormitories are free and all university students are paid a stipend by the state ranging from the equivalent of $35 to $110 monthly.

The shift in Soviet higher education does not mean that students who cannot keep up with the top academic pace are discarded. Nor are those young people who work in factories or in farm labor.

"For those students who fail or who didn't make it to the university this year, there are special courses which will enable them to try again later at some other institution," Bogomolov explains.

"A young man or woman may want to go to work to help support a family, and we have set up a vast system of state-supported evening and correspondence courses for them. We are working to develop this more widely, so that a young person may have the opportunity to work and to gain a higher education at the same time."

The government provides incentives for this kind of educational training, too, and will pay for a worker's time off — up to one month yearly — to give him a chance to prepare for exams in correspondence and evening classes.

"This time off is not in place of his regular, paid annual vacation."

Covering the Coat Scene

There's Nothing Like a Plaid Coat to give a peppy new lift to the fall wardrobe. And lift it does, in more ways than one, when mohair adds its remarkable buoyancy, along with its vibrant colors and rich textures. Anne Fogarty uses Berroco's weightless mohair blend plaid in this dashing coat with its sash-tied belt, wide flung collar and free-stride hem.

Dimensional White brocade and white mink are combined by Belle Saunders of Abe Schrader to create an elegant theatre costume.

The Storm Coat swings into fall in a striking new Raincheetah version by Naman, topped with magnificent face-framing furry raccoon collar.

Collarless, Raglan-Sleeved and snugly belted, the vanilla and ranch brown shag coat above is a fun-loving "fur-real" fashion from North Bay by Arthur Doctor.

Geoffrey Beene executes a trench coat in black, brown and white tweed with oversized patch pockets and beautifully shaped wing-tipped collar.

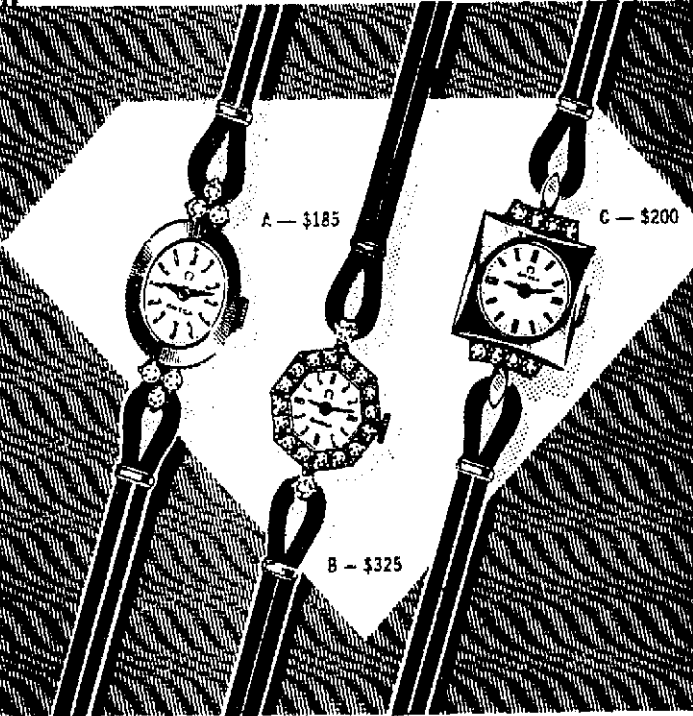

Newer This Fall than the animal prints are the reptile patterns as seen here in a python-printed velveteen Raincheetah by Naman. The weather treated coat's abstract pattern comes in white brown or black and white.

Mood to Dictate Mode of Dress

Because of the wide range of choices available this fall, a woman can achieve just about any look she desires.

Her mood of the moment will dictate her mode of dressing. She may opt for classics such as the shirt-waist and the princess coatdress or she may prefer the free-moving lines of a flippy pleated-skirt dress with interest at the hipline.

Whatever her style preference, she is sure to find it this season.

The shape of fall is the shape that moves whether it is spare or full, mini, midi-, or maxi-length. It calls for soft, supple fabrics such as jersey, challis or nylon knits.

The limp, slithery shape is most often accompanied by a long sleeve — sometimes full blown, sometimes extra skinny but always right down to the wrist.

Necklines move up to turtles and mockturtles, shirred cowls and shirtcollars that are tiny and ladylike or narrowly pointed and cut to lie flat.

Flyaway scarves are seen everywhere — worn Isadora Duncan-like, swathed about the throat, tossed over shoulders or wrapped around waistlines. The scarf serves in as many ways as the wearer's ingenuity can muster.

Back on the scene is the little black dress which has changed its image. Once it was basic in any well-dressed woman's wardrobe. Now, the little black dress stars in its own right. It's quite elegant in velvet, satin, lame, brocade and see-through velvet.

Fall colors tend to be subtle and dark. Wine and bottle green are much in evidence. Some lighter shades will be around, too, but they will have a dusty cast — dusty rose, ash blue, dusty green, taupe and ivory.

A Soft, Fluid Crepe with pleats that spring into motion from R&K Originals softly molds the body along fashion's new ultra feminine route. Below, Adele Martin's flip-collared wool knit is marvelously shirty in shape but has the added dash of a self-buttoned plunge-to-where-you-will neckline. The dress adds the plus of full sleeves and a matching sash belt to wear or not according to your mood.

A Perfect Background Dress, the beige shadow ribbed wool, above, was designed by George Nardiello of Rona. It has a high arched yoke and a row of delicately carved gold buttons. Below, Geoffrey Beene interprets this princess dress with deep pleats and a high muffled look. It is done in a neutral colored tweed.

Great Variety Found in Fabrics For Fall Season

Fall fabrics are plushy or crisp, supple and shiny, see-through sheer or boldly surfaced.

In the way of wools and wool blends, there is an added emphasis on the textured look. Fabrics are being brushed and raised to create touchable textures, but without the knobby look.

Mohair, angora and cashmere add their luxurious touch. Among the plushies, too, are velours, fleeces, velvets and corduroys. And those fabulous fakes, the furry piles, have special importance.

Plaids take the bold road, with big patterns and brushed or dimensional surfaces. Tweeds move in novel directions, showing herringbone stripes and other unusual effects.

From the Boys

Crisp, borrowed-from-the-boys fabrics continue as classics—gabardines, twills, glens—but even these have softer surfaces. Tweedy glens and supple flannels are in this category.

Supple is the word for drapable fabrics, from knits and jerseys to crepes. Velvet, too, is newly supple when it appears as panne velvet, characterized by a new lightness and a shimmering appearance.

Shimmer, glimmer and shine show up in all sorts of fabrics. The wet look, the satiny look and the shiny look are widely on display.

Metallics thread their way through brocades and other fabrics for still more glimmer-shimmer.

Knits Have It

For evening, see-through sheers offer glamour in plenty. Chiffons, georgettes and organzines join in. For daytime, voile becomes a fall fabric of interest.

Sheer or shiny, supple or surfaced—whatever the texture, knits have it. They're threaded with metallics to shine by night, and some are so fine-textured, they're almost see-throughs. Other knits range in texture from smooth to bold.

Corduroy, like velvet, has texture variety. It's traditionally plushy, but this fall it also appears in newly flat-tended versions which are ribless.

Prints vary from patchwork, provincial and gypsy motifs to tapestry designs, jacquards and geometrics. Paisley is present, as are foulards and border prints.

In the plaid category, argyle attains importance.

Hosiery Tells Colorful Story

Hosiery is more than hosiery this fall, in body stockings, with or without sleeves, to double as sweaters; in pantyhose, showing every color; in detachables, the stockings that link up with foundations, and in knee socks.

Legginess is sheer, opaque or subtly patterned a la art deco. But the most important leg story is color.

The colored stocking may be black or white, strong gold or bright red, or new wines and roses, or any of a number of hues, according to the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers.

Knee cap bared or body covered, stockings of all sorts take to color.

For day there is bottle green, with all its close cousins, and for evening, pale misty green. Knee highs, thigh highs and pantyhose take to rusty and bronze and terra cotta shades.

Plum, lavender, frankly purple and all the grapes color fall hosiery in vintage fashion. Camel, cream, gray, vicuna call themselves neutrals, but their fashion opinion is clearly stated.

The natural or nude look gives way to a hint of color.

Evening hues include shades of rosy dawn, pale rose, pale yellow, almost mauve. And basic are shades of chocolate or air force blue.

Ghosts' Aerial Game Topples Pennings, 21-16

BY ED VAN BERKEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

KAUKAUNA — Capitalizing on two long aerials of 71 and 66 yards, the Galloping Ghosts opened the grid season here Saturday with a 21-16 non-league win over De Pere Abbot Pennings.

After a close first quarter lead to 21-8 with 5:37 left in the final period following a 28-yard 71-yard scoring pass from Karl Mueller to Dave Deering aerial by Dan Romenesko, with about eight minutes left in the second period. Deering out-distanced two pursuers in his race for the goal line which came immediately after a 15-yard penalty which apparently had the Ghosts in a hole. Paul Fassbender kicked the PAT.

Pennings fought back to take a brief lead with less than two minutes remaining in the third frame. The score came on a 1-yard pass from Remy Stephenson to Mike Reed after Kaukauna had held for four yards on three running plays. A 2-point pass conversion from Stephenson to Marc Bilotti boosted Pennings into the lead.

Following the kickoff, a mixup in the Kaukauna backfield resulted in a fumble and 10-yard loss. Once again the Mueller to Deering pass clicked, this time for a 66-yard score. Deering hurlted the last defender to get into the end zone. An offside on the kick for point permitted Kaukauna to try a 2-point running play. LeRoy Wenzel produced to give the Ghosts back the lead with 23 seconds remaining in the quarter.

The winners boosted their lead to 21-8 with 5:37 left in the final period following a 28-yard march set up by a pilfered aerial by Dan Romenesko. Sharp passing by Mueller and hard running by Fassbender and Wenzel carried the Ghosts in for the score, despite a 15-yard penalty.

Pennings came right back to march 80 yards for the score following the kickoff. Key plays in the march were passes of 17 and 11 yards from Stephenson to Harold Rottier.

Hard Running
Strong running by Tim Franken, Evan Schuh and Tom Thompson complimented the march which saw Franken tally from one yard out with just under three minutes left in the game. Stephenson hit John Anderson with an aerial for the 2-point conversion.

Stephenson showed good ability to pick receivers all afternoon and Mueller proved he could use the pass as a valuable asset when needed. Both teams appeared tight with penalties, one resulting in a lost TD for Pennings, and fumbles accounted for several stopped drives.

Playing their roles as Fox "I" formation — it was on River Valley conference title defense that the Cards really favorites to the hit, Fond du Lac's Cardinals FRVC defensively last season, wallowed Appleton West, 37-6, at got off to a winning start by Witte Field Saturday to spoiling the Terrors without a the Terror coaching debut of first down and restricting them Paul Engen.

Jerry Kosterman, successor AHS-W was unable to handle at tailback to the inimitable Jim Fondy's charging king-sized DeBond, scored on runs of nine fenders either on the rush and four yards. The Fondy defense also set up three of the six touchdowns with two fumble recoveries and a blocked punt. Werner's TD for which the relentless Cards be-AHS-W, obviously, was scored trayed a weakness was in against the Cardinal offensive conversions. They missed a pair unit.

The Terror defensive unit — led by Jeff Day, Mike Wallen, Steve Schwark converted from Werner, Dan Bodway and Jerry placement after the final TD. Noack — also earned the respect of the powerful Cardinals.

The Terrors averted a shutout on a number of occasions. AHS-W bounced back spiritedly from pass shortly before half-time its 24-6 halftime deficit and held and raced 39 yards to score. Fondy scoreless for the first While Fond du Lac was 19½ minutes of the second half

Hart Scores Twice Fox Valley Defeats Southern Door, 18-8

BRUSSELS — Fox Valley Lutheran scored single touch-downs in the first, third and fourth quarters to defeat Southern Door, 18-8, in a non-conference football opener Saturday afternoon.

The Foxes scored first when Bill Lecker hit Bob Hart on a 43-yard touchdown pass in the initial frame. Fox Valley missed its first of three extra point tries.

Hart scored the second touchdown on an 18-yard run early in the third period. Again the extra point attempt failed. Clayton Gardiner ran seven yards into the end zone. A run for the final score in the fourth period. The Foxes' extra point try was apparently good, but it was called back because of an offside penalty. The second attempt was no good.

The Foxes rolled up 134 yards rushing and 76 passing compared to Southern Door's 56 yards on the ground and 12 through the air. The winners held a 9-3 first down edge.

Southern Door's only score came in the second quarter when Mike Baudhuin picked up a Foxes' fumble and ran 25 yards into the end zone. A run for the two-point conversion was successful.

Kenosha Team Wins, 43-0

Zephyrs No Match For St. Joseph '11'

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer
MENASHA — Kenosha St. Joseph, a Milwaukee Catholic Conference powerhouse, improved its already high ranking Saturday with a lopsided 43-0 win over St. Mary's of Menasha in the season opener for both teams.

From the minute Kenosha stopped the Zephyrs on their opening series of downs and marched 51 yards for the games' first score with just over six minutes left in the first quarter, there was little doubt who would win the ball game.

With a powerful offense, led by seasoned quarterback Ed Nowell and hard-running Rock Jurvis, the Lancers came away at halftime with a 21-0 lead and a 230-8 yard lead over Menasha in net yardage gained.

If Menasha fans were hoping for something different in the second half, they were quickly disappointed when Kenosha marched 63 yards in less than three minutes to score six of the eventual 22 points they added in the period to put icing on an already sweet-tasting cake.

Player Injured
The only setback for Lancer fans came in the closing minutes of play when Ed Mike Wood suffered a head injury and was rushed by ambulance to Theda Clark Hospital.

The injury was reportedly not serious, although Wood underwent tests at the hospital Saturday afternoon.

The game's heroics all belonged to Kenosha, and included two touchdown passes by Nowell, one to Jurvis and another to end Paul Pulera.

Another scoring aerial was thrown by strong back - up quarterback Dennis Serpe.

Menasha didn't notch a first down until there was less than one minute left in the first half. The Zephyrs gained only eight total yards in the half.

The Lancers' first score came on a 20-yard pass from Nowell to Jurvis. They scored four minutes later when fullback Brian Portillia smashed through from the 17-yard line. They scored again with 10:17 left in the second quarter when Jurvis went in from five yards out to make the score 21-0 after Nowell ran around right end for a two-point conversion.

28-Yard Scoring Run
In the second half, Nowell struck like lightning when he carried the ball around right end, reversed to the left and went 28 yards for a score.

A two-point conversion by Jurvis made it 29-0.

The next score came seconds after the big play of the game, which featured a 68-yard run by Jurvis, who broke through the middle and ran from his own 24 to St. Mary's five-yard line before being hauled down in a desperation tackle by back Loren Miller.

Two plays later, Nowell threw a jump pass to Pulera for the score, and a two-point conversion by Portillia made it 37-0.

The final score came after Kurt Hannes intercepted a pass from Menasha quarterback Jeff Britzke and ran it back to Menasha's 16-yard line. The 6-point came on a three-yard pass from Serpe to Pulera.

Britzke, in his first game as a starter, was hampered all day by a tight pass defense that benefitted from an equally fine pass rush by the Lancers' front four.

Britzke led the offense with 26 yards gained on the ground, but he had two passes intercepted late in the game to stop potential scoring drives.

Kimberly Quarterback Dan Blajeski fires a pass over the outstretched hands of Little Chute St. John defender Terry Johnson (left) in the first half of their game at Little Chute Saturday. The Chuters Stymied

Chuters Stymied

Kimberly Wins, 30-0

BY JIM HARP
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

LITTLE CHUTE — After a scoreless first half, Kimberly High School turned two fumble recoveries and two pass interceptions into touchdowns to hand Little Chute St. John a 30-0 defeat in the football season opener for both teams here Saturday afternoon.

Actually, Kimberly had a narrow 6-0 lead with under 10 minutes left in the game, before the tide turned completely in favor of the Papermakers.

The victory gives Kimberly a string of three straight wins over the Dutchmen who found themselves halted by a sputtering offense and stout Papermaker defense which yielded yards grudgingly.

Kimberly Takes Over
Kimberly's defense harassed St. John quarterback Jeff Jansen all afternoon, giving him little time to set up on pass plays and dumping him for losses on six occasions.

After being stymied for the first 23 minutes of the opening half, Kimberly took over on the St. John 37 after a short punt.

Two running plays by Tim Vander Velden and an incomplete pass put the ball on the 30 with fourth down coming up and only seconds showing on the clock.

Kimberly quarterback Dan Blajeski stepped back and tossed a pass to his favorite target, Gary Wyngard, who fought to the 1-yard line before he was stopped as the half ended.

The Papermakers threatened early in the third period when they recovered a St. John fumble on the 30, but a fourth down pass was intercepted by Terry Huiting of St. John on the 11. On the first play from scrimmage, the Papermakers latched on to another Chuter fumble on the nine.

This time Blajeski lost no time in putting the Papermakers on the board as he hit Wyngard in the corner of the end zone on the first play for the TD. Mike Weiland's try for the point from placement was wide.

Kimberly held the 6-0 lead until 9:53 remained in the game when the Papermakers recovered another fumble on the Chuter 35. Speedy Steve Van Hout gained seven around end and Vander Velden bulled his way for nine to the 19. On a fourth-down play, Blajeski dropped back and tossed a high aerial which Wyngard hauled in behind a St. John defender for another TD. Vander Velden ran the ball over for a 2-point conversion to make it 14-0.

Set Back By Penalty
St. John came back and drove to near midfield before being set back by a 15-yard penalty. Don Koller then intercepted a pass on the 48 and scampered untouched down the sidelines for the third Kimberly touchdown. Vander Velden again ran the point over to make it 22-0.

With 5:30 left in the contest, pint-sized Tom Aerts picked off an errant St. John pass on the 48 and reversed his field 79 yards. He picked up a host of blockers and went into the end zone unmolested. Ralph Kalies broke through the line on a run for the 2-point conversion.

Van Hout was the top ground gainer of the game as he picked up 68 yards on 14 carries. Fullback Vander Velden had 39 yards for the Papermakers in 13 tries.

For St. John, which failed to penetrate inside the Kimberly 40 all afternoon, Leon Biesterfeld picked up 50 yards on 14 carries.

at Witt's End

BY RON WITT
Post-Crescent Golf Editor

This weekend is the final big one of the season in the state as far as major golf tournaments are concerned.

The Wisconsin Public Links meet being held in De Pere, the Cherryland affair in Door County, and the Fox Cities Pro-Am Monday at Reid Muni in Appleton will all but put the wraps on the 1969 campaign.

It has been a tremendous year for golfers from the Fox Valley, no matter how these last tournaments come out.

Appleton's Mary Beth Nienhaus claimed her second straight Wisconsin Women's Amateur title, and Kaukauna's Pete Benson was spectacular in the men's amateur ranks, winning the Adler Brau, Appleton, Fox Cities, and Northeastern championships.

Fond du Lac's Bob Ellis racked up the Northeastern 69. Ted Donker came in with a Open crown, and Green Bay's Ed Langert topped the field in the State PGA tourney.

It was probably a better than average year, too, in terms of the weather. The monsoons in May gave way to plenty — if not too much — sunshine the rest of the summer, especially in the abnormally dry month of August.

Because golf will now taper off as the summer wanes, this "At Witt's End" will be the last of the year.

Let me express my personal thanks to you, the readers, who have cooperated to make this column a success in its first try.

Good swinging, and see you next year.

John Manier romped to his fourth consecutive club championship at North Shore Labor Day, beating Tom Hoffmaster, 10 and 8, in a scheduled 36-hole match play duel. Manier had defeated Chuck Besser, and Hoffmaster had topped Trip Smith in the semi-finals.

In special events at NS, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McGowan turned in a low net score of 142 to win the mixed championship. Sweepstakes winners included John Schmerem, Chuck Buchanan, and Sal Ciancola in classes A, B, and C, respectively.

A husband and wife tournament is being held today at the Fox Valley Golf Club. A record 84 couples are entered in the event in which Don and Irene Peters are defending champs.

Pete Benson's 72 took low honors for the week at Fox Valley. Following were Leo Bronkalla, 74; Tom Hanby, 75; Dan Wildenberg Sr., 76; Jim Green, Joe Ball, and Orv Tracy, 79.

Palmer Plans Return to Tour

Eyes Sahara Test In Five Weeks If Hip Is Improved

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Arnold Palmer said today he plans to make his return to competitive golf in five weeks at the Sahara Invitational in Las Vegas.

"I really want to play," Palmer said. "I'll continue with the treatments I'm now taking and if it all comes along I'll agree to make Sahara the first tournament."

Palmer abandoned the tour at the PGA championship about five weeks ago to take treatments for bursitis in his right hip.

"I won't play again until this thing heals properly," he asserted at the time. He pulled out of the PGA after shooting a first round 82, his poorest score in years.

Out 3 Times

"I've only played three times since then," he said. "Two were in exhibitions and one was just a friendly round."

"I have no plans for any extensive playing, but I may play a few rounds from time to time."

He said he plans to play in Chicago on Wednesday, but "it all depends on how I'm feeling. If it doesn't feel right, well, I just won't play."

Palmer is in Akron to serve as television commentator for the World Series of Golf, a 36-hole event Saturday and Sunday matching the winners of the world's four major titles.

Johnson Sparks Winneconne to 40-0 Triumph

WINNECONNE — Quarterback Mike Johnson ran for 79 yards, passed for 101 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead Winneconne to a 40-0 Little Nine Conference opening win over Wrightstown Saturday afternoon.

Johnson ran seven times, hit four of five passes and scored a first-period touchdown on a one-yard plunge and sped 28 yards for a second-quarter score. He also had a two-point conversion after the first TD.

Randy Kasuboski took a 26-yard scoring pass from Johnson in the second frame to cap a five-play, 46-yard drive. The extra point failed. Mark Berndt intercepted a Wrightstown pass and returned it 32 yards for another second quarter score.

Larry Volp scored from the one end to end a 48-yard drive in the third period. A 32-yard run by Darwin Koneman set up the touchdown. Koneman scored the final six-pointer on a five yard run. Johnson hit Mike Lee in Steffens; Slim Otto's, Charles; the end zone for the conversion. Wichmann and Rick Huisman; after Koneman's score.

Wittmann's Jim Stepanski; The winners held a 320-82 Coated Paper, Paul Meier; Slip & Dar's, Ron Plamann; Miller Electric, John Peters; Bleier's, with Koneman leading the ground Ray Heinritz, Allis Chalmers, with 119 yards in nine attempts. Wrightstown got 40 yards rushing and 42 passing.

Lovelace Top Hitter Eddy and Johnson Win 3 Pitching Titles

Two of the big reasons the Appleton Foxes won the Midwest League baseball title this year were left-handed hurler Don Eddy and right-hander Bart Lovelace.

The best 1-2 punch in the league, the two pitchers combined for 34 wins against only seven defeats.

Eddy (18-3) ended the season with a 1.81 earned run average and 18 victories — both best in the league. Johnson (16-4) topped all pitchers with 200 strikeouts.

Burlington's Sam Lovelace crept ahead of Wisconsin Rapids' Bob Wissler to capture the league batting title in the final unofficial figures released by the Howe News Bureau. Lovelace went from .312 last week to .315, while Wissler slipped slightly to .313 from .316.

The final statistics also show Appleton tied for first in both club hitting and fielding. The Foxes shared the top hitting spot with Waterloo and Decatur all at .252. Burlington and Clinton tied with Appleton in the fielding department with .960 averages.

Raises Average

Mark Marquess collected 12 hits in his final 29 times at bat to raise his average from .302 to .317 as he finished on top of the individual Foxes percentages. He was the only Appleton batter to hit better than .300. George Hunter was next with .290.

Eddy, in leading the league pitchers, hurled 164 innings, giving up 33 earned runs, walking just 41 while fanning 140. Johnson worked 170 innings, walking 59 and had a 2.17 ERA.

Quad Cities' Jerry Feldman topped the league with 83 runs. Ted Parks, Waterloo, finished best with 126 hits, 181 total bases and 25 doubles, tied with Jim Clark of Burlington.

Wissler and Quincy's Chris Barkulis shared the home run crown with 18 each. Leo Mazzone, who was runner-up to Johnson with 151 strikeouts, led

Ripon Edges Seymour '11' In Opener

SEYMOUR — Ripon used a 2-point conversion to upend Seymour, 8-6, Friday in a non-conference football opener.

Ripon immediately retaliated when Hun Beier hit Sherman Leatherberry with a 55-yard scoring bomb late in the quarter. Paul Searl added the margin of victory as he plunged for the 2-point conversion.

Ripon collected a 251-142 total air while Seymour gained 27.

Honest Abe
Look-Alike
Is Celebrity

Every Resemblance
Astounds Friends,
Delights Mr. Abram

PLAINVILLE, Conn. (AP) — Friedrich Carl Abram has a mole on

The mole is remarkable only because Abraham Lincoln also had a mole on his right cheek,
and Abram looks almost exactly
like Abraham.

The 60-year-old officer worker decided to grow a Lincolnian
beard for a centennial celebration in this quiet town in June.
That decision has made life an unexpected adventure.

"We were nearly mobbed on our first day at Mt. Rushmore," relates Abram, who returned recently with his wife from a vacation trip across the northern states and into Canada.

"In New Salem, Ill., people
spotted me even when I was driving the station wagon
through town. They would shout: 'Hey, Abe! How're you doing today?' Then they followed me into shops, grocery stores, everywhere."

At Mt. Rushmore, where Lincoln's visage is cut into stone
with those of four other presidents, college students gathered around the Plainville couple,
taking photos and asking questions.

Abram's similarity to the lanky 16th president is not a new discovery. The town fathers chose him more than 50 years ago as an eighth-grader to read
the Gettysburg Address at a Memorial Day ceremony.

But the heads really began to turn last March when friends at the ball-bearing plant office
where he works talked him into growing a beard.

Abram is tall and slim, just
two inches short of Lincoln's 6-foot-4 frame. His face is angular, not as dark as Lincoln's but heavily lined about the mouth in the same way. Thick eyebrows
and a prominent forehead help
fill out the image.

The beard completed the likeness—one so strong that Abram himself wonders.

"I don't believe in reincarnation. But there are so many similarities that sometimes I'm not
so sure," he says.

The resemblance of Abram to the traditional portraits of Lincoln give new acquaintances a strange feeling of being taken back 100 years. And the similarities continue beyond the visual aspect.

Take Mrs. Abram, for example. Her name is Marion; Mrs.
Lincoln was Mary. Abram was born in 1909 and Lincoln in 1809.
Both wore a size 7½ hat. Both men sired only sons—the Abrams have two and the Lin-
colns had two at the same stage
in life, although two others died
at young ages.

Abram has a standing invitation to live in Springfield, Ill.,
any time he wishes.

"They wanted me to walk the streets of Springfield at midnight as Lincoln was supposed to have done," he says. But the
short stop, not because they weren't having the time of their lives but "because we couldn't stand the 100-degree heat."

Back at their white clapboard
house, Abram now answers to the name Linc instead of the customary Carl.

Nearly everyone in town was delighted to have a Lincoln in their 100-year celebration.
Abram became the star of the historical skit which went on every night, and he won the contest for Lincoln-style beards.

The only unappreciative comment he received came from a local policeman. The officer asked him to stay away from traffic while wearing his Lincoln tie and tails because he was causing accidents.

Abram says he doesn't plan to shave off the beard right away.
And with retirement coming up,
he and his wife have fun joking
about the possibility of a television appearance or a movie contract in Hollywood.

"He's getting too popular for me," Marion Abram adds with a smile. "All those glamorous
women..."

Soviet Education Selective, Oriented Toward the Sciences

education," Bogomolov says. "He gets that, too."

University-bound Soviet youth is continually reminded through the press, television and radio, and by massive public billboards, that the future belongs to science.

Stress Natural Science

The stress on natural sciences is going to be intensified by recent U.S. triumphs in space, which demonstrated a spectacular success for highly sophisticated American technology.

In fact, the whole Soviet trend toward a more selective educational process reflects Russia's overwhelming mission to become more competitive—and eventually superior—to advanced technological societies in the West.

Bogomolov explains that the worldwide "technical revolution" of the past two decades has created a deep need in the Soviet Union for a wide base of technically proficient people.

"It has been essential here to develop a base of technically trained people who could be distributed through all branches of the national economy," Bogomolov states.

"Everything that has happened in science has meant that we have had to train highly qualified workers and specialists to adapt the new skills and knowledge to each area of our national economy."

In the Soviet Union, Bogomolov says the aim in higher education is not just to produce a specialist with knowledge in a specific field.

"An engineer has to know physics, chemistry, mechanics, and electronics—not just engineering," he points out. "That is the way he is trained in the university."

Institutes of higher education, Bogomolov says, also offer broad training in the liberal arts. But these are studied from a particular point of view.

"Engineers, for example, will study liberal arts from the point of view of an engineer," Bogomolov says.

Psychology of Science

"This means he will not just study psychology, but he will study the psychology of engineering; he won't just study aesthetics, he will study the aesthetics of growing industrialization or of an individual industry," Bogomolov states.

"The main idea is to unify the educational and scientific processes. We're not interested in turning out just another professional in a particular field. What we are trying to do is turn out a truly creative professional."

Bogomolov is a large, friendly man who is accessible to callers in his office in the Ministry of Education in Moscow.

Above his desk is the ever-present photograph of Nikolai Lenin, and he speaks warmly of the collective idea which Lenin promulgated.

"We apply the principle of collectivism to the entire process of higher education," he explains. "To put it simply: it is the collective which must decide what problem—educational or involving student affairs—should come first. Then it can apply its full resources to the problem. Thus, we have much more than just one man working on one problem."

The obvious conclusion to be drawn is that the students, working as a collective, are given a great deal to say in the conduct of their affairs.

Bogomolov and the 33-year-old pro-rector of Moscow State University, chemist Vladimir Fedoseev, avow that this is the case.

Close Contacts

"We always want to support close contacts between students and professors," Bogomolov says. "We are convinced that the professor has to know everything about his students, including their wishes and desires so that he can be a counsellor and not just an instructor."

At Moscow State University, officials say, students have gained a decisive voice in administration.

Says Fedoseev: "This university is run by a council made up of faculty members, the rector and pro-rector of the institutions and the students."

"Students have the right of decision in the council. They have frequently reported on ways to improve the curriculum, and their suggestions have been adopted."

Fedoseev, who could pass for an American college football coach, thinks this kind of student involvement would help solve some of the student up- roars which have occurred in the United States.

"Maybe you Americans could use this method more widely to help solve the problem," he says with a smile.

Fedoseev points out that all Soviet university students are members of their own trade union.

In addition, he says, "90 per cent of the 20,000 students at Moscow State University are members of the huge, 24-million-member Komsomol, or Communist Youth League."

Through its tight reins on most phases of Soviet life affecting youth, the Komsomol has managed to prevent any large-scale student outbreaks such as those which have disrupted campuses in the United States and in other Western nations.

At least, there is no public evidence of any wide-scale student unrest in the USSR.

In Student Hands

Student affairs at Russian institutions of higher education appear to be in the hands of the students themselves.

For example, at Moscow State University, the Student Educational Commission distributes the cost-of-living stipends.

"The student commission has the last word," Fedoseev says. "It determines which students should get the lower payments and which students deserve more because of superior work. The commission also determines who will be awarded such prizes as the Lenin Stipend—$100 monthly for brilliant work."

If a student is to be suspended—for academic reasons or otherwise—the student commission decides whether he will go or get another chance.

"The commission absolutely has the final word," Fedoseev says.

In studies of the humanities, Soviet university students continue to receive the political and social indoctrination which no education official attempts to conceal.

An official government pamphlet on Soviet education states: "Social studies are closely linked to history . . . They deepen our understanding of the basic significance of our epoch, the essence of the general crisis that has gripped the capitalist world, the problems of international movements, the victories of socialism in our country and elsewhere . . ."

The revolutionary motif is repeated in huge murals at Moscow State University designed to portray victories of the masses over oppressors.

Aside from its enormous size, the university impresses through the continuous activity in its corridors, vestibules and student areas—even in midsummer.

Students have their own auditorium, a spacious chamber for the production of student theatrical and musical shows, as well as for rallies and meetings.

At every turn, visitors to the university are reminded of the importance of science in the Soviet educational system.

"Sixty per cent of the students here study natural sciences as a major," says pro-rector Fedoseev.

The regular undergraduate course of studies requires five years to complete in all Russian universities.

Moscow State University is coeducational, as are all Russian institutions of higher education. In many cases male and female students are housed on alternate floors of the same dormitory.

Married students are housed either in special dormitories or in off-campus apartments.

Except for the larger percentage of students from Asiatic Soviet republics, the students at Moscow State University resemble their counterparts elsewhere.

They tend to gather in knots in the corridors to chat, to laugh or to read periodicals sold at kiosks set up in student areas.

Young coeds are plainly dressed, go without makeup for the most part and seem to be loaded down with books. The miniskirt has not made the Moscow State scene.

There is an over-all air of serious purpose evident at Moscow State University and at other educational institutions in the capital.

Looking to the future of Soviet education, Bogomolov speaks with great feeling about the ideal sought in the new elitist educational system: "We want to develop students with self-reliance. We want students who are—and who will continue to be—self-starters, without any need for a professor to be standing over their shoulders to show them what to do."

It will be interesting, indeed, to see how this new breed of Soviet intellectual develops and how he will react to the hypersensitive, suspicious and secretive social and political system he will be called upon to serve.

Limit Bills — No One Has Many New Ideas

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — A Jackson lawmaker wants to limit the number of bills legislators can introduce because, he says, "I frankly haven't met anyone who has more than seven new ideas in any given year."

State Rep. Hal Ziegler, a Republican, tried unsuccessfully this year to limit legislators to introduction of 21 bills.

Undaunted, he says he intends to try again because "the legislative process is in danger of grinding to a halt."

Sociologists Tell Results of Study Of Strip-Teasers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The nation's 7,000 strip-tease dancers, on the average, were first-born and received little parental affection, especially from the father.

Two sociologists say they reached that conclusion after studying 119 strippers in nightclubs from Honolulu to New York. They also said they thought the girls began to display their bodies to gain attention they did not receive at home.

In most cases, they said, the father usually was away from home.

James J. Skipper Jr. and Charles H. McCaghy, sociology professors at Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland, reported on their study recently before 3,000 delegates to the American Sociology Association.

Compared with the average women between ages 20 and 30, they said, strippers are taller, heavier, have bigger hips and "extremely well developed busts."

Attack on Da Nang Followed by Series Of Battles in South

SAIGON (AP) — Three battles raged in the jungles north of Saigon Saturday on the second day of heavy enemy attacks across South Vietnam.

The bitter fighting came after enemy gunners shelled 40 allied bases and towns overnight, including the year's heaviest rocket and mortar attack against Da Nang and 15 U.S. military installations around the big base city in the north.

The sharpest engagements erupted about 75 miles north of Saigon, where the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment was engaged in two fights within a two-mile radius west of the provincial capital of Loc Ninh.

U.S. officers killed 67 North Vietnamese troops were killed in the two engagements. U.S. losses were one killed and 12 wounded as the Americans took advantage of their armor.

Mortar Barrage
The third battle was fought by the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division 55 miles north of Saigon, where its patrol base Jamie came under a 50-round mortar barrage.

The North Vietnamese then tried to overrun the small outpost but were thrown back, losing 24 killed, U.S. officers reported.

The defenders lost three killed and 18 wounded. The three battles were in an area that was the scene of the heaviest fighting when the Communist command kicked off its fall campaign Aug. 12 with big ground attacks and widespread shelling of bases and towns throughout South Vietnam.

300 Enemy Killed
In the second round of enemy attacks that began Friday allied forces estimate more than 300 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have been killed. U.S. losses were at least 35 killed and South Vietnamese losses were estimated at 68 dead.

In the overnight shelling, Da Nang and nearly every U.S. Marine installation in the area were hit by 140 enemy rockets and mortars.

At least 16 persons were killed and 155 wounded in the attacks. The dead were three U.S. Marines and 13 Vietnamese civilians, including seven children. Wounded were 120 Marines, 12 sailors and 23 Vietnamese civilians.

Ground Attacks
The three dead Marines and about half the total number of Americans wounded in the Da Nang attacks were prisoners or guards at a Marine brig about a mile west of the city.

U.S. headquarters said the shelling was accompanied by seven ground attacks, two less than on Friday.

Military spokesmen also reported that enemy gunners Friday and Saturday shot down three U.S. Army helicopters in areas ranging from 40 to 70 miles north of Saigon. One American crewman was killed and two others were wounded.

The destruction of the three helicopters lost to all U.S. helicopters lost to all causes in the war.

The secret Viet Cong radio said the new attacks were a response to the death Wednesday of President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam. The broadcast said the attacks were launched "to change sorrow into a revolutionary act after receiving the news of President Ho's death."

U.S. officers discounted this, saying captured documents and questioning of prisoners two weeks before Ho died told of a new round of attacks.

Belfast Barriers 'Voluntarily' Lowered

BELFAST, Northern Ireland three weeks, the army would across the river from the Falls who is Britain's youngest member of Parliament.

(AP) — The British army got provide protection against any Road district through the barricades of the invasion by the community's Roman Catholics' "Free Bel-Protestant rivals."

No move was made immediately against the scores of other barricades erected after last month's Catholic-Protestant rioting in which eight persons died.

The removal of the Albert Road barricade will allow the resumption of a bus route through the area.

But a return to normal traffic is becoming a matter of political urgency to assuage a Protestant majority which fears the Catholic vigilantes in control of Albert Street, the central traffic artery of the barricaded Falls Road area.

This was that the barricades would be removed "voluntarily" — with the help of army bulldozers. Then, with the road reopened for the first time in troubled East Belfast area, figure in the Catholic barricades suffer a similar fate.

Marijuana Report Urged for Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Public Health Service was urged by the new House committee on crime Saturday to prepare a thorough public report on the use of marijuana and its effects.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the House Select Committee on Crime, likened the need for such an inquiry to that which led to the landmark report on cigarettes, "Smoking and Health," issued in 1964.

In a letter to Surgeon General Richard Prindle, Pepper said: "One of the most critical and indeed urgent problems confronting our criminal justice system involves the marijuana controversy."

"It has been widely stated that this issue is a political, rather than a scientific, debate. Many have contended that it is an attempt by the government to legislate morality."

Pepper said he referred to a recent statement of Dr. Roger Egeberg, assistant secretary of health and scientific affairs, that penalties for use of three charges of murder and possession of marijuana are growing out of finance company unduly strict, and the remarks of a former food and drug administrator, James Goddard, charged with first degree murder who called the penalties unrealistic in the shooting of Bonnie McDougale, during a holdup last Nov. 29 of a finance company office in Eau Claire, Wis. Ask Them Yourself

FOR JIM BISHOP,

author of "The Day Kennedy Was Shot"

Who paid for John F. Kennedy's casket?—D.L., Lancaster, Pa.

● It and ambulance service were bought from Oneal funeral service in Dallas. Vernan Oneal, senior member of the firm, told me he sent bills to the Kennedys for 14 months, then the Government paid $3,400 for it. The Government also paid for another casket—the one in which President Kennedy was interred.

FOR TOM JONES, singer

What do you think of men's fashions today? Do you like them?—Kathy Early, Brick, N.J.

● I really don't care too much for today's fashions. They're too far out. Today's accent on style is good, and it puts excitement into dressing. But it must be done with good taste and in moderation.

FOR BESS MYERSON GRANT,

Commissioner, New York City Consumer Affairs

What is the worst unfair practice in consumer affairs you have found to date?—A. S. Kravitz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● Prime consumer difficulties arise from the sellers taking unfair advantage of the buyers' lack of expertise. Whether the seller induces the buyer to sign a blank sales contract on which an exorbitant price is later filled in, or whether the customer consumes a mixture of meat and soya bean believing it to be hamburger, the buyer will always be at the mercy of the seller. The answer: Wise up! Assert your rights!

FOR ROGER MARIS

When you hit 61 home runs in 1961, who was the pitcher who threw number 61 to you?—Rob Ridley, Casper, Wyo.

● Tracy Stallard of the Red Sox.

FOR BOB EUBANKS,

host of tv's "The Newlywed Game"

For prizes, do you choose certain gifts for each couple, or do you choose just one kind of gift for all of them?—Beverly Reynolds, Glendale, Calif.

● The grand prize is especially chosen for the winning couple. When the couples are interviewed prior to being chosen for appearance on the show, they are asked what they would like for a prize

FOR SEN. EDMUND S. MUSKIE

of Maine

Are there any prospects in the near future of a Federal crash program to clean our waterways and to save our natural resources?—Larry Leach, Owensboro, Ky.

● The Water Quality Act of 1965 is basically responsible for cleaning up our nation's waters. But more adequate funds are needed to save our water resources. Appropriations have lagged far behind, and public pressure must be brought to bear for more adequate funding.

FOR PEGGY LIPTON,

"Julie" of Mod Squad

To settle an argument, is your hair as long as it appears on the show, or is it a wig?—Joi Spadafore, Pasco, Wash.

● It's my own hair.

FOR DR. GEORGE P. CRESSMAN,

Director, U.S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D.C.

How powerful is a recorded wind of 100 miles an hour?—Joe Jille, Buri, Wash.

● A 100-mph wind is 100 times as powerful as a 10 mph breeze. Disregarding tornadoes and hurricanes, 100-mph winds occasionally occur at the earth's surface under unique circumstances. They are powerful enough to cause considerable damage, ranging from roofs being blown off to buildings collapsing. Empty railroad cars have even been blown from their tracks.

FOR BOB HOPE

Are there any plans for another road picture with that crooner, what's his name? I hope so.—L. L. Johnson, Caldwell, Idaho

● There are no Crosby-Hope movies planned for the future.

FOR ELBERT L. LITTLE, JR.,

dendrologist

Why do most autumn leaves fall to the ground face down?—Mrs. Sarah E. Warren, Elkland, Pa.

● Leaves fall to the ground with upper and lower surfaces exposed in approximately equal numbers. This ratio may be confirmed by counting a sample of leaves in a small area. However, in certain tree species with upper and lower surfaces of contrasting colors, the showy surface might seem to be much more numerous.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

Idol Golfer Arnold Palmer will be 40 on Wednesday. He was honored with a unique advance birthday present. Students in Prof. David L. Lewis' "entrepreneur in history" course at the University of Michigan cited Palmer as being one of the businessmen in whose footsteps they'd like to follow. As a result of his career, Palmer is identified with several businesses, some far removed from golf. "Name a better way to become a millionaire," said one admirer, "than by playing golf the world over and then selling the goods and services of one's trade."

Scholastic Windfall Social Security officials estimate that $490 million in benefits will be paid to 500,000 high-school, college, and other full-time students in the upcoming year. That is more money than is granted in scholarships at all American colleges ($415.5 million in private and Government grants). Who is eligible for this newest and fastest-growing benefit program? Any full-time, unmarried student, 18 through 21, who is a dependent or survivor of a parent eligible for Social Security. Check with your local office.

Cry, baby, cry

Clear Signals "Our greatest problem with our feelings comes in communication," declares Dr. Everett L. Shostrom in his book, "Man, the Manipulator." The error in communicating or sending out ideas is not asking for what we really want, hoping people will comply with our secret wish anyhow. The error in receiving ideas is pretending to ignore a message. For example, someone hurts us, and we don't say so but instead become unresponsive and crushed. "A healthy relationship," says Dr. Shostrom, "does not always have to be an agreeing relationship." Next time, say so.

Higher learning

an ordinary basketball around from the 25-foot high poles. Those who miss must climb down and retrieve it. The students become so agile that their only occupational hazard is an occasional case of splinters.

See Baby Cry For about $8 a year, London's Royal Institute for the Deaf rents to deaf parents a transistorized amplifier with an ordinary light bulb instead of a loudspeaker. Mrs. Ruth Carstairs, mother of four-month-old David, became totally deaf during a sudden illness and was worried how she could look after him properly. "Since we got this electronic baby alarm," she says, "I can go about my work in the house with my mind at ease, knowing that as soon as David cries, the lamp will light. Even if he was right next to me, I could not hear him. Now I can see him cry, even when I'm in the next room."

What Should Parents Tell

College campuses are no longer secluded retreats for the wealthy, the goldfish-swallower has given way to the social-protester—and is

By SLOAN WILSON

■ Sloan Wilson's The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit is just one of this accomplished author's many novels which have headed best-seller lists over the years. His latest book is Away from It All. He also wrote the novel A Sense of Values. He has had a voice in education since 1949, when he served on the National Citizens Committee for Public Schools until 1953. He was assistant director of the White House Conference on Education for one year.

WHEN I FIRST left home for college some 30 years ago, my father said, "Son, you now have an opportunity to forget the present and study the past as prelude to the future." A few minutes later he added, "And please don't come home with a raccoon coat and a ukulele!"

Right now I have three children, a son-in-law, and two nephews enrolled in American universities, and I can't think of anything like that to say to any of them. I feel more like giving them the advice I got when I went to war: "The important thing is to learn how to stay alive and keep a good conscience, too."

As everyone knows, college campuses are no longer secluded retreats or playgrounds. Instead, they are battlefields, where scholars must ask themselves whether they are shirking their responsibilities if they refuse to take an active part in making the great political and moral decisions of the day.

I might as well admit right now that I can't mourn this. I've talked to a lot of college students lately whom I have met while lecturing. They are a new breed, and some of them are frightening.

But I prefer them to the members of my Harvard class who made headlines by swallowing live goldfish or the young of a later day who rioted only when they tried to steal underwear from the women's dormitories. What with football rah-rah, fraternity high-jinks, and the listless studying of dull, eminently forgettable courses, I don't think the colleges of the past can be treasured as an ideal worth recapturing.

Students today are more serious, and they should be, for they have greater problems than my generation. For one thing, the Depression instilled in us the need to earn money and security. A lot of today's youngsters have been brought up prosperously unhappy. They can't see the point of working hard to get a good job and a mortgaged house in the suburbs. That's what they're trying to escape.

Present-day colleges have lots of students from the slums, both black and white. In my day, the poor seldom went to college, and we rarely heard their complaints. Our era of prosperity is in some ways harder on slum children than the Depression was. It makes their poverty unique and more hopeless.

Most of the youngsters nowadays are also far more confused and angrier about war than my generation was. When the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and when we understood what Hitler was doing to the Jews and other Europeans, my generation experienced the great joy of taking up a righteous cause that we knew we could win soon.

The war in Vietnam is, of course much harder to get enthusiastic about. Our youngsters hear some of their elders, both at home and abroad, protest that it is immoral and insane; others shout that we must win to protect the world against communism. And the history of the Vietnam war, which isn't even legally a war, is foggy and complex. But one thing is clear—any war, pushed to its ultimate conclusion, will blow up everybody. It's also clear that while the elderly argue about the war, the youngsters are forced to fight it, no matter what they believe, unless they can prove that they are conscientious objectors, a burden which the present laws make almost impossible.

Is it any wonder that the youngsters are angry and bewildered? But the great majority of them go calmly along taking the prescribed school courses, falling in love, and trying to make reasonably constructive plans for the future.

I do not think, however, that this great majority of quiet ones react the way their parents did. They couldn't, for the world has changed too much. They listen to the wild ones screaming of injustice and try to figure things out. In the quiet ones there is a constant struggle between their desire to lead productive, private lives and to make public protest against injustices.

There is not much doubt that many of the quiet, sensible students admire the wild ones. That is why the campus radicals are important nowadays far beyond their number, which is still small. The bearded, long-haired rebel screaming of the outrage of war when this country has not been attacked, poverty in the midst of prosperity, and racial prejudice in the midst of reforms is the big man on the campus these days. The football hero, fraternity president, or that quaint old-fashioned character—the man judged most likely to succeed—run poor seconds.

Our youngsters are not stupid! How could they be with us as their parents? They know that there are radicals of many kinds. Some are psychotics who at heart want to destroy everything; some are disciplined Communists. Others are simply using the great problems of the day as an excuse for stepping up the ancient struggle of the young against the old. There are also a good many genuine idealists who feel that the world is going mad and that it is the job of every sane man to work toward saving it.

The great majority of quiet students are listening carefully to the rebels, and when they are convinced that they are right on some particular cause, follow them. Youngsters today need a lot of strength to concern themselves with the great issues of the day and at the same time to work toward the high marks which good jobs and graduate schools universally require.

Students, who even in normal circumstances might have difficulty making the grades, are often bewildered and depressed by the demands made on their conscience and intelligence. But colleges emphasize the fact that they are supposed to be dealing with mature persons, not children. A large university is an especially impersonal place with few advisers who have the time to cater to a confused student and offer much encouragement. Colleges do not attempt to supervise the private lives of the youths who have come there for the sole purpose of improving their minds. What they do in their spare time is their own business.

College-Bound Students?

says this noted novelist;
this really so bad?

Today's sudden freedom can be as frightening as it is heady to the youngsters who have been kept under tight reins by schools and parents. They find all the old basic assumptions being challenged. Why is it wrong for a young couple to live together without being married? Why is it wrong to smoke pot when so many of their friends do?

It is a rare and lucky parent who hears these questions asked at home. But they are there in the eyes of our children, and in one way or another they will find the answers, with or without our help.

College today can be so overwhelming that far more students drop out than in my day, despite the fact that it is harder than ever to get a good job without a degree, and despite the vulnerability to the draft that dropping out provokes. Faced with such circumstances, fond parents can't help but be worried about more than the soaring expense when they start their sons and daughters on the great adventure of getting a higher education. What do you say when you see the children off to college? What do you say to them, and what do you say to comfort yourself when you return to your suddenly quiet home?

Of course, the important thing for us elders to remember is the extraordinary fact that the great majority of the students are somehow coping very well with all the confusion on the campus. The youngsters are working hard to try to figure out answers to the great problems of the day which they did not create, and which all too many of their parents simply try to forget.

One way to keep in touch with youth is to show them that the old as well as the young care about the war in Vietnam, and the other great problems which concern them. The generation gap should not simply be between those who care and those who don't.

If students drop out, that should not be regarded as too great a tragedy, for many of them return to college and do better than ever, after a few months of work at dead-end jobs. The youngsters of today are trying to discover new ways to live meaningful lives, new paths that lead to something better than a big bank account and a new car. We shouldn't be surprised if the bravest explorers sometimes get lost.

In my opinion, the great majority of the students are learning a lot more than my friends and I did in college, not only from their professors, but also from each other. They use the word "love" a lot, and if you watch the way they deal with each other, you can't doubt that most of them mean it. They keep saying that the most important thing is to care about people, to be involved, and I think they are groping for the truth.

I have given up trying to give advice to college students these days. I just try to offer sympathy, understanding, respect, and a little money. My simple reward is that they often talk to me.

Much of what they say is foolish, but the old should be used to forgiving that. The extraordinary thing is that so much of what they say and do is wise and good.

Tomorrow's Weather?

Ask the Famous ROYAL CRYSTAL SWAN

... tonight ...

A Magnificent Example of Crystal Art

Deluxe Hand Made Model Only 1-198

What a beautiful and delightful way to tell the weather! Set up this sparkling Royal Crystal Swan. Place it on your TV, table, shelf, mantlepiece, near a window, etc. Then be prepared for a pleasant surprise! As you watch, the ruby-red liquid creeps up or down in a strange, almost eerie sort of way. If it surges up into the graceful swan's neck, you are forewarned: stormy weather is in the offing. But when the liquid drops, be of good cheer! A beautiful, fair day beckons. Young and old are entranced by the uncanny-like actions. Soon everyone's asking:

"WHAT MAKES IT WORK?"

The truth is, this Royal Crystal Swan is really a clever Rudimentary Barometer in disguise. The shimmering ruby liquid surges up or falls in direct response to atmospheric pressures. Exactly like weather bureau barometers in Washington, San Francisco, New York, Chicago, etc.

NOW ... OUTGUESS THE WEATHERMAN!

It's such fun to be your own weatherman. Put this Royal Crystal Swan to work for you. Then see how you score against that faraway weatherman. See if you can't beat him in divining local weather conditions — within a radius of 25 miles of your home!

SO EASY TO OPERATE!

So easy to use! No complicated readings to interpret. No difficult adjustments. Yet this simple little invention really works ... it always reacts to changes in atmospheric pressure in the same manner as a $1000.00 instrument.

A MASTERPIECE OF CRYSTAL ART

Our picture gives only a faint idea of the true beauty of this statuette. Note the finely detailed body ... the long, majestic neck ... the pure, gleaming crystal! Not stamped or mass produced from cheap, brittle plastic! Each and every one is individually blown and hand shaped by a clever, deft artisan. So exquisite! So truly aristocratic! But you must see it to really appreciate it. You will be delighted to see how it adds new beauty and drama to any room!

QUIPS AND QUOTES

Little Mary, a first grader, was listening intently as her older brother talked with a couple of friends about the merits of college. The conversation turned to the average student's inability to read quickly. They exchanged helpful hints on the subject for several minutes. Finally Mary decided to give some advice of her own.

She announced gravely: "Well, I've found that you can read a lot faster if you don't stop to color the pictures." —Dan Bennett

One of the few times a man hears every word his wife says is when she's bragging about him.

—Hal Chadwick

An American couple was checking out of their French hotel, and the husband complained to the manager: "Your bill lists 'fruit, 200 francs.' We haven't had any fruit."

"The fruit was placed in your room every day. It was not the fault of the hotel that you did not eat it."

The husband replied calmly, "Very well. But I am deducting 100 francs—for kissing my wife."

"But, Monsieur, I have never kissed your wife!"

"Well, she was here. It isn't my fault if you didn't."

—John Shotwell

Quiet!

She has the tv going;

And while she's telephoning,
She guzzles pop and eats.

The host's small daughter was asked by a guest, "Do you play on the piano, dear?"

The little girl replied, "Not when Mom's around. She'd be afraid I'd fall off."

The rather haughty employer was explaining to her new maid the call box in the kitchen would register the number of the room from which she was buzzing, if she wanted the maid to come to her. The maid was still studying the box when her employer turned to leave the kitchen.

"Oh, excuse me, ma'am," the maid sang out, "but where is the buzzer I push when I want you?"

The Double Life of Meredith MacRae

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

MEREDITH MACRAE, who stars in "Petticoat Junction" as a demure country girl named Billie Jo, remembers her singer-actor father exploding in anger because, as a child, she spilled milk.

Meredith MacRae, who is anything but a demure country girl off-camera, remembers her actress-comedienne mother Sheila MacRae as being so permissive she allowed her to spend the summer at a boyfriend's house when she was only 15.

After 25 years of marriage, her parents divorced—almost simultaneously with Meredith, who married at 19 and divorced a few years later. Now she has remarried (so have her parents), and the life she lives still upsets her strict father but seemingly delights her permissive mother.

The manner of her marriages gives a clue to the real Meredith MacRae, a hybrid of her father's conservativeness and her mother's liberalism. She married her first husband, Rick Berger, now a movie executive, in a formal church wedding with 500 splendidly attired guests.

This year she married actor Greg Mullavey at "a church of all religions" off a Pacific beach with a Buddhist monk presiding and friends who came dressed—period. These friends were from a group-therapy cult which often holds nude meetings in sulphur baths. "Casual living," explains Meredith, "dissolves inhibitions and provides expression."

About her first husband, she says, "We were different personalities. Rick was an only child and conservative. I was the oldest of four children and an extrovert. We were good friends but not good mates."

About her second husband, she says, "I don't like being away from Greg. Last year I had to make 22 trips. Any time away from him is too much. That's one reason we hope some day to work together with our own production company."

Meanwhile, she hopes her own career will go beyond the "Petticoat Junction" image of her as a sweet rural lass in Hooterville. She has appeared in some bikini-beach movies and has just finished Paramount's big film, "Norwood"—in which she also wears a bikini but with some acting thrown in.

Gordon and Sheila MacRae did all they could to help Meredith in show business. "My first part was as an extra in one of Dad's films, 'By the Light of the Silvery Moon.' I was seven years old. After that I did a lot of singing with my father.

"At first, I wanted a career as a singer,

but seeing what happened to my father's career made me decide it was better to become an actress who could sing than be known as a singer who always had to prove she could act."

Meredith is delighted that her younger sister Heather appears in Broadway's rock musical "Hair," and she thinks that it is natural that the cast often appears nude. She herself is noted for the briefest of dresses (blouse and skirt) and minimal bathing suits. When I met her, though, she was dressed demurely. "Well," she said, "I have an appointment connected with 'Petticoat Junction,' so..."

How do her parents feel about the mod behavior of their two daughters?

"Dad's not happy. I didn't tell him about my divorce until I filed. I knew he'd be disappointed. He thinks Heather's stripping is unnecessary—actually she keeps her clothes on when a member of the family is in the audience. What does my mother think? She thinks it's great!"

Meredith still has some old-fashioned ideas which would please Hooterville—and Gordon MacRae. She does her own housekeeping and cooking. Running a home isn't a new experience for Meredith who, at 15, took charge of her brothers and sister when her parents went on the road as a night-club act.

The Mullaveys' life is relatively quiet. "Greg doesn't like the typical Hollywood scene. Neither do I."

That didn't sound to me like she was much different from her image as Billie Jo. There's just some Hollywood mixed in with that basic Hooterville. ♦

Teen-Age Danger— Dieting Until Death!

Anorexia nervosa, doctors call it—an aversion to food caused by psychological hang-ups so strong even hunger cannot overcome it

By CAROL AMEN

RECENTLY an 18-year-old wanting to look like her modeling idol, Twiggy, died, a 45-pound skeleton. She had dieted herself to death—a victim of malnutrition and anorexia nervosa, which is an aversion to eating.

"Anorexia" means loss of appetite; "Nervosa" is self-explanatory, but this disease is far more serious than a high-strung absence of hunger pangs. Anorexia nervosa sufferers literally cannot force themselves to eat, even when they are starving and, in some cases, craving food.

The typical anorexic is emaciated, young, surprisingly lively, probably constipated. If male, he is most likely impotent; if female, she is probably not having menstrual periods. Except for the staggering weight loss, there is nothing physically wrong—it is psychosomatic.

Anorexia nervosa occurs more often in adolescent girls and young women than it does in males of the same age group. The background usually includes extreme family focus on food, possibly obese parents, and frequently a lifelong desire to be thin. It can be triggered by fears of physical maturity, usually starting during a diet. It is a symptom of deep-seated psychiatric distress.

From actual anorexia case histories come accounts of 1) a boy who hid food in a bag held between his legs during meals. He routinely scraped butter off his bread onto the underside of his chair and put other objectionable food into the bag, which he disposed of later; 2) a girl who slipped most of her food, meal after meal, to the family dog sitting under the table while her parents bickered; 3) a girl who weighted her underclothes with a large collection of half-dollars whenever her mother put her on the scales; 4) a girl who kept a marked satin ribbon around her waist, not allowing herself to expand beyond it. "I prefer dying of hunger than becoming as big as Mama," she said.

Teen-age is a time of hypersensitivity. Often anorexia patients admit feeling desperately lonely, ugly, cut-off from others, and unwanted. They can't cope with being called "chubby."

In addition, there are general factors. Middle- and upper-class adults often fluctuate between overeating and crash diets. Confused young people, especially in families where one or both parents are obese, may determine to avoid the same mistake.

The average person can diet without too much fear of aftereffects. The unknown anorexic, however, has no guarantee that normal eating habits can be resumed after the extra poundage is gone, and the disease does not erupt during a single traumatic incident with food.

One girl, for example, felt sure that if she ate squash she would vomit, so her family agreed that she should eliminate it from her diet. Gradually, more and more foods reminded her of squash and gave her the same nausea. By the time she saw a doctor, almost all food tasted like squash.

Certain victims believe that only a specific food will not cause bad symptoms. One girl kept evaporated milk until it dried out into hard curds, which she considered a delicacy and ate exclusively.

One articulate girl told her doctor, "The fear of being fat has to this day constituted my most terrifying problem. Without a doubt, my inferiority complex has arisen from this one deep-seated fear. I won't be the same as when I was growing up—fat and insecure."

From psychiatrists' notebooks come accounts of childhood contributing factors. One mother followed her daughter to school and physically forced her to eat the remainder of an unfinished breakfast. Extremely common was the practice of using food as a bribe—"You've been a

Another anorexic's mother alternated between food orgies and starvation crash diets. The daughter had similar tendencies but overreacted. She just couldn't stop dieting, even when told that she was starving.

Food equals evil, self-indulgence, or sexuality to some. Under psychotherapy, one girl revealed that food had come to stand for sex. Because her upbringing did not permit her to date boys (though she wanted to very much), she denied herself food as a punishment for her lustful impulses. Some anorexics of this type alternate between almost total abstinence and binges, only to induce vomiting when finished.

There is no safe leeway for any home-style cures. Psychiatrists stress that best results are obtained with early and vigorous treatment. It is the doctor who must decide if the loss of appetite is truly anorexic.

Treatment is on two levels, physical and psychic. Frequent high caloric meals are sometimes prescribed, but in severe cases the anorexic is hospitalized and given tube feedings. Then immediate psychotherapy digs for causes. The doctor must reassure that there is no organic basis for the disease. With early treatment, the majority of anorexics recover.

If you suspect someone in your family of having anorexia nervosa or being a borderline case, get help fast. Never try do-it-yourself psychotherapy. Confide your fears to the family doctor. Let him decide if specialized treatment is needed. ♦

Tips on Teen Food and Diets

TEENS: Don't be afraid of food. It is an important fuel. During adolescence, large amounts of calories are burned. If you have a weight problem (over or under), consult your doctor.

A hamburger is just as nourishing for breakfast as bacon and eggs. If you like it better, why not?

Never risk fad diets. Check with your doctor before you start any diet.

PARENTS: Avoid using food as a bribe, reward, or punishment, particularly during early years.

Keep mealtimes as relaxed and tension-free as possible.

A three-year-old finicky eater does not have anorexia nervosa, but, by adolescence, he could develop it if overanxious parents turn mealtime into a nightmare. A pint-sized person actually requires little food.

Appraise your own attitude toward sex. Maintain a balanced, healthy environment as much as possible.

Just do your best. That's all anyone expects. It's usually more than enough.

Panty Pair.

Something new from Hanes.

Something with no garters. No snaps. No loops. No lumpy band of rubber clamped around your thigh. No bagging at the knees. No sagging at the ankles. And no problems with fit.

Instead, a featherlight stretch panty, accompanied by a pair of replaceable Cantece II stockings.

You simply slip on the stockings. Ease on the panty. And that's all there is to it.

An utterly smooth line from waist to toe. For a mere $5, complete.

Once upon a time, there was something called a garter...

Hanes
Sheer indulgence

You have nothing to lose but your garters.

A Breakfast Spectacular

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

■ There may be occasions when a breakfast at nine is a more desirable time to entertain a crowd than a brunch at eleven. If you enlist many silent helpers—namely, cans and packages of convenience foods along with electric appliances—you'll probably be able to prepare all of the food yourself.

Skillet Roast Beef Hash with Eggs

- 4 cans (15 oz. each) roast beef hash
- 1 cup sweet pickle relish
- ½ cup chili sauce
- 1 tablespoon horseradish

1. Mix hash with a blend of pickle relish, chili sauce, and horseradish in a large bowl.
2. Turn into a skillet and set over medium heat, mixing occasionally until thoroughly heated, about 30 min. Spread lightly and evenly to sides of skillet. Sprinkle entire surface lightly with paprika.
3. Before serving, top with fried or poached eggs. Sprinkle eggs with paprika. Surround hash with buttered toast points (see photo). Serve from skillet. 12 servings

Glazed Smoked Ham for 16

Place a 5- to 7-lb. butt half of a fully cooked smoked ham, fat side up, on rack in a shallow roasting pan; insert roast meat thermometer. Heat uncovered at 325°F. until meat thermometer registers 130°F. (allowing 18 to 24 min. per lb.). About 45 min. before end of heating period, trim and score fat surface of ham to make a diamond pattern. Spread with a glazing mixture of ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar, 2 teaspoons flour, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, and 1 tablespoon cider vinegar. Return to oven for about 45 min.

Frosted Nut Bread Ring Loaf

- 1 pkg. (13 ¼ oz.) hot roll mix
 - 1 pkg. (about 1 lb.) yellow cake mix
 - 3 eggs
 - 2 cups water
 - 1 cup pecans, coarsely chopped
- Mocha Frosting

1. Thoroughly grease a 10-in. tubed pan; set aside.
2. Empty pkg. of hot roll mix and its packet of yeast into a large bowl; mix. Add cake mix and blend thoroughly.
3. Add the eggs and water. Using an electric mixer at medium speed

- beat for two min. Stir in the nuts.
4. Turn into the greased pan. Using a spoon or spatula, gently pull batter from tube toward edge of pan.
5. Bake at 375°F. 10 min. Reduce heat to 350°F. and bake 45 min. or until a cake tester comes out clean.
6. Remove from oven to a wire rack and allow to stand about 10 min. before removing from pan to cooling rack. Cool completely and frost top. If desired, garnish with chopped candied fruit.

One 10-in. tubed bread

Mocha Frosting

Following pkg. directions, prepare about ½ the pkg. of a 13½ oz. or 14-oz. creamy white frosting mix, or vanilla butter cream frosting mix. Stir in 1 teaspoon instant coffee powder until blended. For a thinner spreading consistency, mix in 2 or 3 teaspoons of water.

Instant Breakfast Pie

A pie filling of succulent fresh pears in gelled vanilla instant breakfast is a cool, refreshing contrast to the sweet, buttery, cereal topping in this unusual pie.

- 1 baked 9-in. pie shell prepared from a pie crust mix
- 3 env. unflavored gelatin
- ½ cup water
- 3 packets (about 1 oz. each) vanilla-flavored instant breakfast
- 3 cups milk
- 2 fresh pears, quartered, pared, cored, and diced
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 1½ cups high protein ready-to-eat cereal*
- ½ cup brown sugar

1. Sprinkle gelatin over water in a saucepan, stir over low heat until gelatin is completely dissolved. Set aside to cool.
2. Empty contents of instant breakfast packets into a saucepan. Stir in the milk until blended. Mix in gelatin; stir until smooth. If gelatin tends to sheet or lump, set mixture over low heat; stir until smooth.
3. Chill in refrigerator or over ice and water, stirring occasionally if refrigerated, and frequently if over ice and water, until almost set.

4. Blend in pears and extract. Turn into baked pie shell; chill.
5. Prepare cereal topping. Put butter or margarine in a heated skillet and stir until melted and slightly browned. Remove from heat, stir in cereal and toss until coated. Add the brown sugar and continue tossing until well mixed.
6. Remove pie from refrigerator. Cover with the cereal topping. If desired, spoon whipped cream around edge of pie and tuck in small pieces of unpared pear (see photo).

One 9-in. pie

*Ready-to-eat cereals high in vitamin and iron content may be substituted for those high in protein.

Hot Bread Duo

Team apple cinnamon muffins, prepared from a mix and topped with finely chopped nuts before baking, with crescent yeast rolls, prepared from packages of refrigerated fresh dough. Before baking, brush crescents with egg white and caraway seeds.

The How-To-Do-It Plan

(Follow steps in order)

1. A day in advance, bake and store the pastry for one or more pies (and the nut bread, if necessary).
2. The morning of the breakfast, put the ham in the oven early enough (about 3 hrs. in advance of serving) to allow for thoroughly heating and glazing it.
3. If a second oven is available, pre-heat it; mix the batter and bake the tubed nut bread.
4. Reconstitute frozen orange juice concentrate or orange drink and refrigerate in pitchers. Empty cans of tomato juice or vegetable juice cocktail into a pitcher and refrigerate. Cut orange slices into quarters and lemons or limes into small wedges for garnishing juice glasses; wrap and chill.
5. Make the pie filling. Turn into the pastry shell and refrigerate.
6. Prepare the hash mixture and put it in a large skillet for heating.
7. Mix cereal topping; complete pie.
8. If using only one oven, get muffin batter and crescent roll dough ready for baking. Remove ham, reset oven control for muffins; after baking, reset for rolls.

9. Spread glaze over ham; set aside.
10. Put nut bread on a plate; frost.
11. After baking rolls, reduce oven temperature and return ham to oven; heat until glazed, 45 min.
12. While hash is heating, prepare toast points; tuck in around hash. Fry eggs for topping and additional eggs to be kept hot in an electric skillet set on table with hash.
13. Also set on the buffet table the electric toaster with an assortment of fruit-filled pop-ups.
14. Put the breakfast pie, a server, plates, and forks on the side table after removing the juice service.
15. Have freshly brewed hot coffee available throughout the morning.

Juices and Coffee Service

Set up a side table with a tray of garnished juice glasses and the pitchers of chilled juices, a shaker of seasoned salt and a bottle of Worcestershire so guests can easily serve themselves. For those who like coffee before breakfast, keep a carafe of water boiling at this table. Accompany with jars of freeze dried coffee and instant coffee powder, teaspoons, cups and saucers.

Cereals with Instant Breakfast Service

On the buffet table, place a tray of 10-oz. glasses with spoons in them for stirrers. Alongside, set a basket filled with packets of instant breakfast in assorted flavors, a large pitcher of cold milk for mixing the instant breakfast, bowls of granulated and brown sugar, a stack of cereal bowls, and a choice of ready-to-eat cereals such as those high in vitamins and iron, others high in protein, and an assortment of bran and oat flakes. Guests may blend cereals if desired before pouring over their instant breakfast.

"Easy-does-it" fare for a big breakfast buffet includes (reading clockwise from lower left), Glazed Smoked Ham, Frosted Nut Bread Ring Loaf, Instant Breakfast Pie, Coffee, Quick Caraway Crescent Rolls, Apple Cinnamon Muffins, and Skillet Roast Beef Hash with Eggs.
